OUTWITS HIS WIFE.

Gets Daughter Out of Convent.

San Mateo Banker Sends for Child While Mrs. McNamara Is Away.

Her Companion in a Cell in New York Takes Issue With Husband.

Declares Wife Has Refused to Be Responsible for His Debts.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mrs. Cora L. Perkins of Burlingame, Cal., who, with the [illegible] servant and chauffeur employed by Mrs. Margaret I. McNamara of San Mateo, wife of a retired banker, was arrested in the Hotel Knickerbocker as a fugitive from California justice, and is in a cell below the [illegible] Court, and must remain there until a writ of habeas corpus obtained today in her behalf by a lawyer, is returned to Justice Bischoff [illegible]. Fred Patterson, the chauffeur, and Patrick Walsh, an old servant, occupy near-by cells.

SUIT FOR DIVORCE.

"A few years ago Mrs. McNamara [illegible] suit for divorce, but for the sake of her daughter, Gladys, and [illegible] young sons, she consented to withdraw the suit," said Mrs. Perkins [illegible]. "At that time she continued, as she had always done, to give her husband an income, but in April of this year she published an advertisement that she would not be responsible for any debts contracted by him and she revoked the power of attorney which he held.

"She desired that her daughter, Gladys, who had been put in a convent in Belgium, should return to her, for she believed that she was dying, but her husband opposed this move, saying that it was impossible for the daughter to return until she had been graduated. So this summer Mrs. McNamara planned to go abroad to visit Gladys, then to take the daughter with her to Carlsbad.

"I was included in her plans because, since her last recent illness and final break with her husband, she has kept me with her always. My home in Burlingame is only a few miles from Mrs. McNamara's house in San Mateo, and I was with her almost every day.

TRADES AUTOMOBILE.

"In preparation for our trip, which was planned to be by auto from San Mateo to Portland, Or., Mrs. McNamara traded her old automobile with a cash bonus for a new one, valued at $3500—the same machine which, as Mr. McNamara complains to the San Francisco police, has been stolen. It was McNamara's car, paid for by her.

"We started on our trip with Mr.

[A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ELLENSBURG (Wash.) July 27.—According to C. M. Snow, a sheepman of Teanaway, who has arrived here, the peak capping Mt. Ingalls, in the Cascade range, has been split by some seismic disturbance and has been thrown into the waters of Icicle Lake, a small but deep body of water, 5000 feet above sea level. Snow declares the outline of the top of the mountain has been changed completely.

MRS. FISH GIVES FRIENDS A JOLT.

"SOCIAL PACEMAKER" SUFFERING FROM ENNUI.

Declares She and Her Husband Are Through With Newport and Expect Soon to Leave for Europe. Same Old Luncheons, Dinners and Dances Bore Society Leader.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEWPORT (R. I.) July 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish handed out a solar plexus blow today which has [illegible] the summer colony from end to end. She made a blunt speech without notes. The front porch of the Casino was her rostrum and many of the leading residents of the fashionable colony made up her audience. She declared that she and her husband are through with Newport. Here is a stenographic transcript of her utterances, which promise to go down in the social history of the resort:

RECORD OF UTTERANCE.

"I want to tell you all, dear friends, that I'm not fascinated with Newport any more. Mr. Fish and myself will leave August 17 and may go to Europe. You see it is this way with us: there are the same old luncheons, the same old dinners, the same old dances, but I cannot say the same old faces, though."

There was no handclapping. Mrs. Fish calmly gazed on a semi-circle of astonished faces. Her auditors, after the first pang of surprise, crowded around her and urged her to change her decision and remain the rest of the season. The recognized social leader was obdurate. She stuck by her edict, and Mr. Fish, who had strolled with her to the Casino at noon, approved his wife's stand.

TIRES OF SOCIAL ROUTINE.

For weeks gossip has had it that Mr. and Mrs. Fish were discontented with the social whirl here. Mrs. Fish did not attempt to keep secret that she had long ago tired of the social routine.

Among those electrified by the speech were Leila Robinson, Mrs. Herman Oelrichs, Mrs. Pembroke Jones and Mrs. Royal Phelps Carroll. There were many others whose names are conspicuous in society. The speech of Mrs. Fish, coming from one of her popularity and standing, was a rude shock. Her going will be a blow to gaiety. In all things worth while Mrs. Fish has for years been the dictator. She had come to be known as the "social pacemaker."

Roosevelt Resorts to Old Trick.

Cries "Thief" and "Fraud" Instead of Offering Proof of Scandal.

Hilles Shows Third Termer's Unscrupulous Attempts to Get Support.

Colonel's Confession of Effort to Win Votes Is Given Publicity.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, July 27.—Charles D. Hilles, formerly secretary to President Taft and now chairman of the Republican National Committee, gave out the following statement today:

"The only possible justification of the avowed efforts of the third-term party leaders to induce the Republican electors in at least six States to betray their trust and cast their votes in the electoral college for ex-President Roosevelt would be the truth of the charge that President Taft was nominated by the fraudulent seating of a sufficient number of delegates to affect the choice of the national convention.

"There is no truth whatever in that charge. Mr. Roosevelt and his associates know there is no truth in it, but they have been attempting by vociferation and reiteration to becloud the fact that they have no proof to offer. They would drown out all attempts to establish the truth by persistent cries of 'thief' and 'fraud.'

"The third-term party is the confessed sponsor for 160 'fake' contests, by which it attempted to secure fraudulent control of the national convention, and now it has the temerity to ask the American public to believe that in the remaining seventy-eight contests the right was all on its side.

ADMISSION OF FRAUD.

"Of the 238 contests which Mr. Roosevelt ordered to be brought before the National Committee, his political managers voluntarily abandoned 160 and one of his press agents announced that these contests were instituted solely for 'psychological effect' and in order that a table of delegates elected might not reveal the large majority of legitimately-elected delegates instructed for President Taft.

"This gross misrepresentation of the Republican party has attained proportions far greater than a factional quarrel. Were the charges true, it would be a national scandal. For that reason the proper authorities have caused to be prepared a complete review of all the controverted cases, a review which it is the duty of every loyal American to read. A resume of this will be published more or less fully in the newspapers of Monday morning, and copies of the complete statement will be available to all who write for them to the Republican National Committee at its headquarters in the Times building. The document furnishes all the facts in every contest.

"Why, take the State of Alabama. Mr. Roosevelt, through his political managers, asked the National Committee to unseat twenty-two Taft delegates. Twenty of the contestants were thrown out by the practically unanimous vote of the committee, and one avowed Roosevelt committeeman remarked: 'I am convinced the country will be astounded by the flimsy character of the Roosevelt contests.'

ROOSEVELT'S CONFESSION.

"There was no steam roller in operation; the committee voted in accordance with its convictions, and as it was compelled to on the evidence. Mr. Roosevelt confessed his own knowledge of the fraudulent character of his contests and testified to the justice of the committee's work, when, at Oyster Bay on the night the committee's action was taken, he showed to the representatives of the press a section of his 'confidential list' of delegates.

"The list showed that Mr. Roosevelt expected only two of his contesting delegates in Alabama to be seated, and Mr. Roosevelt added, 'We hadn't counted on any but those two.' Yet he sought to cast a cloud over the title to twenty other seats.

"'When you go seeking equity, do equity.' That is an old maxim of equity law and a just one. Mr. Roosevelt, pretending to seek equity from the Republican National Committee, sought to induce that committee to unseat at least 160 regularly elected delegates, and in their stead to seat Roosevelt delegates whose election he had admitted was fraudulent—admitted it by abandoning the cases either before the National Committee or before the time came to present them to the Committee on Credentials of the convention.

NO MERIT IN CASES.

"What would you think of a lawyer who advised his client to bring 238 suits knowing there was justice, if in any, at least in only seventy-eight? Would not such a course prejudice the most just court on earth? But that is precisely what Roosevelt's lawyers did in the case of the Republican National Committee. Why? They knew the revelation of the fraudulent character of their cases in one contest after another must prejudice the court

OLD DISPUTE OVER CHAMIZAL TRACT IS ADJUSTED.

State Department Is to Pay for Land at El Paso, Tex., Separated from Mexico by Avulsion—Property Worth Million Dollars and Occupied by Many Persons.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, July 27. — The Mexican Ambassador and the State Department today reached an agreement to settle the long-standing dispute regarding the ownership of Chamizal tract of about 550 acres, forming part of the city of El Paso, Tex., on the basis of the purchase of the land from Mexico by the United States. The tract is believed to be worth approximately $1,000,000.

PART OF CITY.

The tract of land involved has been for many years a part of the city of El Paso, about 6000 persons making their homes upon it. It was in 1895 when Mexico first submitted a claim to this tract on the basis of its separation from Mexico by avulsion or a rapid cutting off, owing to a change in the channel of the river. The boundary commission failing to agree, the matter was referred by treaty to another commission, which, on June 15, 1911, rendered an opinion in effect dividing the territory between the two countries.

This held that the land between the middle of the bed of the river Rio Grande, as it ran in 1852, and the middle of the bed of the river as it existed before the flood of 1861, was in the United States, and the title to the remainder in Mexico.

IMPOSSIBLE TO EXECUTE.

This decision brought forth a vigorous protest from the American commissioner, who held that it would be totally impossible to locate the channel of 1861, and that the award was "impossible of execution."

Mormons Show Fight and Threaten to Use Machine Guns. Women and Children Being Rushed from the Scene of Threatened Massacre.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

EL PASO, July 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Private advices received over the Mexico Northwestern wire from Madera, Chihuahua, say that the rebels are looting every store, house and ranch in the vicinity of Casas Grandes, Madera and the other American and Mormon settlements in Western Chihuahua. They are using the search for hidden arms as their excuse for searching the houses and seizing whatever they wish.

This is believed to be the long-expected break between the colonists and rebels following the demand of the rebels for $100,000 from the Pearson syndicate. Many of the Americans at Madera and Pearson are armed, and there are two machine guns in this lumber settlement. In addition the Mormons are armed and have threatened to use their rifles should the rebels attempt to loot their places.

The message said that a special train would be run to El Paso Sunday to bring out the Mormon settlers and many of the Americans who fear further violence.

All the women and children from the lumber camps are now in El Paso, having been sent out last week at the expense of the company following the rebel looting.

Large Meeting of Turbulent Element Causes Alarm in Mine Region.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHARLESTON (W. Va.) July 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] As darkness came on tonight the State militia hoped to get a little rest after spending thirty-five hours on railroad trains during the last forty-eight hours. Clouds other than those caused by night hovered over the Paint Creek and Briar River sections, where they are stationed to prevent a riot between heavily armed mine guards and miners.

MILITIA BROUGHT HOME.

The special train carrying one battalion under Maj. James I. Pratt returned to the State from the maneuvers in Pennsylvania, and unloaded at Paint Creek Junction at 9 o'clock this morning and pitched their tents at Mucklow, four miles up the creek, where Adjt.-Gen. C. D. Elliott was with one company.

Tonight one battalion under Capt. S. L. Wallar was stationed at Paint Creek Junction, the mouth of the creek, while the remainder intended to remain in camp at Mucklow.

CLASH IS SURMISED.

Details not being available, it can only be surmised that the miners and mine guards have again clashed. It is known that many armed miners have been going toward the head of the creek yesterday and today, and that there are a great many of the mine guards still in that section.

It is expected that Sheriff Smith, at whose instance the militia is held pending the issuance of a proclamation of martial law, will insist that the mine guards leave the territory since the militia is on the ground.

Should trouble be encountered tonight there is no doubt but that Gov. William E. Glasscock will order all the militia at Mt. Gretna to the riot scene. It was expected that he would issue a proclamation tonight proclaiming martial law, but this will not be done, at least before tomorrow.

MINERS HOLD MEETING.

A big meeting of miners was held at Peytona today. Addresses were made by local speakers, and reports from there tonight indicate that the situation is graver than at any time since the militia arrived. Only thirty-five men are stationed there, and they are divided into two squads about three miles apart. Militiamen are apprehensive. This was shown by one squad under Lieut. John Cork asking for more ammunition.

MIKADO IS STILL ALIVE.

No Important Change in His Condition, Though a Patriot Sacrifices Himself for Emperor.

[BY CABLE AND A. P. TO THE TIMES.]

TOKIO (Sunday) July 28.—No important change in the Emperor's condition was noted at the examination made by the physicians at 6 o'clock this morning. At that hour the Emperor's temperature was 100.4, pulse 104, respiration 32.

Vast throngs continue to gather around the palace, but reports from the sick room are meager. Among the notables who have arrived are a representative of the Emperor of Korea and Count Yi, representing the peers and gentry.

Dr. Kinnsoke Murika of the Tokio Imperial University, one of the physicians in attendance on the Emperor, said the symptoms were less acute and respiration had improved.

The body of a young man was found in the outer palace park at dawn. A letter in his pocket said that he offered his life for the Emperor. He had taken poison.

San Mateo ex-Banker Says She Taught Mrs. McNamara to Drink While He Was in Europe.

[By Federal (Wireless) Line to The Times.]

CHICAGO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 27.—[Special Dispatch.] Ex-Banker McNamara of San Mateo telegraphed the Chicago police that his wife had been unduly influenced by Mrs. Perkins, the housekeeper. He declared his belief that Mrs. Perkins had enticed his wife away after teaching her to drink. He said that while he and his daughter, Gladys, were in Europe, the housekeeper induced Mrs. McNamara to partake of liquors and that upon his return to America he had been unable to break the wife's habit.

GAYNOR RISES AT THE TAUNT.

Reminds Aldermen that One Is Accused of Graft.

They Want Chance to Inquire Into Rosenthal Case.

Mysterious Woman Is Sought by Gotham Inquisitors.

[By Federal (Wireless) Line to The Times.]

NEW YORK BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 27.—[Special Dispatch.] Marcus Aurelius was dragged into the Rosenthal murder scandal today. Marcus died in Rome a good many hundred years ago, but that doesn't matter. If Cain got up out of his grave and walked down Broadway he would be run in on his record and general principles by the New York police. Moses would have to prove an alibi. For Waldo's men in blue are mad clear through.

ALDERMEN AFTER MAYOR.

The Aldermen got after the Mayor today with a demand that they be permitted to hold an investigation of the Rosenthal case on their own account. The spokesman for the worshipful city fathers, whom nobody in Gotham takes seriously, mentioned Aurelius.

The Mayor, in reply, mentioned the fact that he had an affidavit on his desk charging one of the Aldermen with grafting $500 for a bootblack stand concession. More letters, more mud, marked another murky day's proceedings.

The police announced another arrest imminent. At the morgue reposed a body said to be one of the gun men wanted. Police Commissioner Waldo said that if Becker was on the pay roll of the gamblers they were "easy," as Becker had nothing to sell. Waldo says he took good care to divide responsibility through three squads working independently of each other.

GAMBLING GOES ON.

The honesty of the commissioner is not questioned, but the old police "scouts" smile at his infantile credulity, because gambling goes merrily on. Police detailed to suppress the gamblers open bank accounts and buy real estate, and the gamblers openly avow "seeing" the "right people" and paying regular prices to the police officers and others on a fixed scale, and plain people walk the streets in daily fear of being sandbagged or blackjacked.

WOMAN IS WANTED.

Another "mysterious woman" is wanted by all the inquisitors. She is supposed to be the helpmate of one of the suspects at large. She vanished in a dream of a gown recently purchased from a "marked down" bargain department store on Broadway, having forgotten to leave word of her destination with her landlady, the same motherly-looking person who tidies the vacant rooms of "Gib The Blood." She is Gib's girl and save among the very fanciful, there is little mystery about her. She is stout, partial to liquid refreshments and tips the scales in the neighborhood of 200 pounds. Deputy Commissioner Dougherty opines that she is off to join "Gib" at some fashionable summer resort.

SMALL COMFORT.

Beyond making the police "mad clear through," convincing the citizens of New York that this city is just about as poorly run as everybody thought it was, taking a little gilt off the glories of the Gaynor administration and making most people wish that Herman Rosenthal had kept a diary, the only result of the latest of many Manhattan police scandals is again a genuine saddening of Father Knickerbocker's children. They find little to comfort them in the tallest buildings on earth, by the busiest streets, by the most multiplied millions, the residence among them of gold Goliaths, the awe-inspiring, envy begetting, money power. What is all this when the gangster bestrides all like a Colossus of evil, when the barbarian braves on Broadway and civic power tremble at a nod from crime? New Yorkers are learning what John Boyle O'Reilly meant when he wrote:

"There is nothing sweet in the city
Save the patient lives of poor.
I long for the dear old river where I dreamed my life away!
For the dreamer lives forever, while the toilers die in a day."

UNIONISTS ARE ACTIVE.

They See in Dissensions Between Liberal and Labor Forces a Chance to Regain Power.

[BY CABLE AND A. P. TO THE TIMES.]

WOODSTOCK (Eng.) July 27.—The great rally of the unionist party, which sees in the recent differences of opinion between the liberal and labor forces and the natural loss of strength to the government as a result of home rule, disestablishment and other reform measures an opportunity of regaining power, was held in the courtyard of Blenheim palace today. Three thousand delegates representing the unionist organization and 20,000 members of the party gathered.

The Unionist Workingmen's Club, which usually supports the liberals, sent delegates here, alongside the representatives of the Primrose League, the political association of the aristocracy, and the young members of the party had an opportunity of conferring with the veterans.

Bonar Law, leader of the opposition, Sir Edward Carson, the Ulster leader, and F. F. Smith, another of the keen fighters of the party, delivered addresses, which contained lots of fire.

The meeting closed with sectional conferences to enable the organizers to collect new ideas for the general election which unionists believe cannot be long delayed.

PROFITABLE PUBLICITY.

Year in and Year Out Advertising Supremacy of "The Times" Due to Its Circulation Superiority.

A newspaper's value as an advertising medium is necessarily measured by its circulation. Circulation, however, involves the character and buying capacity of a paper's readers, and means more than mere distribution.

There is probably no other city in America in which one newspaper so completely outclasses its contemporaries in both quantity and quality of circulation as does The Times in Los Angeles. This journal is not turned to by its subscribers for momentary amusement, as is the case with many other newspapers, but it is read regularly and believingly by the rank and file of our citizenry, and is an important factor in the life of the majority of the respectable, thinking, earning, industrious and buying men and women within the radius of its circulation.

The Times covers the richest of all fields for the advertiser with less waste in its circulation than any other medium, and no advertising campaign can be conducted in Los Angeles and Southern California at the right proportion of cost to results without using its columns.

The exceptional merit of The Times' circulation enables advertisers to secure not only a large but an attentive, appreciative and responsive audience, and, as its circulation is not duplicated by any other newspaper, advertisers who desire to reach the maximum number of buying readers at a minimum cost cannot afford to ignore its pre-eminent value as a publicity medium.

The Times' tremendous popularity, and the profitableness of its columns to its advertising patrons, are attested by the fact that it regularly prints a greater volume and a greater variety of Liner and Display advertising than any other newspaper in the world.

The interesting figures that follow tell the advertising story. They show the total number of columns of advertising carried in June by the paper making the best record in the respective cities:

We All Loved Him.

PEACEFUL REST IS HIS REWARD.

FAITHFUL AND TRUSTED FRIEND PASSES BEYOND.

One of the Oldest Employees of "The Times," an Ever-Present Help in Time of Trouble, Finishes Life Task With Honor and Credit. Henry M. Hall, Man of Character.

Henry Marion Hall, 78 years old, and a trusted and faithful employee of The Times for 21 years, died of heart trouble at 9:35 o'clock last night at the family home, No. 1236 Crown Hill avenue. He had been in failing health for some time, and during the last few weeks sank rapidly.

Hall leaves a widow and two daughters, Harriet and Anna. Funeral services are to be held at the house, but arrangements have not yet been completed.

Hall was a man of sterling integrity, sound judgment and strong moral courage. He enjoyed the utmost confidence of both his employers and fellow-workmen. He was respected by all who knew him and beloved by those who associated with him.

In the days when The Times was struggling hardest against the foes of industrial freedom, Hall was prominent in the councils of the management and assisted much by his counsel and labors in the mechanical department, where he had become skilled in his trade, and as adviser and handler of men. He gained his early experience in several printing establishments throughout the country, but selected this city as the place best suiting him to finish his life's work. He held responsible positions as foreman in other cities, but in his later years, when such honors were offered him here he was content to take life easier and work with the rank and file in the composing-room for the institution he loved and with which he sympathized.

Hall was in his time also a soldier and a sailor. He served in the United States navy from 1857 to 1860, inclusive, and then four years in the Federal army through the Civil War. Although he served honorably and with credit, it was one of the peculiarities of his strong character that he scorned assistance from anyone while he could care for himself, and therefore he never applied for a pension, although entitled to it for many years.

He was born in Providence, R. I., August 14, 1834, and was a direct descendant of John Alden, to which fact he pointed with pride, not as one who borrowed luster from his ancestry, but as an indication of the staunch stock from which he came and to honor which he lived a life of strong character.

UTE INDIANS LOSE.

Their Claim against the Government Is Not Approved by the House of Representatives.

[By Federal (Wireless) Line to The Times.]

WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 27.—[Special Dispatch.] The House today refused to recognize the $3,300,000 claim of the band of Ute Indians in Western Colorado and Utah against the government. Although the claim has been adjudged valid and ordered paid by the court of claims, the majority and minority Republicans voted to disregard the appeals of the friends of the Indians. Congressmen Martin and Rucker led a fight which at one point developed into exceedingly hot language between the former and Chairman Fitzgerald of the Appropriations Committee. Martin took offense at Fitzgerald's characterization of the claim as tainted with suspicion and asserted that the chairman was placing a stigma on the decree of the judges of the court of claims and of the Secretary of War. Fitzgerald granted Martin further time for interruptions, whereupon the latter insisted on a call of the House to "obtain a quorum." After one or two vain efforts on the part of Martin to obtain the floor on a question of personal privilege, friends interfered and the wrath of the Colorado man was assuaged by the agreement of Fitzgerald to expunge from the record certain of his remarks reflecting upon Martin and the claim.

TRUCY AUBERT TO SUCCEED HUERTA.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MEXICO CITY, July 26.—Gen. Victoriano Huerta, now in command of the campaign against Orozco, soon will be replaced by Gen. Trucy Aubert, according to a report current here. Gen. Huerta is expected in Mexico City within a few days, and, it is said, he will take charge of the campaign in Morelos against the Zapatistas, either replacing or co-operating with Gen. Robles. Disorder in Morelos again is assuming alarming proportions.

Dispatches from Chihuahua say great fear is felt there for the safety of the people and especially for the 200 or more prisoners now held by Orozco should the permanent committee of Congress suspend guarantees. It is believed that even should the rebels respect the Federal prisoners now in their prison they would execute any other prisoners who might fall into their hands.

Communication by rail with Chihuahua was re-established today after being interrupted over ten days.

REBEL TROOPS ARE HURRYING NORTH.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CASAS GRANDE (State of Chihuahua, Mex.) July 27.—Two thousand rebel troops stationed here today were hurried by train to a point north of here and opposite Ojitos, near the Sonora border, where Gen. Jose de la Luz Blanco is stationed with 1500 Federal troops.

The rebels will march overland to meet the Federals, carrying with them several cannon, a rapid-firing gun and large quantities of ammunition.

Fearing that Blanco's advance is with intent to cut the Mexico Northern Railway, preparatory to the Federal advance from the south, the rebel commander has orders to prevent his reaching the railway at all hazards. The opposing forces are expected to meet late tomorrow.

News was telephoned from the Babicora ranch, owned by William Randolph Hearst, that a large Federal force was seen today approaching Madera, a point on the Mexico Northwestern Railway, south of here. The Hearst ranch is located thirty-five miles from Madera, which is still held by rebel forces. Before details could be learned from the American ranch foreman, who telephoned the news to Casas Grandes, the wire was cut.

THIRTEEN STATES IN REBELLION.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

JUAREZ (Mex.) July 27.—Thirteen States in Mexico, according to insurrecto statistics given out today, are in rebellion. "Thirty thousand men," declared Gen. Orozco, "are fighting for reform, liberty and justice in the States of Chihuahua, Sonora, Sinaloa, Coahuila, Durango, Vera Cruz, Tepic, Morelos, Guerrero, Oaxaca, Michoacan, Tabasco and Tlaxcala.

"These figures are conservative," said the rebel leader, "and do not include irresponsible and unauthorized bands in other States calling themselves rebels with no cause other than that of banditry."

Ptomaine Poisoning Among Children Is Spreading and Experts Study the Milk Situation.

[By Federal (Wireless) Line to The Times.]

CHICAGO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 27.—[Special Dispatch:] An epidemic, supposedly of ptomaine poison, among the children of Chicago, has spread, while the City Council is investigating the milk situation. The claim is made that fifteen of the latest victims drank impure milk.

The Health CCommissioner, Mayor Harrison and the doctors in the City Council are agitated over the spread of the epidemic and a mass meeting will be held in the council chambers Wednesday to bring about a discussion of the milk situation.

BREACH WIDENS IN DEMOCRACY.

Party Split on the Subject of New Battleships.

Little Navyites Beginning to Hear from Back Home.

Sulzer Hopes to Have Two Men-of-War Built.

[By Federal (Wireless) Line to The Times.]

WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 27.—[Special Dispatch.] The row among the House Democrats occasioned by the refusal of the party caucus to authorize the acceptance of a Senate amendment to the naval bill to construct two new warships reached an acute stage today when the "little navy" advocates began to hear from home.

Representative Sulzer, who is circulating a petition for another caucus, declared that the public sentiment was working to such an extent that the subsequent caucus probably will authorize two new battleships, whereas at one time, both the House and Senate would have been satisfied with one.

DEMOCRATIC SPLIT.

Mr. Sulzer, who is now an insurgent of the first water and who has been joined by more than a score of Democrats who will not abide by the caucus action, made public a few of the telegrams he has received. One of these is particularly critical of Senator Stark and Representative Fitzgerald, both of whom voted to table all motions to have the caucus rescind its former action against battleships. Another, from ex-Senator Towne of New York, declares the Democratic party will make a great blunder unless it authorizes a naval programme similar to that of recent years.

MONROE DOCTRINE.

The supremacy of the Monroe doctrine, Mr. Towne continues, cannot be maintained without an adequate navy.

"I lay no claim to prophetic vision," says Mr. Towne, "but I tremble when I contemplate the near future and note the unpreparedness of this country. I am no mentor of the Democratic party, but I am well nigh disheartened to see it face the greatest opportunity in its history with so large a proportion of its leadership apparently oblivious to patriotic duty and partisan advantage."

William D. Mann, publisher of Town Topics, wired Mr. Sulzer that any member of Congress who thrust his hands into the pork barrel while refusing two battleships, will be repudiated by his constituency. "If economy is demanded," wired Col. Mann, "hold up the pork barrel until next year."

John N. Teal, the Democratic national committeeman from Oregon, wired that the party platform demands the maintenance of the navy and that Democrats throughout the country had no sympathy for the House action.

Fremont Cole, former Speaker of the New York Assembly, sent this telegram to Mr. Sulzer:

"Keep up the fight for at least two battleships. Fitzgerald's constituents will kill him and Baltimore was wise to turn down little American Clark. Nine-tenths of the people are with you."

GOVERNOR OF SOUTH CAROLINA SCATTERS CROWD.

Long Expected Duel Between Him and His Opponent for the Office He Holds Prevented by the Chief of Police of Aiken, Where the Two Candidates Are Holding Debate.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

AIKEN (S. C.) July 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] After branding Gov. Cole Blease "the foulest of liars," Ira Jones, candidate for Governor, advanced on his opponent during the joint debate here today and most of the crowd scattered, thinking the long-predicted shooting between the men was about to begin.

Ira B. Jones, Jr., was backing up his father and several pistols were displayed.

Chief of Police Howard got between Jones and Blease and swore he would kill the first man who made a hostile movement. The Chief's attitude restored order and the would-be combatants were forced to take their seats.

Jones became enraged by the charge that while he was Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, he was only a servant of the Southern Railroad, because that corporation employed his son as counsel.

"That's the foulest lie," said Jones, "that ever passed the lips of a human being."

With Chief Howard on guard, Gov. Blease bitterly attacked Judge Jones.

"That old fellow can't make me mad," he said. "He knows he is defeated and that's what makes him lose his temper. I am not going to hit him, but on August 27 the people are going to knock him clear out of the box."

Someone asked the Governor about "Tom" Felder.

Gov. Blease replied: "You should have more respect for the ladies than to mention such subjects in their presence."

OUTWITS HIS WIFE.

McNamara's full knowledge. In fact, he sat on the porch of the McNamara villa at San Mateo and saw us off. When we arrived in Portland we heard from friends that Gladys had already returned from Belgium. Her father had sent for her without his wife's knowledge.

"We decided to come on to New York, anyway, and continue the trip abroad for the sake of Mrs. McNamara's health."

Mrs. Perkins said that she had communicated with her husband and that he was making an investigation of McNamara's charge of robbery in San Francisco. Mrs. McNamara was not taken into custody and disappeared after the arrest of her companions.

DECIDES TO HOLD THEM.

The city magistrate before whom the members of the McNamara-Perkins party appeared in court today decided to hold Mrs. Perkins, Fred H. Patterson, the McNamara chauffeur and Patrick Walsh, the valet.

Mrs. Margaret McNamara and her two children, Chester and Wilbur, who were released upon receipt of a telegram from San Francisco, have remained in seclusion since they left the Hotel Knickerbocker in a taxicab. Mrs. Perkins is indignant.

"No, it is not the miserable charge of theft," she said, "but the very idea of calling me a housekeeper. Why, I am a wealthy woman in my own right and the wife of the richest and most prominent man in San Francisco. Yes, sir; that's a fact."

FUR COAT ON.

Fred H. Patterson, the chauffeur, wore a long fur coat, despite the semi-tropical weather, when he appeared in the courtroom. Walsh, who is an elderly man and partly bald, looked the more serious of the defendants. Mrs. Perkins is about 35 and matronly. She wore a striped gray gown and a white billowy veil.

Mrs. McNamara, who is the wife of Nicholas J. McNamara, a retired banker of San Mateo, Cal., has retained John McCauley as her attorney.

Mrs. Perkins was represented by K. Henry Rosenberg. McCauley aided Mrs. McNamara in keeping her whereabouts a secret.

AN ORATION.

Rosenberg delivered quite an oration before the magistrate, who heard the application to hold the prisoners for the California authorities, pending extradition. Rosenberg said the automobile was bought from a company of San Francisco upon a check from Mrs. McNamara on her own bank. The old machine, Rosenberg asserts, was turned in as part payment on the new car, with an additional cash installment of $1000. Rosenberg declared the local police have no legal right to detain Mrs. McNamara and her companion, Mrs. Perkins. He has wired Gov. Dix, he said, asking for a hearing before any extradition papers are granted. Rosenberg demanded of the magistrate that his defendant be given an immediate examination.

MAGISTRATE'S VIEW.

"I shall do nothing of the kind," replied the magistrate. "The court holds that this is not an extradition. It is a preliminary. I shall allow a reasonable time for the proceedings against these people to be sustained. I will not throw this case out of court and flout the sister State of California by notifying her that the alleged fugitives have found asylum here. If this court takes the responsibility for dismissing this case it can answer for its responsibility to the people. No doubt there must be legal evidence in support of the case before it can go on. However, it is but justice that we preserve comity with the authorities at San Francisco. When the San Francisco police notify the local authorities that an indictment is on the way, perhaps further action can be taken. I shall not take any evidence as the case now stands."

SETS A DATE.

He set August 3 as the date for the reappearance in court of the accused. Rosenberg talked a lot about the marital troubles of the McNamaras. He said:

"There was a divorce action brought by Mrs. McNamara against her husband eight years ago. At that time Gladys, their daughter, who has just returned to San Francisco from Belgium, where she had been attending school, brought Mr. and Mrs. McNamara together again. At no time, however, have they been legally separated.

"Mrs. McNamara has 666 shares of Anglo-California bank stock valued at $2000 a share. Some time ago she voluntarily gave her husband sixty shares. My client, Mrs. Perkins, is not Mrs. McNamara's housekeeper. Her husband is wealthy. Paterson, the chauffeur, is a new man. The valet was taken along with the party to Oregon to wheel Mrs. McNamara, who is a paralytic. The whole party had planned to go abroad, having purchased tickets to Carlsbad, Germany, in Portland, Or. The automobile, larceny of which is charged by the San Francisco police, was shipped by express to New York from Portland and Mrs. Perkins had the shipping receipt in her possession when she was arrested."

RUSH TO CHICAGO FOR RECONCILIATION.

[By Federal (Wireless) Line to The Times.]

CHICAGO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 27.—[Special Dispatch.] Nicholas J. McNamara, wealthy banker of San Francisco, is rushing to Chicago tonight as fast as steam can bring him, to meet and bring about a reconciliation with his wife, Mrs. Margaret McNamara, who is the central figure in an alleged kidnaping plot which is shrouded in mystery that the police of Chicago and New York have so far been unable to unravel.

Meantime reports are current that Mrs. McNamara is coming to Chicago to meet her husband. She is expected to bring with her the two children, Chester, 10 years, and Wilbur, 12 years old. Mrs. McNamara is a paralytic and weighs more than 300 pounds. She is practically helpless with her children and servants, and was on her way to Carlsbad.

The warrants upon which the servants were arrested were based on the alleged theft of an automobile belonging to the McNamaras. Mrs. McNamara, who says she is worth $600,000 in her own right, indignantly states that the machine was her own private property.

WANT A TREATY ON DIVORCES.

Britishers Great on Deserting Hapless Wives.

Tindall Case Discloses Many Similar Instances.

May Deport ex-Skipper to Explain His Conduct.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

TACOMA (Wash.) July 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Capt. Edward Lewis Tindall, former skipper of the British steamship Inverneshire, now living in Vancouver, B. C., may be deported to Scotland to answer the charge of wife desertion, according to British Vice-Consul Lucian Agassiz. The charge is that Capt. Tindall obtained, while in Tacoma some years ago, a divorce from his wife in Scotland of which she knew nothing, and that later he returned to Scotland and lived with her.

LEARNS OF DECREE.

A year or so later she learned of the decree after Tindall had left Scotland with Miss Isabel Maxwell, a telephone operator. They were married in the United States and last year came to Tacoma. Later they removed to Vancouver, where they now reside. The Scotch authorities refuse to recognize a divorce granted here and are seeking to deport Tindall to face the charge of desertion. Tindall offers to compromise by sending his former wife $30 monthly through official channels. She has become a public charge in Glasgow.

Tindall's matrimonial career has developed a scandal as wide as the British empire, and discloses that thousands of Britishers who emigrate to America, desert their families, and obtain American divorces.

OTHER CASES.

During the year ending May 15, last, 316 wives and 832 children of emigrants applied to the Glasgow parish alone for aid. In forty-eight Scotch parishes, 3812 persons required public aid during the same year because of desertions by emigration. Tindall's case brought these facts to public notice in Scotland.

The Glasgow authorities, with Consul Agassiz and others, have started a movement to obtain a new British-American treaty providing that British emigrants seeking divorce in America must serve papers in the suit on the nearest British consul with data covering the wives' residence and other clauses. British necessity seems likely to hasten negotiations for the proposed treaty.

Deciduous Fruit Belt of California Goes Largest Week's Business in its History.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, July 27.—The week closing tonight has been a record-breaking one in the history of the deciduous fruit industry of California and of Sacramento county. The phenomenal output of the Sacramento River delta region has smashed all previous shipment records.

C. B. Bills, president of one of the fruit shipping companies, announces the week has averaged fifty-five cars per day loaded at and shipped out of Sacramento. Practically all of the fruit is pears and plums grown along the Sacramento River. Bills says the average for the week exceeds the average shipments for any previous week in the history of the California fruit business by about fifteen cars.

Five steamers carrying an average of 30,000 packages of pears and plums have come up the river daily to Sacramento from the relta region during the week. During the week [illegible] cars of fruit valued at about [illegible] were delivered in the East.

The draft was made payable to Boss & Phelps and had been indorsed a second time by C. B. [illegible]. It was sent to Seattle for collection by a Washington (D. The printing of the draft showed that the blank had been specially made, and the difference between the printing and that regularly used by the Aberdeen bank led to detection.

PORTLAND (Or.) July 27.—Under the "general nuisance statute," Mayor A. G. Rushlight, Chief of Police Slover and C. D. Beatty, Clifford Maddux, Frank Reed and B. F. The indicted persons, under the statute, are accused of "grossly injuring the person and property of another, and of injuring public morals."

The same men were indicted some time ago for attempting to bribe Collier. It had been planned to hand Collier several hundred dollars in bills, which had been photographed, to secure dismissal in the case of an officer of the police department who had been accused by a woman of demanding a bribe. Collier got wind of the matter and arranged a coup, which was followed by the indictment of the Mayor and others.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, July 27.—An official opinion from the Attorney-General that August 7 is the last day by which the full 31,000 signatures must be on file in the Secretary of State's office for initiative measures designed to be placed upon the November ballot, was received in the Secretary of State's office today.

Under this ruling, it is believed that only three of the dozen initiative measures which have been going the rounds throughout the State for signatures, will get places upon the ballot. These are the home rule in taxation measure, the racing commission law and the city and county consolidation constitutional amendment. If the required signatures for the other measures are filed later, these will get places on the 1914 ballot.

CALIFORNIAN IS GETTING HUNGRY.

SAN FERNANDO MAN COMPLAINS OF BROADWAY GRILLS.

Clamors for Steak a Foot Wide and Two Inches Thick—Declares No One Outside of Golden State Would Know a Good Meal if He Met It on Public Highway.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Somebody, for the love of Mike, dig up a steak in this town, that Fred L. Boruff of San Fernando and thereabouts, Cal., can eat without feeling he is doing an injustice to a cow who died in the old ladies' home.

Ye-ah, a steak about two inches thick and a foot wide and cooked so the blood follows the knife; that's what Mr. Boruff wants.

"I sit down in a hotel dining-room here and ask for a meal," he said today, in a voice that carried from City Hall Park only to the Battery, "and they bring me—what? Why, some weak-kneed soup with a motherless clam floating around in the middle of it; something they calls a chop, which is only a bone with paper pajamas around the end of it; some potatoes gummed up into what the bill of fare says is 'au gratin,' and five leaves of undersized lettuce with a baby tomato squatting in the middle—that's a salad.

"What I want is a real steak. If I don't get it, I'll starve to death before I get back to California."

It can be said authoritatively that the man from San Fernando who is in danger of wasting away in our midst—to say nothing of his—looks as if he might have been a hearty eater back home. He says nobody outside of California really knows what it means to eat, because nobody can get the real eats beyond the boundaries of the Golden State

WOULD WIPE OUT SENATE.

Minnesota Congressman Outlines Bill Which He Will Offer to Abolish the Upper House of Congress.

[By Federal (Wireless) Line to The Times.]

MINNEAPOLIS, July 27.—[Special Dispatch.] Congressman C. A. Lindbergh of Minnesota today outlined a resolution which he proposes to offer in the House of Representatives at Washington that provides for the abolition of the Senate and Vice-Presidency and the formation of a new Legislature.

"The only excuse for the Senate," said the Congressman, who was elected as a progressive Republican, "lay in the distrust the framers of the Constitution had in the common people. They were in no wise concerned with the problems of democracy and it was not their intention to make this anything but a representative government with the upper class for the representatives. Ror this reason they devised the scheme of a Senate. Now that we have practically assurance of the popular election of Senators, there is no need of two houses. They only get in each other's way."

WEDDING IS SCHEDULED.

Chicago Minister and Young Woman Whom He Met in California Will Be Married Tuesday.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The romance of the Rev. De Estraye Cassell Boyd and Miss Alva Mabel Haight, which began when he was a student at Leland Stanford University and she attended the University of California at Berkeley, will result Tuesday afternoon in their marriage in Chicago.

Miss Haight, who went out to the coast after she was graduated from the Gamapel Music studio in Detroit, became organist of the First Presbyterian Church in Berkeley while she attended the university. Mr. Boyd met her then.

He graduated at Stanford in the spring of 1911 and came to Chicago to take a course at the McCormick theological seminary. Miss Haight stayed behind to graduate from college two years later.

When Mr. Boyd was given his first charge by the South Park Presbyterian Church, he wrote to Miss Haight to come to Chicago. The marriage will take place at the residence of Mrs. Wilbur M. Kelso, No. 205 East avenue, Oak Park. The Rev. Dr. Edgar P. Hill, professor at McCormick, will officiate. The couple will go to the coast for their honeymoon and will be at home in Chicago after September 1.

Mr. Boyd was a member of the Phi Alpha Tau fraternity at Stanford, a member of two intercollegiate debating teams, and was elected to the Phi Beta Kappa.

Love Tale on Blotter Leads to Divorce.

Mrs. Annie S. Fuller,

Of San Francisco, who in her second suit for divorce, just filed, names Brooklyn girl as cause of family troubles.

In Divorce Court.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] George C. Fuller, amateur yachtsman and man about town, has been sued by his wife, Annie S. Fuller, for divorce because he has abandoned her for an affinity of Brooklyn, whom he had the nerve to introduce into his own household as his "second cousin" and to give her employment in his office as a stenographer. The name of the alleged affinity is Miss Frances Bennett. The wife in her complaint declares her husband left this city with the affinity and she believes he is now living with her in the City of Churches.

HUSBAND HAS MONEY.

The story recorded in this divorce complaint is peculiar. Fuller is a son of the millionaire dish manufacturer, and he always had plenty of money. Everything went well until Fuller made a trip to the East on business. He returned with Miss Bennett and installed her in his home, telling his wife that she was a relative and therefore the wife must be agreeable to her. Soon the wife found that her husband was paying more attention to the cousin than to her. So she ordered Miss Bennett to get out of the house. When the young lady refused, the wife declared she literally threw her out, and her trunks followed her to the sidewalk.

FINDS TELLTALE WRITINGS.

She asserts that her husband helped the evicted one to remove her trunks and that he accompanied the affinity to the East. Soon after he returned and proposed a reconciliation. The wife pretended to agree, and when he left his grip at home she promptly went through it. She was rewarded by finding a letter pad, the blotter of which contained "My darling sweetheart, Fra." This furnished convincing proof. A few weeks later the husband returned East and has since remained there.

CHURCH WAIVES AGREEMENT.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ST. LOUIS, July 27.—Protestants wishing to marry Catholics need no longer sign an agreement to rear the children resulting from the marriage, in the Roman Catholic faith. Neither will they be obliged to pledge themselves to refrain from interfering with the Catholic consort's performances of religious duties. An article in a local Catholic publication says the change was brought about by the repeal by Pope Pius of that portion of the decree "Ne temere" and quotes the Acta, the official organ of the Vatican. The repeal becomes effective at once. The "ne temere" was a decree issued by Pope Pius at Easter, 1908, which obliged every Protestant wishing to marry a Catholic, to sign an ante-nuptial agreement before the priest who was to perform the marriage ceremony.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NASHVILLE (Tenn.) July 27.—Senor Jose Castellon, a member of the Mexican Congress and Sovereign Grand Master of the Scottish Rite Masons of Mexico, visited Maj. James D. Richardson, Sovereign Grand Commander of the Southern jurisdiction of Scottish Rite Masons, at his home in Murfreesboro, Tenn., today. The two high Masons discussed the influence the Masonic order might employ to bring about a restoration of peace in the southern republic.

REPORTED ORGY DENIED.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WYEVILLE (Wis.) July 27.—Denial of the reported orgy of troops at Camp Douglas on the eve of the start of the war game was made today by the Federal commanders. Brig.-Gen. Hoyt, head of the Department of the Lakes, stated that his investigations showed that there had been the best of conduct by Illinois and Wisconsin National Guardsmen and Federal soldiers and that there was no basis for the reports that women had been insulted by intoxicated soldiers.

CALHOUN'S TROUBLES GROW.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CLEVELAND (O.) July 27.—The troubles of Patrick Calhoun, street railway magnate, who is in California, appear to be cumulative. Suit for $64,000 was filed against him today by the Union National Bank. This is a balance on promissory notes for $100,000 indorsed by Calhoun for the Euclid Heights Realty Company. Several days ago, Marshal Morris of Ottingham, the suburb in which Calhoun's handsome residence stands, was installed in the house on a legal process issued in conjunction with a claim for $7910.83 held by John Grant and son.

FATHER SHOT; SON ARRESTED.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ST. LOUIS, July 27.—Arthur P. Bittner, a meat dealer, while driving his automobile truck to a wholesale market early today, was shot twice in the head and is in a serious condition at a hospital. The police arrested Bittner's son, Arthur P. Bittner, Jr., near the automobile truck. The father and his son had been estranged. A revolver identified as that of young Bittner was found near the scene of the shooting.

CARNEGIE'S MONEY GOOD.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MINNEAPOLIS (Minn.) July 27.—"Andrew Carnegie's money is not tainted," is the decision the Minneapolis City Council reached today after an all night session. For a week the city has debated Mr. Carnegie's offer of $125,000 to erect branch libraries.

MEMORIAL FUND SWELLS.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NILES (O.) July 27.—Less than two hours after a six-day campaign to raise $100,000 for the McKinley birthplace memorial building had been started, $27,000 had been subscribed. J. G. Butler, Jr., inaugurated the movement at a meeting in the city park here yesterday at which 10,000 people were present.

PUBLIC EXPECTS SCANDAL.

Resignations of Waldorf Astor and Others From Consumption League Believed to Mean Trouble.

[By Atlantic Cable and by Wireless from Chicago to The Times.]

LONDON, July 27.—Something amounting to a mild scandal has been caused by the announcement that Waldorf Astor, M. P., the Earl of Derby, the Duke of Devonshire and Dr. Jane Walker, with other influential officers of the National Association for the Prevention of Consumption, have tendered their resignations in a body. The only statement made to the public is that these well-known people do not feel justified in remaining associated with an organization which has utterly failed to live up to its promises.

Astor, who is the son of William Waldorf Astor, was honorary treasurer of the association, and a generous contributor himself. Lord Derby was president, and the Duke of Devonshire vice-president. Under its high-sounding title the "national" association won considerable confidence, and it is understood that subscriptions were not lacking.

Interesting developments are expected. Waldorf Astor has been deeply interested in the movement to check the "white plague." His speeches and writings have greatly helped the broadening of knowledge as to the dangers in this deadly menace. It is felt absolutely certain that Astor, Lord Derby and the duke would have remained in office unless something came to their ears which demanded immediate and united withdrawal.

RIDICULES THE RECALL.

French Statesman Designates Idea as "Political Electrocution" to "Wreck Ministries" Weekly.

[By Atlantic Cable and by Wireless from Chicago to The Times.]

PARIS, July 27.—M. Clemenceau ridicules the proposition to adopt the recall as a part of the electoral reform programme. He describes the Kansas idea as "political electrocution at the hands of demented despots."

"The worst about republics," says Clemenceau, "is that self-governing peoples seldom learn the need for individual restraints which they seek to impose upon others. The recall would wreck ministries once a week and throttle effective legislation."

The Senate has now up for consideration the bill passed by the Chamber which seeks to give representation to minorities. Deputies are to be grouped in batches of six or eight and the constituencies permitted to vote by what is called "variegation"—otherwise splitting the various party tickets. The representation is decided by the sum totals of each party vote, and a calculation made of relative strengths upon the basis of general averages. A committee assigns the elected deputies as nearly as possible in relative proportion to the party votes cast. Thus, under the old system, a clear majority of all the votes would have given the party securing it a clean sweep of the field, under the proposed reform the number of seats won will be apportioned to the actual balance of votes. It is an intricate scheme, but it is hotly demanded by the provincial politicians and it is likely to be accepted by the Senate.

STRIFE MARKS PARTY'S BIRTH.

Third Termers Have Donnybrook Fair in Illinois.

Steam Rollers, Gags, Blind Bridles Are Employed.

County Conventions Indulge Rough-house Practices.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Steam rollers, gag-rule, plain old-fashioned bouncing and autocratic chair rulings featured the county conventions of the Bull Moose party in Illinois today. All the plain and fancy methods that have made Illinois political gatherings famous in the annals of the old parties were put into practice.

INDICATES DRAG-OUT.

The State convention next Saturday in Orchestra Hall here is sure to be a lively affair. Some of the preliminary skirmishes over the State this afternoon and tonight indicate that the State gathering may even be a knock-down and drag-out affair. Despite the pledge that was forced upon most of those who took part in the county deliberations today that they would abide by the Roosevelt-Dixon-Jones demand for a full national, State and county tickets, there will be some vigorous kickers in the Orchestra Hall meeting next Saturday.

It was the plan of the third party to make the county conventions airtight for their programme. This plan failed and indications are it will fail in like manner at the State convention. The Thirtieth and other wards in Chicago tonight kicked over the traces set by the Roosevelt-Dixon-Jones crowd. Some delegates were chosen to the State convention who will fight from the floor against the dictation of both the national and State progressive bosses, and a merry time is anticipated as a prelude to the national convention to begin in the Coliseum a week from Monday.

PUTS ON MUFFLER.

In Sangamon county, of which Springfield is the seat, a hand-picked delegation went on record for a third State ticket. To carry out its programme the Bull Moose put the gag on Attorney C. F. Mortimer, who opposed a State ticket, and ousted from the floor of the convention all but seventy-eight of the 400 present, the others refusing to subscribe to the iron-bound pledge to do the bidding of the bosses without question.

Mr. Mortimer was one of the organizers of the original Roosevelt club in Sangamon county. He at once handed in his resignation from the club. L. L. Flinn, secretary of the Roosevelt Club, did likewise, and both left the convention hall in a huff.

At Wheaton, Dupage county, only 111 voters could be found to sign the pledge. There was no indorsement of a third party State or county ticket. Only thirty-two Bull Moose followers could be mustered at Mt. Vernon in Carroll county. Six of these were defeated candidates in the recent primary.

REFUSES NOMINATION.

Frank G. Allen of Moline, who, the third party organ said would accept the nomination for Governor, announced he would not be the candidate under any circumstances.

McLean county and Douglas county indorsed the plan for a third State ticket. Seventy-five voters of Ford county, representing half the townships, indorsed the third-term candidate for President.

Kane county ran up against strong opposition to a third State ticket, the Aurora leaders being almost unanimously against it.

In Lee county a small gathering, led by defeated candidates of past years, went on record for legislative, Congressional and county third tickets, but side-stepped the State issue.

At Rockford the steam-roller was used to put through indorsements for national and State Bull Moose tickets. Resolutions condemning President Taft's nomination appeared in Rockford papers two hours before the convention was called to order.

MUST PAY FOR THEIR FOLLY.

Secretary of Oregon Rules the State Shall not Pay Expenses of Bull Me's Delegates to Chicago.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SALEM (Or.) July 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] That the delegates from Oregon to the "Bull Me's" third party convention in Chicago will not be entitled to receive payment of expenses from the State unless that party files a petition containing the names of at least five per cent. of all the electors at the last preceding election is ruled by Secretary Olcott to be the correct interpretation of the law. As the time is now too short to obtain the signatures, the ruling amounts to practical condemnation of the delegates to pay their own expenses.

The law provides that only delegates of those political parties recognized by the laws of Oregon will be paid their $200 expense money from the State. The smallest party recognized by the laws of Oregon is the party which files a petition with five per cent. of the number of electors at the preceding election as signers.

Of the delegates to national conventions already held, who have so far filed their expense statements show that the Democrats had the most costly trip of any so far. It cost Frederick V. Holman, Democratic delegate, [illegible] for his sojourn in Baltimore and several others are well up to the figure.

BANDANNA IS BANNER.

NEW PARTY BORN IN UTAH.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PROVO (Utah) July 27.—Theodore Roosevelt is the leader, the bandanna is the banner, and the bull moose is the emblem of a new party born today in Utah. Three hundred delegates to the convention representing almost every county in the State and recruited entirely from the ranks of the Republicans, expressed in resolutions their sorrow at leaving the party with which they had been so long identified because its face was "turned toward the setting sun." The Progressives decided to make a full job of it by creating a complete organization and putting tickets in the field for every office from Governor to constable. Wesley K. Walton, formerly a Republican State chairman, called the convention to order and was made chairman of the State Central Committee. W. D. Livingston, a Republican District Attorney, was temporary chairman, and William Glassman, who has been at different times Mayor and Postmaster of Ogden, presided as permanent chairman. The eight delegates chosen to represent the party at the National Progressive Convention in Chicago are well-known as Republican workers. They will be entitled to a half vote each under the call.

BULL MEES IN A SCRAP.

They Are Fighting One Another in Washington and Wearing Out Their Antlers.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SEATTLE (Wash.) July 27.—Theodore Roosevelt, in response to appeals to him to settle the difficulties between the "Progressive" factions in Washington, which recognize him as leader, today sent a telegram to H. H. Whitham, secretary of the radical Bull Moosers, who have called a State convention for next Wednesday at Tacoma, saying that he was too far away from the scene to give an opinion, and that his representative would be in Seattle next Monday.

One wing of the "Progressives," headed by United States Senator Miles Poindexter, is opposed to nominating candidates other than electors. The other, or radical, wing would put in the field candidates for every State and county office.

KANSAS POLITICS.

SUPREME COURT RULING.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

TOPEKA (Kan.) July 27.—Supporters of President Taft lost today their final opportunity to keep the names of Presidential electors who are favorable to Roosevelt's candidacy off the Republican primary ballots when the Supreme Court sustained Judge C. E. Brainine of Harvey county in dismissing the injunction suit brought by the Taft forces to prevent County Clerks from printing the names of the Roosevelt electors on the Republican ballot. The court held that the questions involved were political and the wrongs complained of were of a kind for which the courts are not authorized to grant relief. The Taft men charged that as Roosevelt was not the nominee of the Republican party, men who had pledged themselves to vote for him if chosen electors, had no right on a Republican ballot.

PINK PEARLS FROM IOWA.

Indians and Whites Get Good Money for Their Finds.

[A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MARSHALLTOWN, (Iowa.) July 27.—Little Big Bear, an Indian from the Meskawaki reservation near Tama, Iowa, sold yesterday, to a local dealer for $660 a pink pear-shaped pearl, weighing 33¾ grains. He found the pearl in the Iowa River near Iowa City. The Indian sold for $60 a round pearl found in the same place. Samuel S. Starr of Weverly sold here yesterday for $410 a 19½-grain pearl found in the Cedar River.

ASSASSINS SHOOT WOMEN.

Mother and Daughter Wounded in Their Chicago Home by Five Masked Men Who Fire Repeatedly.

[By Federal (Wireless) Line to The Times.]

CHICAGO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 27.—[Special Dispatch.] A mother—a widow—and her daughter, were dangerously wounded, the former probably fatally, early today when five masked male assassins entered their home and chased them about the house, firing repeatedly at the panic-stricken women.

The shooting occurred in the house of Mrs. Helen Baumann, No. 3880 Honore street. She is suffering from a bullet in the left shoulder and another in the right side. The daughter, Elizabeth, was wounded in the left arm.

Theories advanced by the police are: A plot to kidnapp the pretty daughter; burglary, or revenge, or some hidden reason.

Soldiers Wear Tan Shoes.

WASHINGTON, July 27.—[By A. P. Day Wire.] American soldiers will wear only tan shoes in the future and there will be only one kind of shoes instead of three. A "modified" shoe will replace these.

Flood Tide.

NINETY-TWO ASPIRANTS FILE PETITIONS IN DAY.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, July 27.—Ninety-two aspirants for Congressional, State Senate and Assembly nominations filed their papers today. The number received to date reaches 441, for which filing fees in the amount of $5130 have been turned over to the State Treasurer.

FIRST PROHIBITIONIST.

The first Prohibition party candidate filed his papers. He is Joseph Jarvis of Riverside, who seeks the nomination for the Assembly from the Seventy-seventh District. This comprises the whole of Riverside county where the Prohibitionists polled the required 3 per cent. vote at the 1910 general elections.

It is believed that, under the Attorney-General's recent opinion interpreting the primary law, the Prohibitionists will be able to have a State convention, no matter how few the number of their candidates may be, and will be enabled to select a slate of Presidential electors to be placed on the November ballots.

WOMAN DEMOCRAT RUNS.

While there have been six women Socialist candidates for the Assembly today's quota brought to light a woman who would run as a Democrat. She is Mary Ella Ridle of San Luis Obispo, who would like the nomination in the Fifty-third Assembly District.

J. Stitt Wilson, who ran for Governor on the Socialist ticket in 1910, today filed his papers as Socialist candidate for Congress from the Sixth District, Alameda county.

The filing of papers by State Senator L. W. Juilliard for the Democratic nomination for Congress from the First District makes two candidates for the Democratic nomination in that district, the other being I. M. Zumwalt of Colusa.

The candidates where papers were filed today are:

Oscar Lawler Files Application Before State Railroad Commission for an Official Permit.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, July 27.—The San Diego, Riverside and Los Angeles Railway Company, a proposed electric line, filed application here today through its attorney, Oscar Lawler, of Los Angeles, for permission from the State Railroad Commission to issue $8,000,000 worth of bonds. Construction costs are estimated at $6,000,000.

The proposed route will run through Riverside and Escondido. Franklin Helm of Los Angeles and a syndicate of capitalists, who are named as the promoters, are said to have acquired all the interests in the plan of the old Purcell syndicate.

Among the proposed extensions of the Pacific Electric Company of Los Angeles, which last year received permission to issue $100,000,000 worth of bonds for new construction and refunding, is also an electric line to San Diego.

Plan of Dissolution Formulated by Beef Trust Approved by Head of Department of Justice.

[By Federal (Wireless) Line to The Times.]

CHICAGO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 27.—[Special Dispatch.] United States District Attorney Wilkerson said today upon his arrival from Washington, that the government was ready to accept the dissolution plan of the National Packing Company.

"Everything is satisfactory," said the District Attorney. "Mr. Wickersham went over the scheme carefully, and the government approves it."

The plan in its entirety will be spread over the records of the United States District Court some time during the coming week. This will make it a public document.

When the District Attorney arrived he found a novel situation. United States Judge Landis, by the terms of the agreement, became today automatically Uncle Sam's special policeman to watch and pass on the future of the disintegrated trust.

SUGAR BILL IS PASSED.

Republican Revision Measure Adopted in Senate.

All but Two Democrats Vote in Favor of It.

Their Conduct Is Likely to Affect House Brethren.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, July 27.—A Republican sugar tariff bill, the first purely Republican revision measure of the present Congress, was adopted in the Senate today. Deserting their allies of the last two days, the Republican insurgents, by an ironclad agreement with the regulars, succeeded in passing a tariff reduction bill which they believe President Taft will sign.

A COMPROMISE.

The sugar bill was a compromise between the Lodge plan, indorsed by the Republicans, and the Bristow bill, behind which the insurgents lined up. It would cut the present sugar duty of $1.90 to $1.60; would abolish the Dutch standard, under which practically no refined sugar can be imported, and would abolish the 7½-cent "refiners' differential," an additional duty on refined sugar, which it is claimed, has accrued directly to the profit of the refiners.

"BIG POLITICS."

The Republicans played "big politics" in the third and last day's fight on tariff measures. The regulars came down from the $1.82½ duty of the Lodge bill, while the insurgents moved upward from the $1.52½ rate in the original Bristow bill. The compromise, which is only 7½ cents above the lowest figures named by the insurgents, is considered a victory for Senator Bristow, who has been th most active advocate of sugar tariff reduction on the Republican side.

DEMOCRATIC BILL.

The Democratic free sugar bill, passed by the House of Representatives, did not come to a vote in the Senate. The Bristow-Lodge amendment, was first adopted in the committee of the whole by a vote of thirty-seven to twenty-five, Senators Thornton and Foster of Louisiana, Democrats, voting with the Republicans.

The Senate Democrats then offered their substitute for the House bill, proposing a one-third reduction in the existing sugar tariff. This was defeated thirty-six to twenty-four, the Republican regulars and insurgents holding to their agreement.

The Bristow-Lodge bill finally passed the Senate with all but two Democrats voting for it. The final vote was fifty-two to three, the negative votes being cast by Senators Heyburn, Republican, and Foster and Thornton, Democrats.

DEMOCRATIC ATTITUDE.

The attitude of the Senate Democrats in finally supporting the Republican bill is expected to have influence with the Democrats of the House when the amended bill goes back there. The Senate probably will name Senators Penrose and Lodge, Republicans, and Simmons, Democrat, on the Conference Committee.

RECIPROCITY.

An attempt to attach the Canadian reciprocity repeal amendment to the bill, made by Senator McCumber, was defeated, thirty-one to twenty-four. This vote showed the purpose of the Republicans to prevent any change in the sugar bill that might mean its defeat when it goes back to the House of Representatives. The Senate bill would reduce the duty on Cuban sugar, which comes in under the reciprocity treaty, at $1.34, to about $1.20 per hundred pounds. The maximum reduction of duty on all refined sugar is three-tenths of a cent a pound. The abolition of the Dutch standard, it is understood, will make possible more foreign competition in cheap sugar, which has been shut out because they did not meet the color test.

It is estimated the sugar tariff reduction, if it becomes effective, will reduce government customs receipts about $5,500,000, while its saving in the retail sugar bill of the nation is estimated at $20,000,000.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, July 27.—Princess Kawana Koa of the royal family of Hawaii, who cancelled her booking on the Titanic just before the ill-fated liner sailed, has begun a campaign in Honolulu to raise funds for the great marble arch in Washington as women's tribute to the men who died on the Titanic. The first contribution, about $1000, has just arrived from Honnolulu, accompanied by a list of 278 women who contributed.

COMPLAINS OF COMMISSION.

TELLS COMMITTEE OF HOUSE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, July 27.—Luther M. Waller, on behalf of several southwestern "tap line" railroads, today told the House Commerce Committee that the Interstate Commerce Commission had used threats and promises to prevent litigation of its orders and had threatened criminal prosecution of railroads that proposed to appeal to the courts. Mr. Waller produced letters purporting to have been written by members of the commission to various railroads making promises of leniency if they would withhold suit.

HELPING PERU INDIANS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, July 27.—In the hope of alleviating conditions among the Peru Indians in the Putumavo rubber country, the British government has concluded to aid the extension of the Roman Catholic Church in that section. As the laws of Peru forbid the operation of missionaries of any other denomination, the British view is that only through that agency can the welfare of the natives be safeguarded.

PLANS GIGANTIC VAULT.

Secretary of Treasury Expects to Put One in New York Capable of Housing Two Billions.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, July 27.—A steel-ribbed, indestructible, five-story vault, sunk in the earth beneath the United States assay office in New York and capable of holding $2,000,000,000 in gold, is planned by Secretary MacVeagh of the Treasury Department. This project, the largest money vault in the world, requires the sanction of Congress and has already received a favorable report from the House Committee on Appropriations.

Looking into the future, Secretary MacVeagh believes the vault is a necessity for the convenience and safety of the nation's wealth. Gold is purchased by the United States government at the rate of $100,000,000 a year. This treasure, against which gold certificates are issued, is distributed the country over in the vaults of the treasury, subtreasures, mints and assay offices. Within a few years it is estimated the entire storage capacity of these buildings will have been consumed.

If authorized, the big vault will be erected under the proposed new front portion of the assay office. It will cost $322,000, while the building standing over it will cost only $225,000. Gold bullion, turned into bars, will be piled in the structure like bricks. While this storehouse could hold all the government's gold at the present time, it is not the intention to amass it in New York, but to reserve the space for future hoardings.

Representative Explains Conformity of Views Held by Roosevelt to Minority Steel Committee.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, July 27.—With the declaration that certain of Col. Roosevelt's views on the corporation problem and the Stanley steel committee's findings "singularly correspond" with those contained in the minority report of the committee, Representative Gardner of Massachusetts, Republican, read today a statement to the House.

"I know the world is censorous," Mr. Gardner declared, "and I fear it might say that the minority of the steel committee had purloined the colonel's view if I were to neglect to point out that we gave our views to the press in confidence for future publication several hours earlier than the colonel gave out his statement."

COL. ANDREWS IN LINE.

MAY BE ADJUTANT-GENERAL.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, July 27.—Col. G. Andrews, according to present plans, probably will be nominated by President Taft to succeed Brig.-Gen. William P. Hall, retired, as adjutant-general of the army. Col. Andrews has been connected with the adjutant-general's office for fourteen years and only Col. Henry O. S. Heistand outranks him there. Senator Root of New York has urged President Taft to appoint Col. Andrews and it is expected that Secretary Stimson will recommend him. He is from Rhode Island and was appointed to West Point from Arizona.

Maneuvers.

RED ABOVE THE BLUE IN MIMIC WARFARE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

HEADQUARTERS OF BRIG.-GEN. MARION P. MAUS, Gate (Wash.) July 27.—The invading Red army, under the command of Col. Kennon of the Twenty-fifth Infantry, defeated the defending Blue army, commanded by Col. George S. Young, in a hard-fought battle today, and tonight practically holds the defenders in its grip.

The decisive struggle will begin tomorrow, and if the Red army gains the victory and compels the surrender of the Blues, the State capital, Olympia, and the city of Seattle, will be at its mercy. In that event the conquerors probably will send a fleet to the sound and demand "indemnity."

BEGINS BEFORE DAYLIGHT.

The battle began before daylight. Under cover of a dense fog, Col. Kennon moved from Oakville on Black River bridge, where the Blue forces had concentrated. Batteries E and F, supported by six companies of the Twenty-first Infantry, held this strategic position.

Col. Kennon, with twenty-six companies of the Twenty-fifth Infantry and the Oregon and Idaho national guard, charged the right flank of the Blues and crumpled it. Simultaneously the Red infantry attacked the batteries at the bridge. The Blues, finding the position no longer tenable, retreated, after theoretically blowing up the bridge, and, planting their guns on a low mountain, soon were again strongly entrenched.

REDS ADVANCE STEADILY.

The Reds advanced steadily. They drove the batteries from their position, and smashed the left wing of the Blue army, which fell back on Gate, leaving a strong force at a bridge one mile north of that town. Two battalions of the Reds fought their way to the rear of the Blue army, where they went into camp this evening. They will attack in the morning. The Blues are thus almost hemmed in, and it seems likely that they will surrender in the morning, though they have sent two battalions to the rear with orders to hold the Reds in check.

In the attack on the bridge, a battalion of the Oregon national guards commanded by Maj. Scott distinguished itself, when, under a fierce "fire," the men forded Black River, the water being up to their armpits, and, gaining the bank, harassed the Blue batteries with a hot fire.

DANISH EXPLORERS GET OUT OF ICY FASTNESS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

COPENHAGEN, July 27.—Capt. Ejnar Mikkelsen, the Danish Arctic explorer, and Engineer Sversen, both of whom started in the summer of 1910 to cross Greenland, have arrived at Aalesund. Capt. Mikkelsen and Engineer Sverson formed part of an expedition which was organized in 1909 to discover the depot left by Mylius Erichsen, who, with two companions, perished in Greenland in the previous year.

On the completion of their original object the two started to cross Greenland.

The news of their return has been received by the Expedition Committee in Copenhagen.

ENDEAVOR TO FIND BODIES OF LOST MEN.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, July 27.—A private telegram from Copenhagen today announced that Capt. Ejnar Mikkelsen, leader of the Danish expedition in 1910 to recover the bodies of Mylius Erichsen and his two comrades, has been saved.

The Danish relief expedition of 1911 returned last summer and all the West Greenland ships came back without information of Capt. Mikkelsen. Hope for his safety had, heretofore, practically been abandoned.

The Alabama reported upon her return from Cape Bismarck, in 1910, that Mikkelsen, with one companion, had gone north and westward with the expectation that if he could not return one way he would proceed around the northern end of Greenland or cross it via the Peary Channel, returning to the west coast settlements.

As no news was received last year it is evident that if Mikkelsen carried out his plans he must either have wintered somewhere along the northern coast or have reached the Danish settlements after all the ships of the season had departed for Europe.

LIGHT FROM THE EAST ON THE LIVING ISSUES.

[BY FEDERAL (WIRELESS) LINE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 27.—[Special Dispatch.] The following editorial comments on topics of the hour are printed in eastern papers:

TARIFF REVISION POLICY.

TOO MUCH OF POLITICS.

[New York Times, July 27:] President Taft vetoed the first bill revising the wool tariff because it had not been based upon the report made after a thorough study of the question by the Tariff Commission, and therefore was not fit to be signed.

Now Mr. La Follette's bill, after some Democratic changes, will go to the President, it appears. It is argued that he must sign this bill, and therefore prejudice himself with all who dislike tariff revision, or must stultify himself by a second veto. There was somewhat too much of politics and too little wool in the Senate debate. In other words, a pop-gun tariff bill now is popping in politics and it is time for big guns. Big men and broad principles should take control now rather than captains of squads and economic pettifoggers. We ought to have a tariff made by some party which can be held responsible for it. A bi-partisan tariff is an abomination and an obstacle to real reform.

OLD MAIDS.

SENTIMENTS ARE CORRECT.

[New York Sun, July 27:] The answer to the silly sermon of a Colorado preacher against "Old Maids," to which someone forged the signature of Miss Helen Gould, is sound and sensible. Even if the published letter is a forgery or a literary exercise, its sentiments are correct and of a kind that needs to be expressed for the confusion of the foolish.

What liar at once and slave invented the name of "Sour Old Maids?" They are among the most charming, the most sympathetic and the wittiest of women. Watching or reading of so many domestic babblings and battlings some folks may cynically assert that perhaps these attacking unattached are also among the wisest.

ADDRESSED TO GAYNOR.

POLICE AND "HIRED" PRESS.

[New York World, July 27:] Does William Gaynor think the people of New York are fools? Does he expect them to believe that the demand for the arrest of Rosenthal's murderers is clamor, chiefly created by the hired press agents of the gamblers?

Does he expect them to believe that the demand for the destruction of the system is created by corrupt newspapers in the service of the gamblers?

Does he expect anybody to believe that the demand for justice in this case "is the third attempt of the hunted gamblers to break down the police administration?"

Does he expect anybody to believe that the attempt to solve the mystery of Rosenthal's murder, which took place a few hours before he was to appear before the grand jury, is a conspiracy between "writers and newspapers and the blacklegs whom they keep around them," aided and abetted by weak public officials? Does he believe New York is a city of idiots?

Dub Contest.

CARPENTIER TO MAKE PAPKE HUMP

THE "THUNDERBOLT" HAS A LIVE WIRE TAPPED.

Bill Won the Right to Challenge the French Marvel by Making Moreau Holler "Nough"—Some Doubt As to the Truth of Stories of Kalus' Defeat of Carpentier.

Announcement that Billy Papke and George Carpentier have been signed for a twenty-round battle at Paris, France, the latter part of July, the victor to meet Frank Klaus over the same route and in the same arena some time in August has stirred up considerable interest in the middleweight division because these two contests will have an important bearing on the title tangle in which the leading scrappers of that brigade are involved.

Eddie McGoorty, Jack Dillon, Bob Moha, Leo Houck and Buck Crouse are on the side lines watching the outcome of the bouts. They will have to be reckoned with later, and the survivors of the European tournament will find them waiting to receive him with open arms.

The improved form shown by Papke since his latest come-back campaign was inaugurated has focused the attention of ring fans on that versatile mauler from the Sucker State. Not so long ago ring experts had Papke tabbed for the junk heap. Papke first gave evidence of being on the decline while in Australia, when he lost a decision to Johnny Thompson, but he offered a plea of ill health, due to the climate not agreeing with him, as an excuse for his defeat. Billy's friends were inclined to grant him the benefit of the doubt and when he arrived home he stated that he was in grand form again and expected to have but little trouble proving his right to rank as the king of the middle-class scrappers. Even when he lost to Sailor Burke and Boba Moha in the East there were many who believed that all he required was a long rest to get the malaria germs out of his system, when he would be as good as ever.

MOREAU HIS LATEST VICTIM.

Soon after this Papke retired temporarily and for weeks he devoted himself to a careful system of building up his wasted physical powers. When he began to look his old self, Tom Jones, manager of Wolgast and former pilot for Papke, took the Thunderbolt under his wing again. He matched him with Frank Mantell, a third-rater, out on the Pacific Coast, and to the surprise of everyone Mantell was returned an easy victor. After that Papke again sank into obscurity, emerging about two months ago, when he met Billy Leitch, a former New York policeman. Leitch proved a sorry novice and Papke won easily. After this match came the offer of a date in Paris and thither Papke journeyed some weeks ago to meet Moreau, his latest victim.

Papke's victory over Moreau June 29, won him the match with Carpentier. It will be recalled that Papke made the Frenchman say "sufficient" in the fifteen round of their scheduled twenty-round contest at Paris. Twice Papke dropped Moreau in the fifteenth session and the Frenchman was barely able to last through the round. When the bell for the sixteenth rang, Moreau said he would not continue.

In signing to meet Carpentier, Papke is accepting the hardest test that he has had since he started in to retrieve his lost laurels. Carpentier has given evidence that he is a mighty dangerous proposition, and though his prestige has been somewhat dimmed by the victory that Frank Klaus scored over him, still the Frenchman gave the Pittsburgh bear a mighty hard fight and probably would have been able to go the limit had not the contest been stopped because of the actions of the Frenchman's manager.

Cabled accounts of the Klaus and Carpentier fight said that the American whipped Carpentier in every round, but F. H. Lucas, a famous ring expert of Paris, does not support this statement. In his review on the contest, published in the last issue of Boxing of London, Lucas gives Klaus credit for a victory, but at the same time Lucas maintains that Carpentier was strong and was boxing skillfully when he was disqualified because his manager entered the ring at the outset of the nineteenth round.

According to Lucas, Klaus was frequently cautioned by the referee for hitting with his elbows in clinches and for minor infractions of the Queensberry code, as the French interpret it. For these offenses Klaus was hissed continually by the volatile Frenchmen.

RIOT AT RINGSIDE.

In one instance the fight nearly ended in a riot. This occurred near the end of the sixteenth sound. The men were clinched when the bell for the end of the session sounded. Clean breaks were the rule, but in this case as Klaus freed himself he let fly a right-hand smash that caught Carpentier under the ear and he wobbled unsteadily. In an instant the place was in an uproar. Carpentier protested to the referee, the diminutive manager of the Frenchman stood outside of the ropes and howled imprecautions on the head of the barbarian American, while the spectators were on their feet, brandishing their fists at Klaus and chattering more French profanity than has been heard since the day the government attempted to stop the sale of absinthe.

Klaus saved the situation, however, by what to the Frenchmen appeared a chivalrous act. Bending his head forward, with face unprotected, Klaus said: "Strike!" To all it was apparent that Klaus was truly sorry for his unintentional foul, and when Carpentier smiled and shook Klaus's hand the honor of the French was satisfied.

For the first four rounds, according to Lucas, Carpentier led on points by a good margin. At this juncture he became overconfident and started in to rush the Pittsburgher.

"Klaus set his teeth and came in with all the fury at his command," writes Lucas. "Getting home a tremendous right to the body, he brought the French boy's head forward. Seizing his opportunity, he promptly hung a vicious hook on to the point of the jaw and dropped his man in a thoroughly dazed condition. Carpentier arose at two, but was plainly all at sea, and had to hang on till the gong, saving himself from disaster by sheer instinct. Klaus did his utmost to get free and finish matters, but failed, and, though Carpentier was still half-dazed when the sixth opened, he steadily recovered his strength and took all Klaus's furious body pounding with really astonishing gameness and imperturbability."

Carpentier had recovered his wits when the seventh round opened and for the next five sessions he put up a really brilliant defense, with Klaus doing all the aggressive work. In the twelfth belonged to Carpentier. He did hard right that split the left ear of Klaus. The fourteenth and fifteenth rounds belonged to Carpentier. He did all the leading. In the sixteenth round Carpentier's left kept shooting into the face of the American. Klaus appeared annoyed. He lowered his head and rushed at the Frenchman, but the latter met him with a right uppercut that caught Klaus under the chin and nearly lifted him off his feet. A few seconds later the men clinched and Klaus let fly the punch as they were breaking that nearly ended the fight in a riot.

BODY BLOWS HURT CARPENTIER.

In the seventeenth round Klaus planted some stiff body blows that undeniably hurt Carpentier badly, but he was game and kept pecking away at his opponent, though none of the taps seemed to bother Klaus. Both men slowed up in the eighteenth round. When the nineteenth sounded the men rushed into a clinch. Klaus strove to break loose and in doing so he used his elbows, hitting Carpentier under the chin several times. As he freed himself Klaus caught the Frenchman a fearful smash under the chin, and when he did so Descamps, the manager of Carpentier, leaped into the ring with cries of foul.

"Carpentier kept his head marvelously under the circumstances," says Lucas. "He succeeded in partially calming his frenzied manager, and even thrust him aside, pushing forward to renew operations with Klaus.

"But before Carpentier could free himself the time limit was up, and the referees had no option but to disqualify Carpentier and award the fight to Klaus."

Cupid, with a set of chin whiskers which made him look like old Father Time without his scythe, danced a merry hornpipe at the first public banquet of the newly-formed California Vegetarian Society in the Gamut Club building, last night, when Dr. Tanner, 83 years of age, of fast-cure fame, startled the assembled vegetarians by declaring that he intended getting married when he was exactly 100 years old.

The doctor, who is as young and skittish at 83 as most men are at 50 or 40, told his fellow-banqueters that he intends waiting before "popping the question" until he is sure that his judgment is ripe for the picking of a life partner. While Dr. Tanner did not state that he intended looking around for a bride who will be able to literally subsist on nothing at all for forty days and more, he impressed his hearers as being in earnest.

While Dr. Tanner was speaking, his friend of forty years, Dr. J. M. Peebles, who is a gay young blade of 90 and proud of it, encouraged his "youthful protege" and smilingly indorsed his attitude in regard to the advent of the aged and rheumatic Cupid.

The dinner was an unqualified success and the infant society, with its first public function, receives an impetus which its supporters say will soon make it a strong organization of State-wide scope and membership.

No more potent argument against meat could be advanced than the deliciously cooked and appetizing viands which composed the banquet. Beginning with ambrosial amber-colored orange nectar, and cucumber salad, the repast led gradually up to the piece de resistance, a walnut roast with tomato sauce, served with stuffed tomatoes and Duchesse potatoes. Corn custard, whole wheat and brown bread, ice cream served in cantaloupes and golden grain coffee completed the menu. The committee in charge was kept busy for an hour after the dinner giving recipes to eager inquirers.

Rev. C. C. Pierce opened the post-prandial exercises by introducing Bruce Gordon Kingsley as chairman of the meeting and organization. Chairman Kingsley told of the beginning of the society and of the immediate response to invitations and announced that the next dinner would be given during the latter part of September. It is proposed to give the dinner in a restaurant or hotel so that several hundred persons may be accommodated. Last night's affair was limited to 150 persons and it was found necessary to turn many away.

"We want to bring before the people of the entire State," he said, "the vegetarian idea and to let people know that vegetarianism involves much more than mere abstinence from meat. We are going to give dinners in which the ingredients will more than take the place of meat, not only in strength-giving qualities but in taste.

Cupid, with a set of chin whiskers which made him look like old Father Time without his scythe, danced a merry hornpipe at the first public banquet of the newly-formed California Vegetarian Society in the Sunset Club building, last night, when Dr. Tanner, 83 years of age, of fast-cure fame, startled the assembled vegetarians by declaring that he intended getting married when he was exactly 100 years old.

The doctor, who is as young and skittish at 83 as most men are at 50 or 60, told his fellow-banqueters that he intends waiting before "popping the question" until he is sure that his judgment is ripe for the picking of a life partner. While Dr. Tanner did not state that he intended looking around for a bride who will be able to literally subsist on nothing at all for forty days and more, he impressed his hearers as being in earnest.

The dinner was an unqualified success and the infant society, with its first public function, receives an impetus which its supporters say will soon make it a strong organization of State-wide scope and membership.

No more potent argument against meat could be advanced than the deliciously cooked and appetizing viands which composed the banquet. Chairman Kingsley told of the beginning of the society and of the immediate response to invitations and announced that the next dinner would be given during the latter part of September. It is proposed to give the dinner in a restaurant or hotel so that several hundred persons may be accommodated. Last night's affair was limited to 150 persons and it was found necessary to turn many away.

"We want to bring before the people of the entire State," he said, "the vegetarian idea and to let people know that vegetarianism involves much more than mere abstinence from meat. We are going to give dinners in which the ingredients will more than take the place of meat, not only in strength-giving qualities but in taste. Our first act must be to educate people to real vegetarianism and show them that it increases longevity, gives more strength and is more palatable as a diet."

Dr. J. M. Peebles, whose snow-white hair and beard are his only indications of age was the next speaker. "I have been a vegetarian in belief and in practice for more than sixty years," he said. "I am past ninety years and I am hearty and robust. The strongest man I ever knew, lived in India. He was very old when I saw him there and he impressed me tremendously with his remarkable strength of will and endurance of body. His sole diet was milk and fruit. The strongest men and the longest-lived men are those who do not eat meat.

"Meat is a poison. Sickness and disease are sinful. Eat wisely, behave yourselves and don't cultivate bad habits and when you get as old as I am you will be as well and as strong. I haven't an ailment of any kind and I expect to live many years more."

Dr. Tanner, when introduced, turned to Dr. Peebles, inquiring, "what shall I talk about?" "Tell them about the first time you saw me," was the suggestion.

"All right," said Tanner, "I recall very well that meeting. It wasn't so very long ago, about 1870 or a little later. The two things which impressed me most regarding Dr. Peebles were his venerable appearance at that time and his good sense.

"I am almost 83 years old and I feel as young as I ever did. I contemplate marriage when I am 100. I don't believe in being hasty about such things. A man should wait until his judgment is sufficiently matured so that he won't be trying to undo his matrimonial venture by a hasty trip to Reno. I want to make it plain that I am still too young, for this is leap year, and there might be a rush of proposals, but when I am 100 I am open to them."

On motion of Collis S. Hardy, a vote of thanks was given the ladies of the committee who were in charge of the dinner. The committee was composed of the following: Miss Edith White, Mrs. F. W. Clark, Mlle. Louise De Artell, Mrs. E. P. Bissell, Mrs. S. A. Knapp, Dr. Genevieve Evans.

Delightful musical features of the programme were contributed by Bruce Gordon Kingsley and Mlle. De Artell. Dr. Evans and Gladys Madison Brush contributed readings.

CHINESE IN MASS MEETING.

Five Speakers Will Ask Contributions So New Republic Won't Have to Borrow.

One of the largest open-air mass meetings ever held in Chinatown will be held this evening on Apablasa street near Alameda street, when five notable Chinese speakers will explain conditions in China, and urge the necessity for every Chinese, throughout the world, to subscribe one month's income to replenish China's treasury and save the new republic "from the humiliating terms to be imposed by the acceptance of the $300,000,000 foreign loan."

The speakers are men in whom the Chinese throughout the country impose confidence. They are Lew Yak Chow, Chinese historian and novelist; Chan Kin Sing, journalist and "progressive" leader; Lee Hong, Pong Lee and Harry S. Quan, leaders of the Chinese-American League of Justice and actively identified with a number of Chinese reform movements that originated in this city and have become national and international organizations. Each of these men will discuss a certain phase of the crisis in China, and all will urge that the Chinese people raise whatever money is needed to rehabilitate the Chinese nation and develop its resources and future possibilities.

A mass meeting was held in Chinatown last night. All of the speakers were local Chinese, and the complete details of the present situation and the dangers involved in the proposed foreign loan have not yet been explained.

The Chinese brass band will play a number of American selections, and seats will be provided near the speaker's stand for the old men and women. A number of Chinese women have signified their intention to be present and become more familiar with the questions involved.

"The Chinese of Los Angeles," said Wong Si Fee, treasurer of the Chinese-American League of Justice, "expects to raise at least $50,000, and if we can induce the Chinese in other cities to aid this great movement, it should not be necessary for China to borrow any large amount. We have sent out many appeals, and the Chinese in San Francisco, Bakersfield, San Diego, Fresno, San Bernardino, El Paso, Chicago, Seattle and New York have responded. The movement also has been begun in South America and in the Hawaiian Islands. If the plan is successful, as we believe it will be, the Chinese of this city will have the credit of having originated it. It will give us a standing with the new republic that will prove of great advantage in the establishment of the Los Angeles-Hongkong steamship line."

Herrin Resigns.

SHOUP FOR PRESIDENT OF PACIFIC ELECTRIC.

PAUL SHOUP, now vice-president and managing director of the Pacific Electric will, according to advices received from San Francisco last night, become president of the road August 1. Shoup is to take the place which will become vacant on that date following the resignation of W. F. Herrin, announced yesterday.

The resignation of Herrin comes as a direct result of the policy for local management which was originated a year ago by the Harriman lines. At that time six presidents of various properties were named, Epes Randolph becoming head of the Arizona lines, William Sproule of the Southern Pacific, and W. F. Herrin of the Pacific Electric.

A month ago the legal department of the Southern Pacific properties was reorganized under the direction of Herrin, and as a result Herrin found it necessary to spend more and more time in legal matters, which took him in a large measure to [illegible] the executive field. Shoup is credited with having more than made good in Southern California in the past year, and as a result [illegible] is to be named president of the properties.

Aside from the Pacific Electric properties in Southern California, Shoup retains his position as the head of the properties in the San Joaquin Valley, as well as of the San Jose and Peninsular lines.

Another thing making the appointment of Shoup necessary is found in the increase in mileage that construction in Southern California is bringing forth, and the need for local control.

Aside from the terminal questions in Los Angeles, which are now awaiting favorable action on the part of the charter tinkers, the Pacific Electric has under construction lines to San Bernardino and Riverside, as well as to Pomona. Besides, there is a line under construction from Colton to Riverside, a line out Lincoln avenue in Pasadena, and the lines in the San Fernando Valley.

Shoup will complete the plans already outlined for the doubling of the present 1000 miles of trackage, and as soon as the charter is made ready and work can be begun, he has stated that he will build the long-delayed tunnel and subway to the beaches.

It is announced in San Francisco that the vacancy made by Shoup's promotion will not be filled at the present time.

Brilliant Career of Man Whose Greatest Joy Was to Reproduce California's Paradise on Canvas Ends on Bed of Suffering in Tent. Prof. Von Keith Is Dead.

After having suffered for months on a sick bed in a little tent pitched on the grounds of his home at No. 518 North Coronado street, Prof. J. H. von Keith, well-known painter of California landscapes, is dead.

The painter was afflicted for several years from cancer and attending diseases. The pain that tortured him was so great during the last few months of his life that he was unconscious for a great part of the time. He was refused admission to several hospitals and had to be cared for by his wife and nurses.

Von Keith died Friday morning at 11 o'clock. Arrangements have been made to hold his funeral at the Dexter Sampson undertaking parlors, No. 1132 South Flower street, on Monday at 9:30 a.m.

Since 1882 the painter has lived in Los Angeles, where he gained an enviable reputation painting the beautiful mountain scenery, the fruits and the flowers of Southern California. He was born in Cambridge, Mass., in 1835, just across the street from the Harvard campus. He graduated with honors from Harvard. Then he decided to follow art and went to Germany, where he studied painting under well-known masters.

While in Germany he married his second wife, Charlotte Freise of Hamburg. This was in 1876. He had been married before to a Boston girl and by his first wife had two children, one of whom is Dr. Eva Green of Boston, and the other Edward von Keith of Haywards, this State. By his second wife he had one child, Mrs. George A. Ralphs of No. 1050 Arapahoe street.

Von Keith made and lost several fortunes. Like many artists, he was a poor business man, and lost many thousands of dollars in mining investments and ventures of like nature. He was well educated and widely traveled, as he had lived in France, England, Scotland, Ireland and other countries before coming to California. He came of a distinguished family, his great grandfather having served as a field marshal under Frederick the Great when that mighty Emperor was moulding his domains.

"I LIVED IN DIXON."

That Was All the Password Necessary to Enjoy a Typical Illinois Good Time at Sycamore Park.

Dixon, Ill., must have been a replica of the original "Lonesome Town" yesterday, for from all appearances pretty much the entire population of that city gathered about the picnic tables at Sycamore Park and took part either as spectators or participants in the programme arranged by Carl A. Mueller and other committeemen and women in celebration of the third annual picnic of the Dixon (Ill.) Association.

The passwords which were "open sesame" to the sylvan delights of the grove are "Lived in Dixon." Two hundred old home folks were present and they had such a good time that the Executive Committee was instructed to arrange for a midwinter meeting. This committee is composed of J. W. Howell, Mrs. E. Koch, F. L. Morris, Mrs. H. Kimmell, Charles R. Winders.

Other officials selected for the next year at the business session of the association are: President, G. E. Krimbill; vice-president, Judd T. Potter; treasurer, W. B. Johnson; general secretary, B. O. Boothby; corresponding secretary, H. H. Crabtree; recording secretary, E. H. Moore; lunch chairman, Mrs. D. S. Lafferty.

Mrs. C. H. Sarwine, Mrs. D. A. R. King and other members took part in the programme, and several short addresses paying homage to the old home and pledging allegiance to the new were made. "Dixon on the Rock," to the tune of "Maryland, My Maryland," composed by George E. Krinbill, was sung effectively, and D. S. Lafferty, the "officer of the day," developed into a regular "village cut-up." Several prominent former Dixonians were taken before a kangaroo court to be tried and fined.

The racing programme was productive of considerable excitement and a lot of fun. Those who came "inside the money" are Walter Palmer, Gale Hawkins, Ruth Kimmell, Myrtle Ayren, Eddie Morris, Eudora Tomey, Dora Morris, Alice Berger, Mrs. R. Palmer, Mrs. B. Boothby, H. A. Sarwine, J. Reister, H. Palmer.

TAX RATE TO BE INCREASED.

Santa Monica Citizens Will Have to Pay for the Progress Made During Past Year.

SANTA MONICA, July 26.—Though the total valuation of property here will be at least $1,600,000 higher this year than in 1911, there will be an increase in the city tax rate, say city officials, who have almost completed the assessment rolls.

Last year the total amount of taxable property was, in round numbers, $9,100,000. The vast increase in the number of buildings erected, together with the fact that a higher class of dwellings and business houses were erected during the past year than ever before, is accountable for this increase.

NEWS BRIEFS.

The Santa Monica Bay Chamber of Commerce adopted resolutions last evening indorsing the proposed issue of $150,000 school bonds. A prominent Los Angeles engineer was engaged by the Chamber to survey the Santa Monica Bay country with a view to ascertaining just the amount of water which can be procured, and to estimate the probable cost of a municipal system to supply the whole bay district.

Charles Hull and J. W. King were arrested on the charge of gambling in a room in the rear of the Hotel Decatur last night. The complaint against the men was attested to by J. R. Wilson. Their trial was set for Wednesday, July 31.

W. J. Stadelman of the Santa Monica Bay Realty Company has purchased the block bounded by Eighth and Ninth streets and Nevada and California avenues, known as the old polo grounds, and will subdivide it. The piece contains approximately twenty-eight lots, and is an excellent residence locality.

INVADE REDONDO BEACH.

Three Hundred of Jacoby Bros.' Employees Spend Gladsome Day by the Sad Sea Waves.

REDONDO BEACH, July 27.—The beach was invaded today by the 300 employees of Jacoby's store, who for the time forgot special sales, the latest styles in hats and suits, and even the difficult shopper who is "only looking and not buying today." Proprietors, heads of departments, wrappers and cash girls and boys romped on the beach, bathed in the ocean or danced in the pavilion until a late hour tonight.

Immediately upon their arrival here at 2 o'clock the party was served with luncheon on the porch of the Casino by the Casino waiters. The Jacoby brothers gave the luncheon to the picnickers. When this important part of the picnic was concluded a programme of sports was held. A number of the races were run by four charming girls from the store, in stunning bathing suits, and none of the events seemed of much interest unless these fair contestants took part. The girls were Miss Lydia Anderson, who recently won a prize of $200 in a bathing-suit contest at Venice; Miss Ruth Allen, Miss Bleathe Lampman and Miss Edna Goldsmith.

These girls took part in a three-legged race, in which Miss Ruth Allen and Miss Lydia Anderson were the winners. They also took part in the egg-and-spoon race.

The tug-of-war on the beach threatened to be the cause of an everlasting feud between a number of girls, as both claimed the decision until it was finally decided as a draw by the judge in self-defense. The captains of the sides were Miss Eva Fanaron and Miss Margie Gowan, and ten girls were on each side.

The winners of the other races were: The 50-yard dash for girls, Alice Levi; 50-yard dash for boys, Roy Scofield; egg race, Miss Ethel Kalschtein.

Ben H. Isaacs, an employee of the store, gave a clever exhibition with the diablo.

Throughout the day, W. H. Blake, "the merchandise man" of the store, as manager of the picnic, was around looking after the pleasure of the picnickers. Messrs. Leo, Walter, Harry and Grover Jacoby, the owners of the store, were present and watched with pleased expression the merrymaking of their employees or joined with them in their games and amusements.

DETECTIVE IS ARRESTED.

Sixteen Thousand Dollars' Worth of Jewels Found in Home of Man Who Worked on Case.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN DIEGO, July 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Although thousands of dollars worth of jewels stolen in the Grant Hotel robberies probably never will be restored to their rightful owners, information obtained through the efforts of Detective W. H. Berlin and Mrs. D. C. Collier, assisted by San Francisco and Oakland police, promises to clear up the mystery of the thefts and send some of the guilty persons to prison.

Mrs. Collier and Detective Berlin came home tonight from the northern cities, where they sifted thoroughly every clew that developed and the first result after their arrival here was the arrest of Detective B. B. Rose, who was chief operative for J. W. Warren, the missing detective, in whose safe a part of the stolen jewels was found. Rose is in jail tonight and will be taken to Oakland to answer a charge of having stolen property in his possession.

When Rose's home was searched, $16,000 worth of stolen jewels were found, and most of these with $14,000 worth were seized in the search of Warren's safe are in the custody of the County Treasurer awaiting claimants. All the other jewels stolen from Grant Hotel guests have been reset by this time, in the opinion of Detective Berlin, and there is little hope of recovering them. Among them was a valuable diamond set Eastern Star pin belonging to Mrs. Collier.

TIGERS GET BAD LACING.

Roy Hitt Is Hammered by Oakland Tribe.

Hogan's Men Unable to Rally in Pinches.

Burrell and Brashear Have Off Day in Field.

[By Federal (Wireless) Line to The Times.]

SAN FRANCISCO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 27.—[Special Dispatch.] Vernon took a good and thorough lacing this afternoon, not one of those half-hearted, go-as-you-please affairs, but a regular 10 to 5 walloping that cut deep into the hides of Happy Hogan and stung him to the quick—that is if he has any quick left.

The sound of the bat against the ball was heard all the way from the first till the ninth inning. The crowd, or at least three-fourths of it, were pulling for the men from the south.

Hogan had a chance to seal up one game in the can with some other pitcher save Hitt on the hill. The fans yelled for Hogan to give his big left-hander a ride in the wheelbarrow but Hogan would not listen to any outside suggestions.

The first inning put Oakland a pair of tallies on its way. Patterson waited till Hitt pitched four wide ones. The hit and run signal was flashed and Leard singled to second. Patterson raced around to third and Leard pulled up at second while they were trying to nail Patterson at third. Zacher planted a long-side healthy bingle to left and they both trotted over the pan. The third proved disastrous for Hitt. Leard singled to third and advanced on a wild pitch. Zacher drew a ticket and Hoffman beat out a bunt, leaving a full house, with nobody down. The fans saw visions of the finish of the Villagers right there and they were not mistaken in their deductions, either. Hetling stepped right into a two-sacker down the first base line, chasing Leard and Zacher in ahead of him.

Frick filed to Burrell and Sharpe went the route on an infield out, but while Brashear and Hosp were getting rid of the Oakland boss, in came Hoffman with the third tally. Rohrer unloaded a two-cushion swipe to left and Hetling came right through. Killilay slipped one over in the form of a Texas leaguer into right garden. Rohrer scored on this and the fifth one had tallied.

TIGERS RALLY.

The Villagers showed real fighting spirit in the fourth and they earned the sympathy of everybody who had a drop of old sporting blood coursing through their veins. They came on with one of those great rushes which we often read about but seldom witness. It was a feather in the cap of every Tiger who lent a helping hand.

The next round found the Tigers right in the middle of another rally. It was rather a half-hearted affair, however, and produced a single run the last one that Vernon registered. Hitt singled against the right field fence, advancing on Kane's out, and completed his trip on Hosp's drive to right. That settled Vernon. The old speed was exhausted and, try as they might, Happy was unable to spur his Tigers on to greater deeds.

They had a chance several times, for the Commuters seemed to be weakening all the time. Even in the field Vernon began to falter right after the two rallying periods.

Both Burrell and Brashear fought the ball all over the lot in the Oakland half of the fifth and as a result the Commuters pinned on a tally that never should have been allowed had the Villagers done the right thing.

Despite the fact that the Villagers made two hits right off the reel, in the first period, they could not coax a tally over the plate. This showed that they had expended all their energy and all their speed in those early rallies. They were trying hard all the time, but once Killilay got a good line on them he managed to steer his team along very nicely and without much danger. Oakland deserved to win, the victory therefore being a square one. The score:

JOHNSON-JEANETTE FIGHT IN SIGHT

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, July 27.—"Billy" Gibson, matchmaker for the Garden Athletic Club of New York, today offered Jack Johnson $25,000 to fight Joe Jeannette ten rounds in Madison Square Garden on Labor Day.

Johnson held out for $30,000, but Gibson pointed out to him that certain per cent. privileges would be given out which probably would yield more than this amount for the champion, and tonight it seems probable that the match will be closed.

Gibson said the boxing commission, which, at one time, barred Johnson from fighting in New York had decided to let down the bars.

SENATORS MURDER BEAVERS' HEAVERS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND, July 27.—Sacramento's batsmen fusilladed Portland with an effectiveness today that was almost awe-inspiring. The second inning saw six hits, good for as many runs, and the fifth four hits and four runs. Not content with this, Sacramento sandwiched in a hit in the third that counted two runs.

Schwenck was hit almost as often as the three local pitchers combined, but the hits were poorly timed and generally ineffective. Score:

CRIMINAL'S CHANCE SLIM.

Secret Process for Developing Finger Prints Tried Out Successfully in Chicago Case.

[By Federal (Wireless) Line to The Times.]

CHICAGO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 27.—[Special Dispatch.] Capt. Michael P. Evans and his son, William M. Evans, of the Bureau of Identification, have perfected a process by which they develop invisible finger prints. The discovery, put to test, proved so effective that the experts say it will surely lead to the conviction of a man who otherwise probably never would have been arrested.

The discovery consists of a chemical solution that is kept secret. This is the way it proved effective:

Miss Elizabeth Grothe was murdered three weeks ago in Spokane, Wash., and, when the police asked the Chicago department to find a former suitor of the slain girl, who had disappeared mysteriously after the crime, detectives found a time table in the room where the young man roomed here.

The new solution was sprayed on the pages of the booklet. Gradually green marks began to develop, and they proved to be the finger prints—bloodstained. This was three days after the murder.

Another significant fact was recorded: A streak made by a finger soon appeared. At the end of it was a clearly-defined finger print. It pointed straight to a small village in Ohio—Arcadia.

No time was lost. Detectives went to Arcadia. Meantime the bottle of solution was carefully locked in a safe. Capt. Evans and his son waited.

The next day the telephone rang. "We've got him," a voice said. "He was in Arcadia." The detectives—they were from Spokane—took the prisoner back for trial.

Into the Night.

BIG BALLOONS MAKE GETAWAY.

Trial Race for Bennett Cup Starts at Kansas City.

Bridal Party in Pilot Have Narrow Escape.

Officials Refuse to Allow Assman to Ascend.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

KANSAS CITY (Mo.) July 27.—Seven huge gas balloons, manned by the premier pilots of America, ascended from an aviation field here late today in a race to determine which three of the number shall journey to Stuttgart, Germany, this fall to compete with foreign sportsmen in an effort to regain for America the James Gordon Bennett trophy, captured last year by a German balloon in the international race.

The pilot, Kansas City III (non-contestant,) carrying Dr. Milo E. Hartman and Miss Violet Davis of Kansas City on a honeymoon trip, preceded the seven bags aloft to show the way for the contestants. The couple were married just before the race began.

The balloon St. Louis IV, most feared by the other pilots, did not arise from the aviation field. Instead, tonight it lies flat on the ground disabled because, from a score of small holes in the bag, the gas had peeped out and caused A. B. Lambert, the official starter, to declare it out of the race. William Assman of St. Louis, pilot of the unfortunate balloon, was heartbroken. Assman had been ill and was unable to reach Kansas City until this morning, but he had intended to make the flight.

WOULD TAKE CHANCE.

"Captain Berry of the Million Population Club," said Assman tonight, "was given a contract to repair the balloon St. Louis IV several days ago. I was not here to inspect the balloon and it was not until we began inflating today that the leaks were discovered. We tried to patch them, but the gas pressure was so strong that the patches would not stick. However, I believe if the official starter had allowed us to go up we would have shown them all a race."

When Starter Lambert ruled that it would be unsafe for the bag to go aloft and told Assman of his decision the St. Louis man pleaded:

"Let me go. If there is an accident I'll take all the blame. I want to qualify for the international so I can win back for America the James Gordon Bennett cup."

Lambert was firm, however.

"The Aero Club," said he, "could not tolerate the slightest excuse for an accident. The holes in the St. Louis IV were so large that the bag could not have remained up over night."

The weather was cool and a southeast wind blew fifteen miles an hour, carrying the bags swiftly to the northwest.

Going Some.

HOW THE $8500 BOOKLOVERS' CONTEST PICTURES ARE MADE.

Read This and Learn Better How to Solve Those 77 Golden Pictures.

Today picture No. 6 of The Times' $8500 Booklovers' Contest appears. Each picture represents the title of a book, and to those most successful in solving the pictures the valuable awards will be given free—without any strings attached.

The unique contest has aroused tremendous interest, and hundreds of letters congratulating The Times have been received.

And the thing contestants are most curious about is this: Who selects the 77 book titles that the 77 pictures are drawn to represent, how are they selected, and how are the pictures drawn?

The Times is going to explain that fully and frankly, for this newspaper wants the contestants to understand all there is to know about this remarkable contest. It was explained once in the preliminary announcement of the contest, but it will do no harm to tell it again.

Three members of The Times staff, one of whom is The Times staff member who has been appointed Booklovers' Contest Editor, have been given the responsible duty of selecting the 77 titles that the 77 contest pictures represent.

Each of these three men selects about one-quarter of the 77 titles, and the publisher himself attends to the selection of the other quarter.

The titles to be represented by pictures are all selected from an official list of titles—called the contest catalogue—which The Times has compiled. The catalogue contains about 4500 book titles.

The publisher of The Times took one of these catalogues and tore it into three parts.

"I want each of you," he said to the three men, "to select one-quarter of the 77 titles. Select titles that lend themselves to being fully and clearly represented by pictures drawn expressly to represent them. Each of you has a different section of the catalogue, so none can select a title that another selects. You are to hand [illegible] list of titles to me and I will [illegible] them in an envelope and keep [illegible] You are on your honor not to communicate to each other, or to anyone else, what are the titles you select."

So each of the three men doesn't know what titles the other two have selected. Nor does he care, for these three men are tried and true men of proven integrity who hold the good name of The Times sacred.

And the publisher, to make assurance doubly sure, himself attends to the selection of the final one-quarter of the 77 titles.

Each of the men selects his list of titles, numbers them properly, and turns them in to be placed in a sealed envelope. But on a separate piece of paper each man writes a description of the picture he wishes drawn to represent each title. The description is given the same number as the title.

The numbered descriptions are given to a member of The Times art staff, and he draws the pictures according to the directions given. EACH PICTURE MUST FIT ITS TITLE LIKE A GLOVE FITS THE HAND, so in nearly every case the artist is required to make some changes in the picture so that it answers in every respect to the title it represents. [illegible] the descriptions are so [illegible] worded that the artist cannot get an idea, from the description, of the book title he is representing in the picture he draws. He simply draws blindly, according to the description, and he is required to change the picture until it fits the title clearly and squarely.

The list of correct titles is kept in the publisher's safe until all the titles have been selected and the pictures drawn to represent them. Then the complete list is removed to the vault of a bank, and not brought out until all the sets have been sent in.

Now solve today's picture, Mr., Mrs., or Miss contestant. You know how it was made.

SIX BIG FELLOWS WANT TO BATTLE JACK JOHNSON.

THE result of the second Jack Johnson-Jim Flynn bout proves that the big black fellow is going back some. He did not take Flynn seriously and neglected to get himself in first-class condition. He was, of course, too good for the Pueblo fireman, who was never in Johnson's class, and the champion had all the best of the milling, and had Flynn pretty well battered up when the police stopped the contest owing to the foul tactics of Flynn. But the important point is the fact that while Johnson was much bigger in every way and supposed to be much stronger, he showed that under the rough work of the white man he was not in as good shape as he had been in former fights, and that slowly, but surely, time and easy living were sapping his strength and power of endurance. Had Flynn been twenty or thirty pounds heavier than the black man a different tale might be told today. While Johnson is a much better boxer than Al Palzer or Luther McCarthy, either of these men would be a tougher proposition in the ring than the man he met on July 4, under the blazing sun of New Mexico.

McCARTHY AND PALZER.

McCarthy and Palzer are taller, heavier and have a longer reach than Flynn, and it is likely that they can hit harder than the Pueblo fighter. In a short contest Johnson would probably outpoint either of them. But when it comes to wearing them down and knocking them out, it is almost certain that either of the men mentioned would have presented a harder job for Johnson than he had to do on July 4. For this last fight Johnson did not have to train very hard. He felt certain that he was not going up against a very tough fellow when he was meeting Flynn.

There are men who could be put against Johnson with whom it would not do to take chances of being out of condition. Jeanette, Langford, Palzer, McCarthy, are all men who would make it very interesting for the champion in a long fight. To meet any of them he would have to be in fine shape, and from now on, it will be harder and harder each time to train. Age will tell, and Johnson is not getting any younger. Fat that he will take on now will be hard to get off, and the job will grow more irksome every time he tries it.

JOHNSON FEARS JEANETTE.

Although McCarthy and Palzer are both promising men, who, if they remain in the ring for a few years, might take Johnson's measure later on, the most dangerous opponent for Johnson is to be found among the members of his own race. The man who will be apt to rob the Texan of his championship crown will be found among the black quartette—Jeanette, Langford, McVey or Battling Jim Johnson. With the exception of Langford, these men are all tall, powerful fellows who can box better than any of the big white hopes and who cannot only hit hard, but who can take a beating as well. With the exception of Jim Johnson the others have all boxed Jack Johnson, and while he won from each of them it was when he was probably a better man than he is now. Both Langford and Jeanette believe that in a long fight they can whip Johnson. In the case of Langford, the advantage which Jack Johnson would have would be very great, for he is taller and much heavier and has a longer reach than the Boston boxer. What is also important, Jack Johnson has a good left hand and Langford is a mark for a straight left.

With the big fellow in good shape the odds would be big that he would win over Sam. But with McVey or Jeanette it would be somewhat different. They are larger men than Langford, nearer the size of Johnson himself. They are tall, strong and can hit hard, and they have more than once shown that they can take a gruelling. Jeanette, for instance, has fought Johnson two fifteen-round fights. He has also fought the same number of rounds with Langford. Twice he has gone twenty rounds with McVey and once he fought Sam thirty rounds and on another occasion he has lasted forty-nine rounds with the same fighter.

JOE'S FIGHT WITH M'VEY.

Any man who can fight forty-nine rounds with so terrific a puncher as Sam McVey must be almost an iron man, and therefore it is a certainty that Jeanette would prove about the most dangerous opponent Johnson could have for the heavyweight championship, for Joe is young and ambitious. He is a clean-living young fellow who is improving in his fighting all the time. The fact that Johnson sidesteps the issue every time a chance is offered him to fight Jeanette shows that he considers the New Yorker a tough proposition.

UP IN CONSIDERATION.

House Naval Committee to Report a Measure to Increase Pay of Navy Yard Employees.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, July 27.—A tentative agreement to report favorably the Buchanan bill, which affects navy yard employees throughout the country, was reached today at a meeting of the subcommittee of the House Naval Affairs Committee. The bill would fix a minimum wage, increasing the present scale.

Under this measure machinists would be divided into four classes, the minimum wage per hour ranging from 35 to 50 cents.

Going Strong.

GROOM MAKES THE BEST BATTERS LOOK CHEAP.

SIR ROBERT GROOM of Washington, D. C., the elongated, attenuated toothpick twirler, backed by a hitting team, has come into his own. He is at his best when facing the league's greatest hitters. He is now looked upon as the second best pitcher on the Climbers' staff, Johnson alone excelling the splinter pitcher.

There are at least four of the league's mightiest sluggers who seldom cause Groom much trouble, though they pound and hammer and bump the offerings of other pitchers to a fare-you-well. The lank lad winds his perplexing curves around their wands, makes them fish for his wide benders and breaks their backs trying to land on his spitter.

Sam Crawford, the aged slugger of the Detroit Tigers, is Groom's principal victim. Crawford is disgusted from the start when he knows that Bob is in the mound for the Nationals against the Tigers, for Sam is well aware that another day is going by without his doing anything.

PROOFS ARE MANY.

Proofs are many of the marvelous power Groom holds over the head of the Tigers' greatest swatter. Even last year, when the Nationals looked like a representation from an old soldiers' home, the long lad fooled and toyed with Crawford as if he were a veritable boob from the grass lands.

This season it has been the same story, and no man on the field was so happy when Groom was banished from the mound in Detroit by the umpire than the pudgy gardener of the Tigers. He had got rid of his worst foe and might hope for a bingle or two, though he got none.

Ty Cobb, the incomparable, is another of Groom's victims. Cobb is a terror to most pitchers, particularly to those who cannot field their positions or have little control. When going right, Groom's control is excellent and he knows what to do with a grounder sent his way, be it fast or slow. Oh, yes, Ty hits now and then off Groom, but he counts them mighty lucky ones and makes no boasts about them.

When a pitcher can get into a game reasonably certain of stopping two of his best-hitting opponents, his chances for victory are more than good. Therefore, Bobby Groom does not shudder when carded to face both Cobb and Crawford, and they're about the whole Tiger team with the willow.

COLLINS IS ANOTHER.

If you would see a bright diamond star look like a bush-league boob in a single afternoon, take a look at Eddie Collins when forced to bat against the winding curves and puzzling spitter of Bob Groom. The little second baseman of the world's champion Athletics is one of the most consistent sluggers in the league. He fears no twister.

But when Collins goes up against Groom, the odds are against his boosting the hitting figures that day. He just can't seem to get hold of the ball with any degree of force. He gave one of these pitiful exhibitions last week in Philadelphia, going without a blow all day

The best he could do was to hammer a hot grounder to "Buzz" Foster for a death at first. Then he rolled to Grandil and perished. His last time up, with Maggert standing expectantly on third base, he stood there and looked at a third strike dart across the pan at an impossible angle. He had been fooled most impressively.

Out in Chicago the South Side bugs are always pulling for Ping Bodie to shove the pellet over the garden wall. The organ grinder from San Francisco does this occasionally, too, but never when Bob Groom is on the mound against him. Then Ping curls up and dies, slowly and gracefully.

The great Ping Bodie, killer of opposing pitchers, slaughterer of the best curves and fast ones, is a veritable joke when compelled to swing on that side-arm curve ball of Groom's. He goes out for them like a fisherman. Even when he happens to land on one it seldom rolls beyond the infield. When the Climbers were in Chicago this spring Bodie rolled f orupuny little grounders to McBride in a row. He never had a chance.

Cobb, Crawford, Collins and Bodie make a sweet quartette of diamond sluggers. They generally make mincemeat of all daring twirlers opposing them, but they all surrender as soon as Bobby Groom, the elongated, attenuated toothpick twirler, enters the box against them. He has their number.

NEWS REPORTS FROM CORRESPONDENTS OF THE TIMES.

Pasadena.

EVIDENCES OF FLEXURE

Reflecting Lens at Pasadena May Be a Failure.

Mulholland Will Not Work for Water Commission.

County Forestry Board Will Establish Tree Lanes.

PASADENA, July 28.—Any day now may determine whether the 100-inch reflecting lens that is being ground at the Pasadena shops of the Carnegie Observatory for the largest telescope in the world, to be erected on Mt. Wilson, will be usable, or whether work on the immense piece of glass will have to be abandoned and a new disc ordered.

A report yesterday that it is practically certain that the lens will not be satisfactory, owing to uneven flexure from different points on the circumference, was denied last night by Prof. George E. Hale, who has charge of the observatory.

"That is not the case now," he said. "Several days ago there appeared to be evidences of flexure, but later tests show them to have been false. No evidences of flexure can be seen at the present time and the glass presents a beautiful surface."

Prof. Hale, however, does not say that on the contrary it is at all certain that the lens will be satisfacory.

"We cannot tell," he said, last night. "We do not know yet how it will turn out."

It will probably be a week or more before it is known definitely whether the lens, upon which workmen have been grinding for more than a year, can be used.

This lens is to be thirteen inches thick and every precaution has been taken to prevent flexure. However, if flexure is found to exist it will be impossible to mount the lens.

"We are now working on plans for the building," Prof. Hale said, "but of course, we cannot do much until we have the lens. If this one is unsatisfactory we shall procure another piece of glass and start over. The plans for the telescope will not be abandoned."

The lump of glass that this lens was cut weighed five tons when it arrived from France.

LOS ANGELES OBJECTS.

The Los Angeles Public Service Commission has nipped in the bud a plan of the Pasadena Water Commission to secure the services of William Mulholland of that city as consulting engineer of the proposed local municipal water works. In a letter addressed to the local Water Commission Mulholland writes:

"Gentlemen: The Board of Public Service Commissioners, at its last meeting, considered your request of July 12 relative to my serving in the capacity of consulting engineer for your board and I was instructed to communicate with you as to their action.

"The members of the board gave your letter considerable discussion in which the utmost friendliness was expressed toward Pasadena and the large work she has undertaken. The consensus of opinion was that permission should be withheld, the action being based entirely upon that of public policy and the belief that it would be unadvisable for me to act in such a capacity, as Pasadena at some future time may have negotiations under way with Los Angeles relative to water rights and purchases.

"Writing in my own behalf, I very much appreciate the compliment implied in the offer, and I can see no reason why I may not review such plans as Mr. Moody may get out and if necessary, offer suggestions thereon, so long as no business relations, as such, are established.

[Signed]

"WILLIAM MULHOLLAND."

TREES TO BEGIN HERE.

Altadena will be the starting point for one of the lanes of trees that are to be set out by the Los Angeles County Forestry Board.

Following a visit of E. H. Sweetzer of Santa Monica, chairman of the board, to Altadena, announcement was made yesterday that the road that leads from there direct to the sea will be made the next of the shaded thoroughfares.

The work of setting out the trees will be begun in the near future and carried on as rapidly as possible.

CITY BRIEFS.

Fire of unknown origin yesterday damaged the roof of a house at No. 285 East Orange Grove avenue, owned by W. P. Henell and occupied by Joseph Owens. The damage was slight.

W. H. Hubbard, president of the American Bank and Trust Company, returned home yesterday from an extended trip in the East. While away he attended the Democratic National Convention at Baltimore.

Lewis J. Hampton, a local automobile dealer, yesterday returned home from the East.

Rev. T. Cunningham Beattie has been chosen president of a Woodrow Wilson Republican Club that has been formed in Pasadena.

W. H. Vedder, president of the First National Bank; Mrs. Vedder and Mr. and Mrs. MacD. Snowball have returned home from a trip to Alaska.

Civil-service examinations for the positions of postoffice clerk and carrier will be given at the rooms of the Board of Trade August 7, next.

WATTS CLEANS THINGS UP.

Citizens of Suburb Under the Direction of Street Superintendent Clean Up Lots and Streets.

WATTS, July 27.—Without having inaugurated a special campaign to that end, Watts has been pretty well cleaned up, in a literal way, the Street Superintendent directing the work. Within the past few months there has come over this city a desire to keep up with other cities around in matters of putting up a good appearance, and no opportunity is being missed to do the thing that will put the city in a more creditable light.

NEEDS MORE ROOM.

John B. Nicholls, principal of the High School at Compton, was in this city yesterday, and reports that additional buildings and facilities are necessary to handle the growing number of students of that school. Watts is especially interested in the doings of the Compton High School for the reason that being a joint high school district, Watts is a part of the district.

Mr. Nicholls states that the trustees have under consideration the question of erecting new buildings and buying additional ground close to some $15,000. They would really like to make even additional improvements, but whether to do it this year by means of a special tax levy, or whether to wait a year and ask the people to vote bonds, is a question that they cannot determine. The latter course will probably be decided upon as the advisable one to take, and in that event, there will be an educational campaign to show the people of the district the wisdom and the necessity of voting the bonds.

NEWS BRIEFS.

At their last meeting the local lodge of the Modern Brotherhood of America were visited by some thirty-five members from the Whittier lodge, who came in as a surprise party. The local lodge gave the invaders a sumptuous banquet. The suddenness with which the banquet was provided, as well as its excellence, turned the surprise on the people from Whittier.

Several cases of infantile paralysis have been reported in this locality, and parents have been advised to keep their children close at home. The doctors say that if the proper precautions are taken by parents in seeing to it that they do not mix too freely with persons living in the neighborhood where the disease prevails, there will not be so much danger of its spreading.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Barnes, and Mr. and Mrs. Ross Mason, of Mississippi, were visitors in Watts yesterday, and it may be that they will decide to locate here. They have traveled over much of Southern California, but make the statement that they have not seen before a place where the opportunities for investment are so good as in Watts.

Mrs. P. F. Adelsbach and Miss Ann Adelsbach visited relatives in Pasadena yesterday.

Go to Coronado and be cool.

BOARD OF FREEHOLDERS.

Glendale Wearies of Swaddling Clothes and Would Enter the List of Modern Cities.

GLENDALE, July 27.—An ordinance calling an election to select fifteen freeholders to frame a charter for this city will be passed by the Glendale Trustees next Monday evening. For a year or so residents have been advocating this change in the government of the city, and at a mass meeting several weeks ago the Trustees were petitioned to call an election for the selection of these freeholders. The election to select these freeholders will be called for the earliest possible moment.

CANDIDATES BOB UP.

A number of local men have announced as candidates for various positions at the primary election to be held September 3. J. C. Sherer, editor of the Glendale News, is out for nomination for Assembly from the Sixty-sixth District, as is also Mr. Lampert of this city, Mr. Ready of La Canada and Mr. Roberts of Los Angeles. E. D. Goode of this city is out for the nomination for Supervisor from this district on the Democratic ticket. Both Mr. Goode and Mr. Sherer have resided in this section for many years. Judge E. L. Payne of this city is a candidate for the position of Superior Judge.

Ideal vacation at Coronado.

EL MONTE NOTES.

Miss Edith Charlesworth of Mt. View, one of the Long Beach kindergarten teachers, is entertaining twelve of her girl friends at a house party at her parents' home from Saturday to Monday.

Miss Katharine Asher has been employed to teach Latin in Arcadia High School, Humboldt county, and will begin her work August 5. In the meantime she is spending the time with her friend, Miss Frances Jacklin, at Seattle, Wash.

A party of young ladies from the Philathaca class of the M. E. Sunday-school are at Huntington Beach for ten days, chaperoned by their teacher, Mrs. Robert Hicks. Among the number are Bessie Nelson, Lucile Hall, Edith Anderson and Viola Fasterian.

Mrs. A. C. Charlesworth recently returned from a visit of three months to her old home in Canada.

AZUSA NOTES.

AZUSA, July 27.—The second installment of boys sent from the Los Angeles Playground Association have arrived at Follow's mountain view resort in the San Gabriel Canyon, for a two-weeks' outing.

The proprietors of the various canyon resorts have had a large force of men at work on the road from the forks to the home of H. W. O'Melveny, and this eight-mile stretch is now in better condition than it ever was before. A few more weeks of work by the county road crew and there will be a fine automobile road from the mouth of the canyon to the O'Melveny place, and a fairly good stage road from there to Follow's Camp and Camp Rincon. It is the intention of the County Supervisors to continue the work to the head of the canyon, when this will undoubtedly become the most popular automobile drive in Southern California. Road Overseer W. T. Barker is doing such excellent work that the road will not only be permanent, but can be kept in repair with comparatively slight expense.

"Coronado Tent City" is cool.

Long Beach.

ENDEAVOR DAY IS CELEBRATED.

Long Beach Entertains More Visitors Than Usual.

Wilmington Woman Is Again Elected Superintendent.

Beautiful Mahogany-Finished Vessel Is Launched.

LONG BEACH, July 27.—Christian Endeavor day at the Christian Assembly was marked by a sudden jump in the number of registered visitors, which almost doubled, figures this evening showing over 1000 in attendance.

Owing to the length of the programme, the various items were limited in time. A welcome address to the visiting young people was made by Andrew Rice of the Long Beach society, aided by Miss Cecil Price and Miss Vertus McInturff of the intermediate. Miss Thompson of Hemet, made the response. Standing committees were reappointed, except the Auditing Committee of the new members, of which are Miss Ruth Taylor, Mrs. H. H. Stubbs and Walter Thompson.

In the election of officers, C. C. Gearhart of Wilmington, who has accomplished a great work the past year, was re-elected State superintendent. Other officers are Miss Ella Kamphefner, Los Angeles, assistant superintendent; Miss Lucille Decker, Los Angeles, secretary; Miss Mary McDonald, treasurer. Paul Brown spoke on "Efficiency in Christian Endeavor," and H. A. Sullivan, superintendent of all Endeavor societies of Southern California talked on "Our Living Link."

Reports of various committees showed great progress during the year and a very satisfactory growth. The Business Committee took pledges agreeing to raise $100 a month for the support of Christ's Mission in Los Angeles.

Tonight the new officers were installed and banners were awarded winning societies during the year for increase of membership and donations to the mission work.

Tomorrow morning the Endeavorers will hold a sunrise meeting on the beach, conducted by Hazel Dearborn. In the afternoon a carload will go to Watts to hold special services at the Christ Mission Industrial Home. At 4 o'clock in the auditorium, the First Christian Church choir of 100 voices and a dozen soloists will render the vesper chorus of Queen Esther.

BOAT LAUNCHED.

Several hundred people from the shores of the inner harbor tonight at 7:30 witnessed the successful launching of the first boat built by the Pacific Yacht, Launch and Engine Company. The craft, which, as she glided into the still waters of the channels, was christened the "Oso," is the property of D. A. McMillen, a mining man of Los Angeles, with a home at Avalon.

The boat, the builders declare, is one of the finest craft of her kind ever built on the Coast. She is thirty-three feet long, with a nine-foot beam and is entirely finished in mahogany. She carries a cabin with sleeping accommodations for four people and a good kitchen and lavatory accommodations, and is equipped with an eighteen-horse-power engine. Completely equipped, the boat cost $8500. Mr. McMillen will take her to Avalon some time next week.

A similar craft for Fred E. Munsey of Los Angeles, is on the ways and will be launched the first part of August.

HONEST PEOPLE PLENTY.

That there are honest people in the world was shown today by receipt of a letter by Police Chief Austin from Mrs. Karl W. Ellis of Seattle telling of her finding in that city of a crocheted handbag containing a watch, a rosary, some money and several calling cards. One of the cards bore the name of Mrs. Walter J. Desmond of this city. Inquiry of Mrs. Desmond indicates that the handbag is the property of a cousin of Mrs. Desmond, who was recently married to Francis J. Desmnod of New York but no relation.

They are on their honeymoon and now somewhere in the wilds of the Canadian Rockies. The watch was a present some years ago to the bride by her father, Frank Gillespie of New York. Mrs. Ellis will be asked to send the bag and contents to Long Beach from which point they will be sent to the rightful owner as soon as the address can be learned.

SIX VIOLENT DEATHS.

So far this month police records show six deaths from violence during this month, the greatest number since six years ago when a section of the Virginia Hotel collapsed during construction and killed eleven workmen. In the six instances this month all were the result of accident, save one death self-inflicted.

On July 8, Mrs. Linder was killed by a street car; July 11, W. A. King met death in an auto accident; July 16, James Lindsay was killed by the overturning of a motor truck; July 20, William E. Hotchkiss committed suicide; July 23, Mrs. Mary Lambkin was caught between a boat and the pier and crushed to death; July 26, Miss Grace Simpson was drowned in front of Hotel Virginia. Four of the victims were Los Angeles people and practically the same length of time elapsed between each tragedy, the longest being four days.

Preston W. Barritt, a Long Beach druggist, who disappeared some months ago, under mysterious circumstances, following a quarrel with his wife, and whose store was afterwards closed by his creditors, was in the city last evening, say intimate friends and was accompanied by his wife and daughter. He gave no explanation of his flitting or return. Mrs. Barritt has been living in Los Angeles several months and Barritt is supposed to have returned as mysteriously as he left and effected a reconciliation.

TO PAVE FAIR OAKS AVENUE.

South Pasadena Chamber of Commerce Meets and Puts on Foot an Important Movement.

SOUTH PASADENA, July 27.—Definite steps were taken last evening by the Chamber of Commerce to effect the paving of Fair Oaks avenue in the near future. A committee consisting of A. C. Ong, J. E. Dublin, John D. Reavis, Col. Butterfield and Seward Simons, Jr., was named to obtain the signature of the residents of Fair Oaks avenue to a petition favoring the laying of a main sewer with laterals to each house on Fair Oaks avenue before paving should be begun. If residents consent to this move, while it will cost them more, at the present time, for the original installation of the sewer, it will in reality be a good investment, for with the coming of the great inter-city trunk line outfall sewer, the city of South Pasadena will be under the necessity of buying back the sewerage right-of-way from the residents in the Fair Oaks avenue assessment district, which includes an area of 900 feet west on either side of the avenue, and refunding the money put in for the original expenses through the bond issue.

Additional business was the appointment made for the Chamber of Commerce to meet with the Board of Trustees Monday evening, to make arrangements for the building of a comfort station on the corner of Mission and Fair Oaks avenues, which is considered a necessity both for the people of the city, and the many tourists who pass through the square.

New members admitted last evening to the chamber were M. J. Quimby, Bruce Crow, Phillip Dodson and Ernest V. Sutton.

A change of secretries was made. Seward Simons, Jr., replacing W. B. Taylor, who resigned on account of pressure of other business. Mr. Simons is also secretary of the Outfall Sewer Commission, which organization has its headquarters with the Chamber of Commerce.

It was announced that an open meeting for all who are interested in the work of the chamber would be held at the offices in the Ong building, Fair Oaks avenue and Mission street, Friday evening, August 9, when the work of the chamber would be discussed before the public.

The funeral services of Mrs. Eliza Pollard, who died Thursday, was held at the residence of her daughter, Mary A. Pollard, No. 1600 Los Robles avenue, this afternoon at 3 o'clock with interment in Mountain View cemetery, Pasadena.

Now that interest is again centering around Garfield Park on Mission street, though the play "As You Like It," being given there this afternoon and evening, under the auspices of the Women's Improvement Association, the city is considering seriously trying to purchase the park from the Southern Pacific Railway, the present owners. If they succeed it would be left in its natural beauty, and walks, benches, and amusements for children would be added.

Children of the South Pasadena Orphans' Home enjoyed their annual treat today, for they were taken to the beach by the Cawston Ostrich Farm and had a royal time.

Buckeyes.

FORMER OHIO PEOPLE FROLIC ON THE SANDS.

LONG BEACH, July 27.—About 1500 former residents of the Buckeye State attended the second annual summer reunion picnic of the Ohio Societies Federation of Southern California.

The visitors arrived all through the morning and as fast as the Reception Committee of the local society could round them up they were rushed to the auditorium and registered by counties. The municipal band furnished music during the entire day on the pier and in the auditorium. Just before noon a programme of sports, in which the younger set participated, was given on the paved street, in front of the auditorium. A picnic dinner was served at noon on the lower deck.

This afternoon a short programme was given, which embraced the introduction of the master of ceremonies, Hon. R. S. Parker of Pasadena, an address of welcome by Mayor Hatch and a response by Rev. C. P. Wilson of Pomona. Then came a song by the Pasadena Hawkeye glee club, "Should Old Ohio Be Forgot," followed by a reading by Mrs. Clara Bryant Heywood of Pasadena; a short address by Lee C. Gates, and a selection by the quartette of the Long Beach society. At 3:30 dancing began and continued until late.

SAN DIMAS HAS A FIREBUG.

Some Miscreant Makes Futile Effort to Destroy the Home of a Deputy Constable.

SAN DIMAS, July 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] It looks as though San Dimas had a firebug and one whose efforts only failed through the prompt work of neighbors who discovered a fire in the residence of Levi Ehrsman last night, just in the nick of time to save it from being destroyed. The family were away and the house was closed and the appearance of smoke pouring from it caused instant alarm, and a quick fight, which resulted in putting out the fire.

Its start was from a cluster of kerosene oil soaked shavings under the kitchen floor, and that it was a firebug's work is practically positive.

Mr. Ehrsman is proprietor of the San Dimas Livery Stable and deputy constable. Every effort is being made to secure a clew which will lead to the discovery of the perpetrator of the crime.

FRUIT MEN ELECT.

The new San Dimas Fruit Exchange completed its organization today when it elected E. W. Hart, president of the board and representative on the California Fruit Growers' Exchange; W. B. Ames, vice-president; H. P. Foster, secretary and manager, and W. H. Collins, treasurer.

BOYS CAUGHT ROBBING STORE.

Marshal of Tropico Witnesses the Crime and Arrests One, But the Other Effects His Escape.

TROPICO, July 27.—Between midnight and 1 o'clock yesterday morning Calvin Enoch, a 15-year-old youth whose parents live at 208 Brand boulevard, was caught in the act of robbing the Tropico Mercantile Company's store at the corner of San Fernando road and Central avenue. William Gould, city marshal of this place, effected the arrest. When caught the boy had in his pockets postage stamps, loose change and several other small articles taken from the store and when accused of stealing the articles he admitted the theft. Young Enoch was not alone in the robbery, but was the party who entered the store while his companion stood guard.

A half-hour before the robbery was committed Gould saw the two boys sneaking in the shadows of the buildings and, unseen, he followed them to the Mercantile Company's store. Evidently the robbery had been planned beforehand, for, upon reaching the side of the building, the boys immediately broke the glass in the window beside the door. Through this hole in the glass one of the boys extended his arm and lifted the bolt of the door and one of the boys passed inside.

Young Enoch was taken before City Recorder Melrose, who let the boy return to his home on the promise that he would appear in the Tropico court at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon. When the time came for trial young Enoch was missing and has not been seen since that time, although officials have hunted the town over for him. It is believed that rather than appear for trial he has skipped the country.

During the past several days a series of robberies have taken place among the Tropico stores and it is believed these young crooks are responsible for all of them. It has not yet been learned who Enoch's partner was, but the police are working on the case.

CHILD BITTEN.

Little Willie Tilden, the 4-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Tilden of 127 Park avenue, this city, was bitten by a dog while at play yesterday morning. The dog had been seen in the neighborhood for only a short time. The child was stroking the animal's head when it turned upon him and bit him through the lower lip. The baby was hurried to a physician's office, and the wound was cauterized. It is claimed that the animal did not show the slightest signs of rabies.

Take Puritas Distilled Water on Your Auto Trip

Don't take chances with the water you find "along the road" when you go away for an overland jaunt in your machine. Aside from the fact that you are extremely liable to find water stations few and far between, you know from experience that one takes serious chances when he quenches his thirst or supplies his automobile engine with indifferent water.

You will find that PURITAS Distilled Water always tastes the same, whether you fill a glass in your kitchen or put a canteen to your lips in the desert. Always the same cool, clear, satisfying water that it has been for so many years. Business men, housewives, ranchmen, campers and automobile tourists know PURITAS well. It is used all over the Southwest. Try PURITAS yourself.

Don't confuse PURITAS Distilled Water with any of the innumerable "mineral waters." Analysis will not disclose a trace of mineral properties in PURITAS, any more than the presence of injurious foreign substances. PURITAS is doubly distilled—aerated through the agency of pure ozone, and put up in clean, sealed demijohns.

We will deliver a demijohn of PURITAS Distilled Water to your home or your office for 40 cents, if the address is within the old city boundary lines. If you wish us to deliver further than the old boundary lines, a slight charge is added to compensate us for the extra haul. For the convenience of county residents we have appointed agents throughout the rural districts. There is probably one near you.

Telephone our main plant—Sunset Main 8191, Home 10053—and let us send a demijohn of PURITAS to you. Your name and address on a card will answer as well. Los Angeles Ice and Cold Storage Company.

SEARCHING FOR DIAMONDS.

San Diego Detectives Seek Jewels Secreted by Thief in Toilet Room of the Admiral.

SAN PEDRO, July 27.—Detective Doty of San Diego returned home on the steamer Queen this morning after an unsuccessful attempt to locate $800 worth of diamonds that P. Sobia, a fugitive from justice, put in a toilet at the Admiral saloon, on Front street, on June 18, to avoid having them found on his person.

The detectives are now considering the feasibility of screening the settlings in the manhole at Fifth and Front in hope of finding the stones. Sobia is alleged to be an accomplice of Yates, the notorious diamond robber, who is believed to have secured $30,000 worth of stones at the Grant Hotel at San Diego, besides being implicated in the De Sable robbery at the Palace Hotel, in San Francisco.

Sobia was taken from the steamer Harvard on her arrival from San Diego by Officer Wickland and on the way to the station he ditched the stones. Sobia afterwards told Yates and Yates, while in jail at San Francisco on the way back to New York to face a charge there, sent a man to San Pedro to see if the diamonds could be found, so the detectives say. Detective Doty was very uncommunicative this morning when asked how he secured this information, and said that there were things he could not talk about. Yates, it is stated, is now in jail in New York, upon a charge concerning a large stock swindle.

BELLBOY IS WILLING TO WED

San Diego Jewel Thief Infatuated With Woman.

Court Not Inclined to Favor Matrimonial Plan.

Alleged Thief Offers Novel Plea When Arraigned.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN DIEGO, July 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Paul Sobie, the youthful bellboy who has confessed to a series of jewel robberies at the Grant Hotel, as accomplice of Charles R. Riese, a notorious New York crook now on his way East to answer for an $85,000 [illegible] robbery, will learn Monday whether he will be given his liberty on probation or be sent to the reform school at Ione.

Strong pressure is being brought to bear on both sides. At the hearing on probation today, before Judge [illegible] in Superior Court, A. C. Heilbron, a hat manufacturer of St. Louis and brother-in-law of Sobie, said he would take the young man East with him if placed on probation and give him a good position and a home. On the other hand, the prosecuting officials contend that Sobie has not told all he knows about the hotel jewel robberies and that he should be sent to Ione.

It is believed that Sobie is shielding the woman, Margaret Ward Manners, with whom he consorted at the time of the jewel thefts and who assisted in pawning much of the loot. Sobie is willing to marry the woman, who is still in the city, but Judge [illegible], in summing up the evidence, declared that if he granted Sobie probation it might be possible that he would not consent to the marriage at least until Sobie reached majority, as he believed she was not a fit companion for the youth and was more to blame for the robberies than he.

The Manners woman, whose home is in Los Angeles, has been married, but is now divorced. She is two years older than Sobie. After the hearing Judge [illegible] reserved his decision until Monday.

NOVEL PLEA.

Uncontrollable somnambulistic proclivities manifested in the form of alleged nightly depredations in the vicinity of his home were admitted and pleaded in Justice Bryan's court today by Andrew Phillips in a novel defense to a charge of larceny filed against him by Charles Monahan of [illegible] Heights.

Phillips, who is 60 years of age, told the court he was a habitual sleepwalker and not only disputed possession of roof ridges with prowling cats, but that during frequent [illegible] expeditions at night he probably had pulled up his neighbor's flowers and vegetables by the roots and thrown them into his yard, as he was charged with doing.

He even admitted that it was entirely within the scope of his activity to carry home lumber that he was accused of stealing from Monahan, but insisted that he was asleep when he did it. He backed up his plea by exhibiting a bruised and swollen wrist, the result, he declared, of chaining himself to his bed so that he would do his sleeping in the ordinary way. The wrist became so sore, however, that he had gone to bed without locking himself up of late and presumably he had wandered forth again on nocturnal forays, returning with things belonging to his neighbors.

The justice was so impressed by the novel plea that he allowed him to go on probation. The defendant, before he left court, said he guessed he would have to use the chain again. The justice advised him to put it on over his night shirt to be sure he would [illegible] no more.

TO STOP RACING.

Automobile racing on Palomar Mountain will be stopped if an edict of the Supervisors, issued today, is enforced. Acting on a complaint from [illegible], who called attention to the dangerous practice of speeding on the mountain highway, the board instructed the constable of Palomar township to arrest all violators of the law regulating traffic in his bailiwick, which limits speed to twenty miles an hour.

WILL COMPLY.

[illegible] W. Pursell, promoter of the San Diego, Riverside and Los Angeles railway, whose bond to insure the completion of his line in the city limits by November 1, has been twice extended by the Council, now says he will comply with conditions imposed by the legislators and file a personal surety company bond Monday. His time for presenting a satisfactory bond has expired but the Council is inclined to be lenient toward him and the bond probably will be accepted.

RECORD CATCH.

With 7000 pounds of halibut and [illegible] pounds of sea bass, the record catch of the season, the power boat Panama arrived today from Mexican waters.

TIES FOR SANTA FE.

The British steamship Clan McIver, [illegible], arrived today, nineteen days from Koshira and Otaru, Japan, with 80,000 ties for the Santa Fe railway.

[illegible] to "Coronado" and back.

CHARGED WITH CRUELTY.

UPLAND, July 27.—The case of [illegible], charged with cruelty to animals in that he neglected to provide food for a mare and colt in his possession, was continued in Justice [illegible] court yesterday, pending the arrival of witnesses for the prosecution. [illegible] is charged with having expressed contempt for the law and the local officers.

NEWS BRIEFS.

[illegible], the largest employer of [illegible] labor in this section, has secured the contract for harvesting the crop on the immense 4000-acre ranch just east of this city. He expects to employ about 500 men, and the crop it is thought will total 20,000 tons.

Messrs. E. H. Haury and C. R. Grier, from the city trustees, attended a meeting held at South Pasadena, looking toward the establishment of a uniform speed limit in all the incorporated cities on the Foothill boulevard. There is a disposition on the part of the local officials to do the right thing by all parties concerned, and what measures have heretofore been taken by the motorcycle police have been of a protective, rather than an offensive, nature. A committee from the Chamber of Commerce, to act in conjunction with the City trustees' Committee, is to be appointed at once and be ready for the next meeting of the Inter-City Commission of the San Gabriel Valley to be held at Monrovia Friday, August 2.

The little 4-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Bryden, residing on G street, this city, is suffering from what is pronounced a genuine case of infantile paralysis. He is thought to be somewhat improved, just at this time, and hope of recovery is entertained.

The members of the Women's Club of Upland met this week to discuss plans looking to the securing of a site for a proposed clubhouse. A committee consisting of Mmes. John Rarick, George Barlow and F. H. Manker was named to cast about for possible locations and it is hoped ere long to be able to announce a definite selection. The club is growing in numbers and interest rapidly.

Dr. William Craig and family were called home from their automobile outing yesterday by a telegram announcing the death at San Diego of a relative of Mrs. Craig. Their vacation, which was spent in the central and north-central part of the State, was cut short about one week of what was originally intended by this sad event.

Interest in the new athletic class recently formed in connection with the Y.M.C.A. has grown at such a rate that additional room will have to be provided for the club and dumb-bell exercises, or the boys will have to "move outdoors." The class, under the leadership of Fred L. Wing, is very popular.

TO CELEBRATE BEAUMONT DAY.

BEAUMONT, July 27.—Final arrangements have been made by the local Board of Trade for the celebration of Beaumont day, August 2, with an all-day basket picnic to be held on the old Hotel Edinburg grounds in this city. Hon. R. P. Cundiff, county horticultural commissioner, will be here from Riverside and deliver the principal address on a topic of interest to fruit growers.

It is expected that many visitors will be present from other cities and towns of this section. In the afternoon a long programme of athletic contests will be given, and at night a home talent minstrel show will be produced in the High School auditorium. The following committee will have charge of the arrangements for the day: K. R. Smoot, W. H. Abbey, Dr. W. P. Keasbey, J. O. Tillery, Rufus Jackson, E. J. Gillis, W. L. Percy, A. T. Gantt and D. H. Spruill.

MAY BUILD.

The Beaumont lodge of Odd Fellows has under consideration a plan for the erection of its own building in this city and has appointed a committee to investigate and report on an available site. The new building, as it is now proposed, will be constructed of brick or stone, two stories high, and have a frontage of fifty feet. The first floor will be devoted to business purposes, while the second floor will be occupied by the lodge.

NEWS BRIEFS.

In excavating for the foundation of the large residence to be built for Mrs. George D. Boulton at La Mesa, the workmen uncovered a large spring. The flow of water soon become so great as to prohibit the completion of the foundation as originally intended and the plans for the structure are now being altered by the architect at Los Angeles.

C. S. Sheldon of San Dimas, this week purchased of the Beaumont Land and Water Company a ten-acre tract at La Mesa Miraville, a few miles north of this city. It is the new owner's intention to highly improve this tract in the near future.

Work was started this week on a new concrete residence to be erected for Miss A. B. Stafford on Magnolia avenue, near Eighth street.

Prof. Robert T. Hill of Washington, D. C., an eminent geologist in the employ of the United States government, was the guest of A. T. Gantt in this city this week.

PERRIS.

PERRIS, July 27.—Contractor W. G. Muir has completed the $7000 Andresson bungalow east of town, which was planned several months ago by the late Richard Andresson. Mrs. Andresson carried out the plans of her husband in the minutest details and now has one of the most modern and up-to-date two-story cottages to be found.

J. C. McGowan has just finished an engine 16x36 feet, for Laborde and Duff, who are opening up a new rock quarry near the old Virginia mine west of town. A twenty horse-power Westcott engine with a 10x10 air compressor has been installed.

Crandall and Pierce are sinking a shaft eighty feet deep for Henry McKeen on his big alfalfa ranch east of town. They are also putting down a ten-inch well. Mr. McKeen already has several wells on his ranch and will install a dynamo and pump each well separately.

James Maw has sold, through the agency of H. A. Shiffer and Company, his twenty-four-acre alfalfa ranch north of town to a Los Angeles man, receiving in part payment a six-room house and lot in Los Angeles. The deal represented $8000.

The cloudburst last Thursday, which occurred near Anderson, north of town, did not do as much damage as was first reported. The farmers say very little hay was seriously damaged.

Mrs. A. A. Smith and children arrived on the noon train from Riverside to join her husband here. Mr. Smith has charge of the Progress during the illness and absence of Editor Milliken.

Taft Workers Will Wage a Vigorous Campaign.

Advertising Experts Pleased With Citrus Outlook.

RIVERSIDE, July 27. — Quon Chong, a Chinese, arrested here last night by United States Secret Service Officer W. A. Frazee, will be sent to Los Angeles Monday to stand trial in the United States Court on a charge of selling contraband opium. Quon is believed to be one of the gang of smugglers that has been operating in all the large cities of the Coast, several members of which are now held at San Francisco. Quon, who has visited here at intervals, has gone by several names and has been under arrest here before on the charge of selling opium to boys.

Government officials have been watching the local Chinamen for several weeks, as large amounts of the drug have been arriving and have been disposed of here.

RALLY OF TAFT WORKERS.

That a spirited campaign will be made in this county for the candidacy of C. C. Millice treasurer.

NEW HOTEL MANAGER.

H. B. Tudor, for four years assistant manager of the Savoy Hotel at Denver, and chief clerk and assistant manager of the New Arlington at Santa Barbara, has been appointed manager of the Reynolds Hotel, which is being thoroughly modernized and increased by the addition of nearly 100 rooms. While the construction is in progress, the work will have the benefit of Mr. Tudor's suggestions.

DATE FOR CONVENTION.

At a meeting of the Republican County Central Committee this afternoon, it was decided to hold the County Convention Saturday, September 14, at the Woman's Club building. Resolutions were adopted indorsing S. C. Evans for Congress from the Eleventh District. The indorsement was made unanimous.

EXPERTS IMPRESSED.

After a tour of the citrus fruit district in the vicinity of Riverside, advertising experts who will have the handling of the publicity campaign for the California Fruit Growers' Exchange the coming season declare their amazement at the amount of new acreage that will come into bearing in the next two or three years.

G. Harold Powell, who becomes manager of the exchange in September, made the tour in company with Walter Farley of Chicago, who is charge of the advertising department of the exchange, and R. C. Brandon, of the well-known advertising agency of Lord & Thomas.

The advertising campaign will be greatly extended this year. The exchange has been trying out printer's ink for five seasons now, and the results warrant the appropriation of still more funds for the purpose. It is Powell's idea that by taking advertising men over the ground, they will be enabled to give their work a touch that would be impossible otherwise. The care given the fruit in the packing-houses was a revelation to the eastern experts.

ESCONDIDO.

ESCONDIDO, July 27.—Arrangements have been made with the Grape Day Association by Mrs. Clara Greening, representing the Egan Lyceum Bureau of Los Angeles, for the presentation by the Egan Woodland Players of the Shakespearean comedy, "As You Like It," in the Grape Day Park, August 13. There will be twenty-five players and the comedy will be staged on a platform under the big pepper trees on the west side of the park. Seats will be provided for an audience of 500. Added interest is lent the event from the fact that it will be the first taking place in the park since the acquisition by the Grape Day Association and Chamber of Commerce.

CHAPLAIN IS MAROONED.

Soldiers' Home Official Has Harrowing Experience on the Desert With an Erratic Automobile.

SOLDIERS' HOME, July 27.—A story of the stranding on the desert a few days ago of the home's chaplain, Rev. G. W. Wilson with his son, George H., just home in vacation from the University of California at Berkeley, and a visiting nephew, William Roach, has just leaked out.

The party started out on Thursday morning in the chaplain's big touring car, with intent to reach Daggett. Unfamiliar with the roads, they gathered the desired information as they proceeded.

All went well until they had passed a few miles beyond Victorville, when, through misinformation by a person met on the way, they found themselves on an old and not much-used wagon road, where in a short time they rolled into a patch of heavy sand and stuck there. Adjusting the machine to its low gear, the auto pounded through the sand for a mile or more when, the pressure proving overmuch for low gear, the latter gave out and the party was stranded on the desert.

It was after nightfall, and ignorant of the topography of the neighborhood, they concluded to make the best of the situation until daylight. As they had planned to eat at hostelries en route, they were equipped in the way of food with only a five-gallon keg of water, for, being a clergyman, not even such a trifle as a bottle of snake-bite poison had a place in the hamper, and the only game within reach consisted of rattle snakes and lizards. As their appetites were not trained to diet of that nature, they proceeded to make a meal off the water. Then disposing their bodies as best they could in the auto, they occupied their time alternately, sho-flying and counting stars until sleep came.

In the morning, while discussing plans for securing assistance, Mr. Dobbins, manager of an electric line under construction near there, chanced by in a powerful auto and, hitching onto the crippled machine, hauled it and its occupants to Oro Grande, where supplies and mechanicians came in response to telephone, and after considerable work, got the machine in working shape.

Abandoning further attempts to reach Daggett, the party left Oro Grande at 6 p.m., Saturday and reached the home on Sunday at 3:40 a.m.

The chaplain says he'd rather preach a dozen sermons than be marooned on a desert at night.

POSTOFFICE SITE.

MONROVIA, July 27.—A meeting of the Board of Trade was held last night to consider the much-discussed postoffice site. Some weeks ago this organization recommended a site opposite the city park, and near the City Hall known as the Bachert site. The Merchants' Association also indorsed this site.

J. E. MacIntyre of the MacIntyre Building Company, who had also a proposed site at Walnut and Myrtle avenues, was inclined to the belief that two sites should be recommended to the Postoffice Department, and asked that the Board of Trade indorse his site as well, as one of the two desirable for the purpose. The meeting last night was called to give the members an opportunity of discussing and voting upon the question. There were thirty-two present and the final vote resulted in the Bachert site, being the only one indorsed, the vote standing 22 to 10.

ARCHITECT IN HOT WATER OVER INSURANCE POLICY.

SANTA ANA, July 27.—A disagreement between A. B. Sturges, a Los Angeles architect, and his draftsman, J. P. Kennedy, seems to be back of a sensation sprung at the meeting of the school board last night. Kennedy says he has been denied a commission for getting Sturges appointed architect for Santa Ana's proposed Polytechnic High School. Kennedy told the school board that Sturges told him that he could superintend the job of building, but one thing he would have to do would be to take out life insurance in a company represented by W. L. Sugg, president of the school board. He said Sturges told him he had taken out a $5000 policy to hold his job. A typewritten report of a Blair Detective Agency operative was produced alleging that Sturges made a similar statement to the detectives, including the remarks that seemed to enthuse the whole school board. Sturges hotly denied making insinuations, said that Kennedy's charges were a traitor trick and a scheme of Kennedy's to do him dirt because of a disagreement.

He stated that Duggen had written the policy but it was written long after the contract as architect was signed. Duggen readily admitted writing the policy. He said that insurance was not mentioned between them until this month, and then only when Duggen learned that Sturges had an invalid wife and needed more insurance.

Other members of the school board, with Duggen, insisted on finding out just what was said concerning the board by Sturges. In various alleged conversations and at the meeting there was talk of cancelling the contract of Sturges in case it is proven that he made insinuations attacking the integrity of the board.

No action was taken. Sturges was appointed architect last January by a full vote of the board.

NEWS BRIEFS.

The school board and City Trustees are engaged in a controversy as to whether or not the school department shall pay the city water department for water consumed by the schools. The City Trustees Committee last night virtually gave their ultimatum to the effect that the schools would have to pay or get no water.

The Republican County Central Committee this afternoon set September 14 as the time for the county convention, and issued a call for the election of delegates to the convention, the election coming at the primaries on September 3. The apportionment is one delegate for every fifteen votes cast for Hiram Johnson two years ago.

PROMINENT SYMPTOMS OF CATARRH

THE HEAD AND THROAT.

This form of catarrh is most common, resulting from neglected colds. Quickly cured with little cost by Drs. Shores' famous treatment.

Is your head stopped up?
Does your nose discharge?
Is your nose sore and tender?
Is there pain in front of the head?
Is your throat dry in the morning?
Do you sleep with your mouth open?

You can be easily cured now. Don't let it run into complications.

THE BRONCHIAL TUBES.

When catarrh of the head or throat is neglected or wrongfully treated it extends down the windpipe into the bronchial tubes, and after a while attacks the lungs.

Have you a cough?
Do you take cold easily?
Have you a pain in the side?
Do you raise frothy materials?
Do you spit up little cheesy lumps?
Do you feel like you were growing weaker?

Don't risk neglecting these warnings—stop the disease before it reaches the lungs.

OF THE EARS.

Catarrh extends from the throat, along the eustachian tubes into the ears, causing partial or complete deafness.

Is your hearing failing?
Do your ears discharge? Do they ring?
Is the wax drying in your ears?
Do you hear better on some days?
Does a cold make your hearing worse?
Don't neglect this until your hearing is irreparably destroyed.

OF THE STOMACH.

Catarrh of the stomach is usually caused by swallowing poisonous mucus which drops down from the head and throat at night.

Are you constipated?
Is there nausea?
Do you belch up gas?
Do you bloat up after eating?
Is there constant bad taste?

Now is the time to be permanently cured. Drs. Shores are curing hundreds every year.

San Bernardino.

OLIVES WILL RIVAL ORANGES.

San Bernardino Valley Gives Promise of Riches.

Two Canning Plants Will Be Constructed at Once.

Poor Water Pressure Causes High Insurance Rates.

SAN BERNARDINO, July 27.—That the olive industry is to rival the great citrus fruit orchards of San Bernardino Valley is indicated by the announced plans of Charles C. Moore, president of the Panama-Pacific Exposition of San Francisco, for the construction of a big olive mill at Rosena, a short distance west of this city, and the planting of hundreds of acres of olive orchards.

Twenty-seven acres of land for the olive plant were today transferred to Moore by the Fontana Company, and work is to start at once on the mill that will employ about 100 men at the start. Moore already has extensive interests in bearing olive orchards, and these are to be extended and the planting of olives encouraged by guarantees for the purchase of the crops.

The mill is to be erected for the bottling and canning of olives. It is probable that later an olive-oil plant will be added.

North of San Bernardino another big olive plant is now in the course of construction by a syndicate headed by D. J. Carpenter of Redlands. This plant is to double the capacity of the olive oil of the valley and will also engage extensively in canning.

The opening of these two plants will create a steady market for the product of olive orchards, and it is expected that thousands of acres will be set out to supply the demand.

LOWER INSURANCE.

That the demands for a reduced fire insurance rate for this city will be recognized, is the assurance of Richard J. Waldron of the Southern California district of the Pacific Fire Underwriters. An immediate cut is assured without additional fire fighting facilities, and it is agreed that should additions to the fire stations be made as recommended by the underwriters, there will be a still greater decrease.

According to figures gathered by the Chamber of Commerce, San Bernardino has more extensive facilities and greater water supply than any city of its size in this end of the State, but at the same time is paying a higher rate.

CONTRASTS LODGE AND CHURCH.

Evangelist at Huntington Beach Coins Epigrams and Contrasts God's and Men's Organizations.

HUNTINGTON BEACH, July 27.—"Christ did not establish lodges or other organizations, but He did establish the church. The reason that the lodges seem to be doing more charity work than the church of Christ is that their members get together in the name of the lodge instead of in the name of the church. In spite of its many imperfections, the church, more than any other organization, is preaching Christ and it does not use the blackball."

"This way of caring for young converts, as many churches do, by having sociables and feeding them with ice cream and cake, is not giving them spiritual food—the ice cream is liable to freeze their Christianity."

These were some of the pithy sentences which interspersed the sermon of Evangelist Brown at the Methodist camp-meeting yesterday, and impressed the great congregation.

The big choir has been strengthened by instrumental music, drums, a clarinet, two pianos and an organ now forming the instrumental equipment of the daily and nightly worship, under the direction of Evangelist Curry. The mourners' bench is receiving nightly seekers after prayer, among them last evening being a gambler of Los Angeles, well-known in that city, and who was addicted to the use of morphine. He threw away sixty grains of the drug after his conversion and promised to use it no more.

Today the entire day was given over by the Epworth League to athletic exercises, the young people evincing much interest in the games of volley and baseball, tennis and other outdoor amusements. Bathing in the ocean and in the plunge was also a favorite method of enjoying the day. There were no preaching services in the afternoon but a children's meeting was held at 2 o'clock and largely attended.

The Epworth League will end its work here next Wednesday, when the ten-days' institute and Bible study classes will have completed their labors here for this year.

Rev. Dr. John L. Pitner, presiding elder of the Fresno district, and president of the Methodist assembly, reached here last night, and will remain until the close of the camp meeting next Sunday, August 5.

AWAIT COMMITTEE'S ACTION.

Democrats of the City Defer to Wishes of the County in Planning for Their Organization.

The Democrats of Los Angeles are going to wait until the County Central Committee shall announce a comprehensive plan for organization before starting a central campaign club. This was decided last night at a gathering called by Chairman Norton of the Central Committee at Symphony Hall.

A. D. Warner, A. H. Kallmeyer and other enthusiasts wanted to start a campaign club at once, but a suggestion that this might interfere with the plans of the committee was accepted, though it took two hours and a half of argument to reach that conclusion. Meanwhile this result was being reached the Central Committee adjourned to meet next Saturday morning and former Senator Del Valle took the chair as presiding officer of the Mammoth Hall meeting of nearly two weeks previous, to report the action of the committee appointed by him to select candidates.

Lorin Handley, T. E. Gibbon, John Topham and others spoke, all in favor of harmony. It is understood among the Democrats that the County Central Committee meeting next Saturday will be largely attended and that a plan of campaign will then be agreed upon. Chairman Del Valle told the audience last night that the Democrats among the women were organizing clubs in every precinct and he believed this the proper course to pursue.

SIX THOUSAND ENTERTAINED.

YOUNG MEN'S CATHOLIC INSTITUTE VISITS VENICE.

Judge Paul McCormick Delivers an Eloquent Address and Athletics and Other Diversions Made Up a Day of Unusual Pleasure—Fireworks at Night.

VENICE, July 27.—The keys of Venice and all its pleasures were handed to 6000 Catholics today, at the outset of what proved to be the most successful Young Men's Institute picnic ever held. Despite the announcement made of the general Catholic picnic to be held at Redondo next week, the attedance at the picnic here was better than ever before.

Each decked with an orange ribbon with the letters "Y.M.I. Los Angeles Council," printed thereon, the gay picnickers began arriving before 9 o'clock. By noon, Windward avenue, the Ocean Front and the pier was crowded with the members of the council and their friends. They enjoyed the surf and various attractions hugely. Venice people enjoyed entertaining the happy throng.

The committee on arrangements, consisting of Thomas Connelly, chairman; E. T. Lucy, O. J. Emme, T. V. King, Thomas P. White, F. P. Jenal, president of the Los Angeles council, L. M. Rosecrans and J. C. O'Leary, soon had greased the wheels of the good time and had planned for the afternoon's programme. They were assisted by the following members of the Los Angeles clergy: Fr. J. J. Clifford of St. Thomas Church; Frs. P. J. O'Reilly and P. O'Donogue, of St. Patrick's Church; Dr. Joseph Glass, of St. Vincent's; Fr. Raphael, of the Benedictine Church; Fr. Gleason, of the Sacred Heart Church.

In his address of the day, Judge Paul J. McCormick, an enthusiastic member of the institute, said in part:

"The Young Men's Institute is a fraternal organization whose motto is 'Pho Deo, pro patria,' or 'for God and our country.'

"Its religious purpose is to strengthen its members in their religious convictions so that they may become more useful, and highly moral. The cornerstone of the republic is religion and morality. If these were to be eliminated, the government would be insecure. While a man must be a Catholic to belong to this great organization, its social activities are not confined to such narrow bounds. Its mission is also to promote good fellowship, and true Christian charity.

"The order was organized twenty-five years ago by five patriotic men, the majority of whom were native sons of California. It has grown until now there are councils in almost every State, and there are 150,000 members. Fealty to country has been manifested by the Young Men's Institute, not only in time of war, but in times of peace. The first regiment to answer the call in 1898, that one from California, was more than half members of the Y.M.I. In the halls of peace, also, they are famous. Senator Stephen M. White was a notable example of a patriotic member of the institute."

After the address the crowd hurried to the Ocean Front, where sports were watched with interest. The officials were: Judge, H. L. Massie; clerk of course, Tom Donogue; starter, Neil McCarthy.

The following were the winners of the various events:

The 50-yard dash for girls—Won by Virginia Staunton.

Pie-eating contest—Won by John Ireda.

The 50-yard dash for small boys—Won by Adolph Borsum.

Sack race—Won by George Donoghue.

Potato race—Won by C. J. Kupfer.

Spoon-and-egg race for women—Won by Louise Darmody.

The 50-yard swimming race—Won by Bob Howard.

The Abbott Kinney Company donated the dance hall and its orchestra to the picnickers, and also tendered the bath-house for the aquatic event. This evening there was a brilliant display of fireworks on the lagoon.

SCOTTY COMING BACK.

Can "Death Valley Scotty" come back? Walter Scott, red necktie, blue shirt and all, is a guest of St. Mark's Hotel, and those who have followed in the wake of the promiscuous buyer of drinks and auto rides while he has been here say that the feat is not beyond the possibilities. Scotty, who recently declared on oath that he had no mine at all, but was paid to advertise a certain mining company, arrived in Venice with four friends this morning and bought drinks at the Arcade saloon. He drank lemonade and tendered a $100 bill in payment. The bartender asked him if he had not a bill of smaller denominations. "Search that roll and see," said Scotty, as he threw upon the bar a bundle of bills said to be of the cow-choking size. Scotty tonight promised that he would again go into Death Valley, despite the recent court exposure, and would emerge with "enough real coin to buy six steam yachts."

HANNA INDORSED.

At a meeting of the Good Government League, held last night, the candidacy of Byron C. Hanna, City Attorney, for the Superior judgeship was indorsed, and J. C. Barthel was indorsed for the Legislature. The members also passed a resolution advising the people to vote to maintain the present number of saloons at the present license at the initiative election Monday. The proposed school bonds also were indorsed.

STEINWAY
The New Small Grand at $800

THIS wonderful new instrument, whose extreme length is only five feet, six inches preserves the essentials of Steinway design, and the fundamental principles that have so long distinguished Steinway practice are retained intact.

It has the beautiful Steinway Grand tone—full and round, yet with a "bite" to it that is most refreshing. In short, it is a typical Steinway Grand, but composed within case dimensions that insure room for it in the smallest apartment.

The case design of this new Grand is perhaps the most graceful and thoroughly modern that the Steinway House has ever put forth. The lines are simple, the curves carefully drawn out—and the whole impression one of grace and beauty.

We invite you to see and try this triumph in piano-making. It will show you the reasons why the House of Steinway holds with the utmost ease its high position as the world's best producer of Pianos.

—We are exclusive Steinway Representatives for Southern California and Arizona.
—Steinway Uprights, $575 and upward.
—Steinway Grands, $800 and upward.
Reasonable terms of payment if desired.

EXPLAINS POLITICS OF THE HENDERSON APPOINTMENT.

Senator Del Valle Proves Valuable Witness for the Defense in the Libel Suit Against "The Times." Engle Tells About the "Job" at Alessandro Street. The Hiding of the Ordinance.

THAT no deadlock existed upon the Public Service Commission making it necessary for Frank G. Henderson to vote for himself for president, as Henderson claims is the case.

That either Del Valle or Davidson could have been elected to the office, but that at the Mayor's suggestion the election was held up until after the appointment of Henderson.

That Wellborn solicited Del Valle's support for his (Wellborn's) candidacy for president, on the ground that the promotion had been earned.

That Del Valle replied that under no circumstances would he vote for Wellborn; that he would vote for Davidson, and that he "would rot in his chair" before he would vote for himself for president.

That Henderson was active while in the Mayor's office stalling off those who wanted to see His Honor.

That William H. Engle, a property owner in the Alessandro street district, vainly tried for nearly two years to get some satisfaction from city officials as to what was being done to the property owners' interests adjacent to that thoroughfare, while the vacation ordinance was hidden in Henderson's desk.

These were the principal points brought out yesterday by the defense in the libel suit against The Times now on trial in Judge Chambers's court, and remaining unshaken under cross examination.

There was little in the proceedings yesterday to give cheer and encouragement to either Frank G. Henderson or his political sponsors in the trial of The Times on a charge of libel, preferred by Henderson and prosecuted by the "Goo-Goo" administration with the machinery of the municipality in hand.

The session of court lasted but half a day on account of the Saturday legal half-holiday, but during that time the defense produced evidence which served to show in bas relief some of the motives animating the prosecution.

SENATOR DEL VALLE.

Henderson's contention that when he voted for himself to be president of the Public Service Commission (the only salaried place on the board) such action was necessary to break a deadlock, exploded with a loud bang when former Senator Del Valle took the stand.

Del Valle testified that at no time had there been a deadlock on the board, and that either himself or Commissioner W. Davidson could have been elected. "I would rot in my chair before I would vote for myself," he said. The Mayor advised, according to the witness, that the election be deferred until after the appointments had been made completing the board.

"Wellborn said he would not vote for me, but that I could vote for him. I told him that I would not vote for him under any circumstances, and that it would be necessary, if one of the new members was to be elected, for him to vote for himself."

The former Senator's testimony revealed political differences in the board, but not a deadlock, so that, when the deal to appoint Henderson was made, it carried with it a schema for that individual to vote himself into the $3000 job of president over the old members who had given years of their time to a study of the complex water questions which the commission is called upon to decide. Henderson admits that he solicited the votes of some of the members for the office.

The witness described the proposed Graham and Mulholland plans for water distribution which show a wide range of opinion in this regard, or, as Mulholland himself expressed it, a "radical difference," and said that the board is so far unable to determine a proper distributive system for the Owens River water.

Graham would carry the water through a costly conduit much farther east than Mulholland proposes, taking within the purview of the project a greater acreage than there is water to supply. Mulholland would apply the water to land contiguous to the city, or which may logically become a part of the city, and only so far as it will go. Two important legal questions yet remain to be solved, according to Del Valle. One the right of the city to withdraw the water from land already once served, and the other the right of the city to establish the rate at which the water shall be sold. These, he said, are some of the problems which his board is called upon to meet.

ENGLE'S TESTIMONY.

It appeared through the testimony of William H. Engle, who is a property owner in the Alessandro-street district, a builder and a resident of Los Angeles for twenty-two years, that his letter of protest against the contract entered into between the city of Los Angeles and the Pacific Electric Railway Company on December 13, was acknowledged by postal card signed with the Mayor's rubber stamp. Theodore Comstock, secretary of the Board of Public Utilities, with whom Engle discussed the matter, assured the protestant, according to his testimony, that he had advised the Mayor to withhold his signature from the contract until after he received the Engle letter. The Engle communication was penned December 14, 1910, after the contract had been signed. It was then referred to the Board of Public Utilities and a report made by that board several weeks later to the effect that when the matter was officially before it, some action would be taken.

Engle said that he first became interested in the Alessandro-street matter after the citizens in that part of the city lost their transfer privileges. He said that he went to the City Attorney's office for evidence of the "way the job was to be put through." The "celebration" which was held after the signing of the contract, witness declared, was arranged and consummated by railroad officials and did not represent the true feelings of the people of that section. When asked if he had served on a committee to take the matter up with the city officials, he replied that he did not because "I wanted to get what the people of Edendale sent me for, while they wanted to get what the railroad company wanted them to have."

Witness identified the locality involved in what he terms "the job," and the manner in which the people thereabouts were deprived of their rights in a public street, their property depreciated, and their representative sent from pillar to post through the various city departments searching for an ordinance which the evidence reveals was pigeonholed in the desk of the complaining witness, Henderson, for a year and a half, during which time letters were sent from the Mayor's office to the effect that when the ordinance came before the Mayor it would receive his "careful consideration." These letters were written after the Mayor had signed the final ordinance on March 9, 1910—abandoning the street, which ordinance then disappeared, to be found a year and a half later in Henderson's desk.

LOU GUERNSEY.

Louis Guernsey, a Times reporter, provided an insight into the methods used by Henderson in accommodating the public while Henderson was the Mayor's clerk. On one occasion Guernsey was kept waiting for half an hour while politicians were permitted to pass to and from the Mayor's office. At the same time a woman in black, evidently much distressed and extremely anxious for an immediate hearing on account of a sick child, was also kept in the Hendersonian anteroom to await his pleasure in admitting her to the Presence.

Guernsey's visit to the Mayor's office on the occasion in question was for the purpose of talking about the appointment of representative men to go to Washington and continue the battle at the capital for the Los Angeles Harbor. He testified that The Times has been for twenty-five years working for a greater harbor and at the time in question the appointment of several "Bull Moosers" was under contemplation. Witness, by the introduction of the third termer's nom de guerre, probably pried himself into the hall of fame by using the phrase for the first time from a witness stand.

Witness identified the location of Henderson's desk and typewriter, insisting that in reference to the "typewriter" he meant the mechanical device and not the "peach." Under former regimes, witness said, a colored messenger was a part of the furniture of the office, but after Henderson assumed the job this messenger was dismissed. Henderson, he said, was a messenger and the buffer between the Mayor and the public.

TOOK A DROP TOO MUCH.

City Hall Approach Somewhat Disfigured, but Still in the Ring. Chunks Gouged From Steps.

In removing some of the interior steel work from the ancient and honorable pile which is supposed to serve for a City Hall the movers dropped a chunk of Carnegie's best on the stone steps leading into the corridor of the building. Bumpety-bump caromed the steel, and with each bump a piece of stone was neatly gouged out of the right-of-way. When the sidewalk was reached, City Hall approach looked like a chocolate cake imperfectly protected from the small boy of the house.

These steps were put in place long before the flowering of the "concrete age," and each is composed of a long quarried piece of real stone which will be difficult to replace. The "bites" taken from the steps make the antique structure look more dilipidated than before, and even if the injury is patched with concrete it will still resemble a prize crazy quilt at a county fair.

It's only a minor accident, yet it serves to attract unfavorable attention to the old building, much as a missing front tooth makes of its former owner an object of easy identification.

HANSHUE TO START.

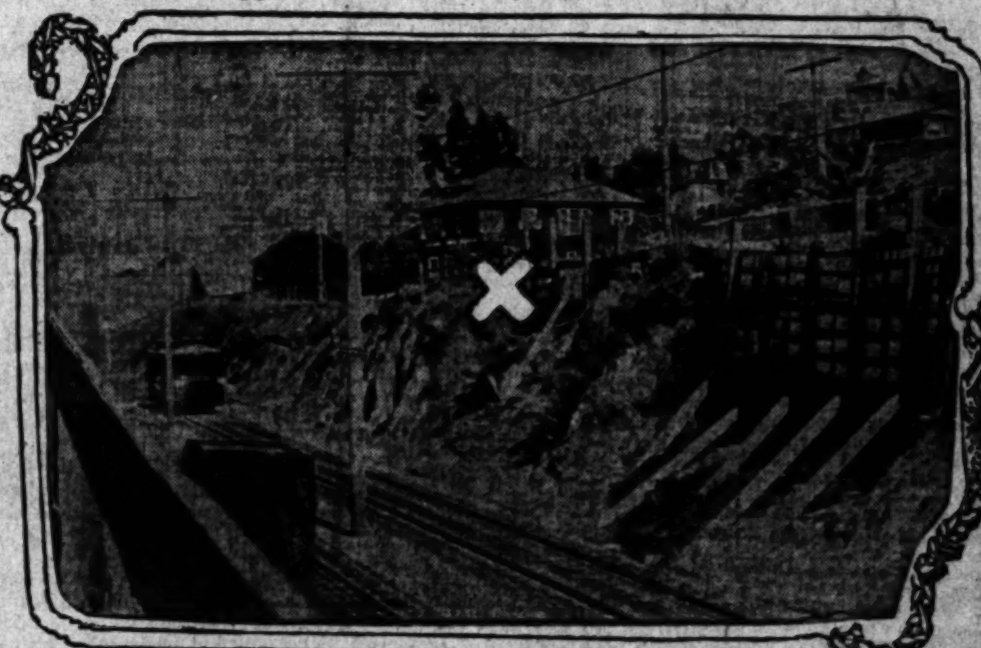
Old-Time Racer Will Handle the Flag at Phoenix Track Races—Part of Programme at State Fair.

George Purdy Bullard, manager of the Phoenix Road Race, and John S. Mitchell, local representative of the Maricopa Automobile Club, have arranged to have Harris Hanshue act as official starter for all the races on the Phoenix track, which will follow the Los Angeles-to-Phoenix road race and form a part of the programme of the first annual Arizona State Fair.

MONORAIL PRESIDENT.

William B. Doddridge, former general manager of the Missouri Pacific, has been chosen president of the Monorail Rapid Transit Company. Charles Cassat Davis, vice-president of the Los Angeles Investment Company, has been elected a director. Doddridge is to be active head of the company, which has adopted the Valentine system for its project.

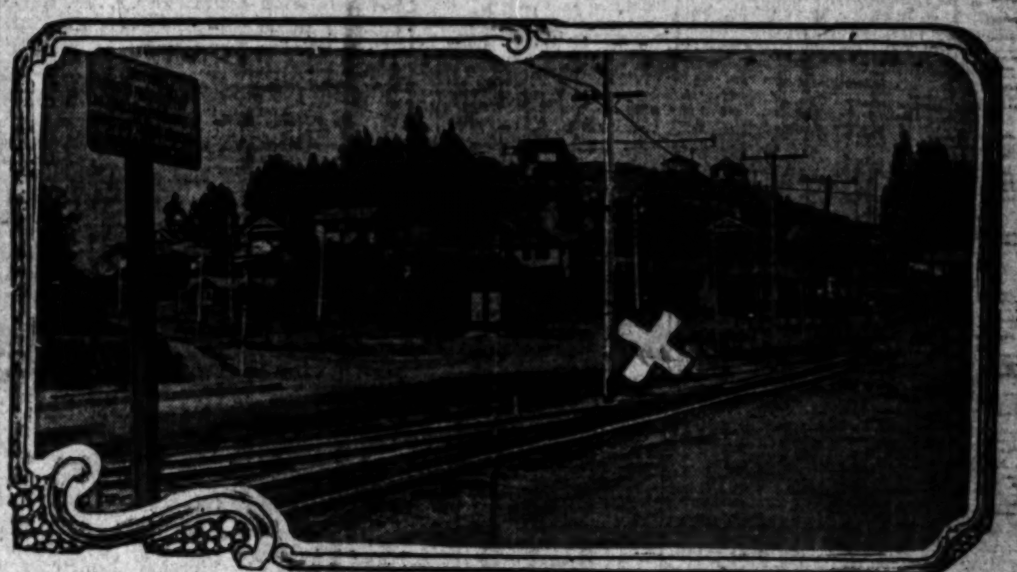
"The Nigger in the Woodpile," Alessandro Street.



The cross is about the location of Baxter street where a bridge is now in place. These pictures were taken by F. E. Evans a short time prior to the passage of the final vacation ordinance which disappeared and came to light again eighteen months later in Frank Henderson's desk. Copies of the pictures were enclosed in a letter written by Evans to the Mayor either on March 8 or March 30, 1910, and which have now disappeared from the files of the Mayor's office. M. L. Wicks placed the Edendale tract upon the market in November, 1902, when he recorded his map, which showed Lake Shore avenue, now Alessandro street, as far north as Baxter street. The railroad company came in one and a half years later, in the spring of 1904, and without any authority from the city made the cut in this street, shown in the pictures, the street having been dedicated in the Wicks map, and accepted by the city.

The law of California makes it a penitentiary offense to secrete a public document, just as it does to alter or erase or mutilate a public document.

The written authorization from the City Attorney's office for the withholding of this "forgotten" ordinance (that was enacted, signed by the Mayor and then stowed away, contrary to law) came after it had been pigeon-holed for a year and a half in Henderson's desk, and even several weeks after it had come to light in consequence of the agitation of the people of Alessandro street and the League of Justice.



Alessandro Street Looking North from Fargo Street

Towards Baxter street. The last house on the right is on the northwest corner of Alessandro and Baxter streets. The cross indicates the location of Fargo street. Observe the fact that the rails are above the street grade, and that vehicles cannot drive across or along the tracks on either side of which is a gutter two or three feet deep, maintained in violation of ordinance No. 18375.

IN LEAD ROLE, SPEAKS ONCE.

Theatrical White Hope Confines Police Court Skit to Single Word. Swats Barber, Latter Peeved.

John Barrymore, "The Man from Home," starring as the "white hope" of theatrical profession since his pugilistic encounter Friday evening in a West Fifth-street barber shop, matinee idol of the Belasco, was arraigned before Police Judge Williams yesterday morning on a complaint sworn to by Martin Bergman, a barber, charging him with assault.

Capt. Murray appeared against Barrymore. He called on the actor in the latter's dressing-room at the theater Friday night and informed him his presence was greatly desired in the Police Court yesterday morning for a one-act melo-comedy skit. Barrymore promised to be on hand before curtain call, and no bail was exacted.

About twenty minutes before his case was called, Barrymore appeared, accompanied by Charles Eyton, manager of the Belasco. They were closely followed by Capt. Murray.

"John Barrymore," called the court when the actor's case was reached a few minutes after 10 o'clock. Barrymore worked his way through the crowd to the bench where justice is dispensed.

"Is that your true name?" asked the court.

The actor nodded.

"You are charged in this complaint with having committed battery on the person of one Martin Bergman; are you guilty or not guilty?"

"Guilty," replied the actor in a voice resembling injured innocence.

That was the only word Barrymore uttered during the arraignment.

"The complaining witness is not here, your honor," said the bailiff. He explained further that Bergman asked that the case be continued as it was not possible for him to be present yesterday.

"I'll pass the case for sentence Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock," said the court. "Will you be here at that time?"

Again Barrymore nodded, rather gloomily.

Barrymore had words with Bergman over a haircut in the latter's shop, and a setto resulted.

COURSE IN APICULTURE.

A special course in bee culture will begin at the University of Southern California on August 19, to continue for a term of three weeks. It will conducted by Prof. Ralph Benton of the State Normal School, a foremost scientific expert apiculturist, and it is anticipated that it will attract many practical bee men and teachers.

And What Not?

CITY TO MAKE CHEESE AND ESTABLISH BANKS?

And Sell Funeral Supplies, Run Pawnshops and Cemeteries, Start Theater and Pension the Aged?—Draft of Proposed Municipal Charter Provides for These Unusual Propositions, With More in Sight.

WOULD you establish a cheese factory in Los Angeles? Beware lest the city "get your goat" through its proposed municipal cheese factories, provided for in the draft of the new city charter.

Is it a butter-making and dairy establishment that you have in mind? Then again beware, for the proposed beneficent paternalism of the new charter includes a system of city dairies, milk plants and butter factories.

In fact, when these propositions were presented to the Charter Revision Committee they were adopted after the statement of a member of the committee that "We might as well put these in, too, as we are proposing to give the city power to do anything and everything that it wants to do or by any possibility might ever want to do." So they did it.

There have been presented from week to week proposed innovations and queer plans for city running until, if they are finally loaded upon the new instrument that is to be submitted to the voters, Los Angeles will have a freak claim upon the attention of the whole country. Its proposed charter will be a curiosity.

GENERAL PLAN.

The general plan proposed is to adopt the commission form of government. Seven commissioners are to be elected, not to any specific positions, but to be assigned after their election to the heads of the various departments by the Mayor, who is to be selected by the seven from among themselves after they are elected.

The charter draft provides that the seven Commissioners shall be designated as follows: The Mayor, who shall be the Commissioner of Public Safety; a Commissioner of Public Utilities, one of public works, one of harbors and transportation, one of finance, one of public welfare, and one of libraries and parks. In addition to these there shall be as officers of the municipality a controller, five members of the Civil Service Board, nine members of the Municipal Art Board, five members of the Board of Education, a City Attorney, a City Prosecutor, or a public defender, a City Clerk and police judges.

The Board of Commissioners is to hold daily sessions and the control and operation of each department is to be placed in the charge of the commissioner at the head thereof, but he shall be subject to the supervisory control of the Board of Commissioners in session.

The compensation of each of the elective officers—the commissioners and the controller—shall be $6000 a year.

While the provision of proportional representation has not been placed in the charter, it is to be submitted as an alternative proposition at the time the charter is submitted to the vote of the people.

This scheme of proportional representation provides for minority representation on the basis of the number of votes cast—so that, by the peculiar workings of chance, a comparatively small element of voters that hold views entirely inimical to those held by a majority of the voters of the city might get a representation on the board of seven commissioners and be placed at the head of a department where he could assert his peculiar political views in the conduct of his office and out of harmony with the real sentiment of the municipality.

The City Controller is to be the general accountant of the city—its expert on financial and statistical affairs. This official is also to be elected by the people. All other city employees are to be appointive.

The initiative, referendum and recall provisions are retained in the new charter.

FUNERALS AND THEATER.

The charter draft provides that the city may establish bureaus of funeral supplies. Provision is made for public forums at designated points throughout the city. The city may also establish its own theater; it may establish its own banks, savings depositories and pawnshops; it is to continue the publication of a municipal newspaper. It may run ceme-

The Children's Hour.

TOWER O' BABEL BOILED SMALL.

Where All Nations Meet in a Happy Play Time.

Vacation School a Miniature of Entire World.

Joyously Bubbling Crucible to Make Americans.

BY ALMA WHITAKER.

I have just discovered the Castelar-street summer school—why, it's better than a tour round the world. Talk about cosmopolitanism! Whole regiments of babies of every known nationality, all sizes and shapes, wee Indian damsels about two feet high with names three feet long; small Roumanian charmers of perhaps three summers, all eyelashes; Mexican tots with Pavlova figures and eyes as big as saucers; Italian laddies with voices soft as down; Spaniards, Russians, Servians, Irish, English, American, Hebrews, Swedes, Austrians, Germans, Africans—and all working and playing in peace and concord!

School do they call it? Why, that building is the fairy castle where all little boys' and girls' dreams come true, where work is the most most delightful of play, where hard-worked mothers permit their babies to go as a reward for good behavior. True, very few of us can speak each other's language and only one superior person here and there can understand teacher's, but what does that matter? We are all experts in pantomime and it is lots of fun discovering what teacher means when she makes the funny signs and says the funnier words.

I happened right in the middle of the baseball match and watched the working of a miracle. There was the home team and the visiting team, the latter from the Macy-street school, and to the ordinary sight they appeared the veriest young hooligans. That is where the miracle comes in, for these boys were playing a well-organized, scientific game, excited, enthusiastic if you like, but positively playing fair, no quarreling, no rowdyism, no swearing—good sportsmen every one of them and not a teacher or disciplinarian of any kind in sight. Mrs. Estelle E. Smith, the head of the Castelar school, has solved the problem of discipline, for she simply puts them on their honor and trusts them implicitly. The plan works beyond the wildest hopes of the authorities and the best possible discipline is kept at Castelar by an entire absence of the disciplinarian!

As I know you will be anxious, I will add that the home team won by 26 to 3, afterwards entertaining the visitors in style to the penny lunch!

IN THE NURSERY.

Then there is the nursery in charge of Mrs. Lockwood, where all the little mothers—girlies of 9 and 10 who would otherwise have to stay at home to mind the baby—leave their tiny charges during school hours. There were thirty there when I went—thirty little roly-poly babies of both sexes and not one crying! I know mothers of one and two babies who start talking about nerves if they have to mind their own precious for one whole morning!

It is quaint to see the little mothers come in in the most matter of fact way to fetch their charges home—many of them hardly larger than the baby they carry. But they all look so proud and happy, and all the babies I saw were such profound philosophers that one felt our pity would be entirely wasted.

The domestic-science room under the enthusiastic guidance of Miss Eda Loomis captured my particular fancy—oh, why wasn't I taught domestic science? Those blessed babies, shy little Indian boys, plump little Mexican girls, white-faced little Russians, few of them speaking a word of English, were all busy planning and urnishing houses. It was perfectly fascinating. A wooden box, cardboard, paper and some pieces of wood formed the nucleus of the houses. The dear mites are taught to cut the windows in the most suitable position, to clean out the house and to make the mop they clean it with, to sweep well, and make the broom they sweep with, to calcimine the walls, put up the curtains, arrange for the chimneys—just everything that can remotely come under the heading of house-planning and housekeeping. By the end of the summer they will have completely furnished little houses with every last article and device made by their own little hands.

Another oom under Miss A. McMahon, devotel to sloyd, weaving and metal work. Mostly boys here but not very big boys, considering the clever things they were doing. One lad was weaving a beautiful rug, one was beating copper trays, and another had made a perfect table of mission design. hT yedo it all themselves, even to drawing their own designs. They are told and shown but never helped, the work is their very own.

S. O. Cripe had a wonderful room in which little boys were taught to mend and make their own shoes—there were some wonderful specimens of antique footgear undergoing repair—and to do all kinds of leather work. The children simply love it and the pride they take in their handiwork is lovely to see.

Music and laughter reached us from a room in which Miss Thomas was teaching a large class to dance the old folk dances, with Miss Banks playing the merriest of tunes. Many of those kiddies would put professional dancers to shame, so agile, so graceful and so entirely unconscious were they.

Of sterner aspect but none the less popular, was the room in which Miss Bertha Myers was teaching boys and girls typewriting and book-keeping and the earnestness of the young students in this room was very marked. They were in all stages of progress and deeply ambitious.

Miss Hawley's clay modelling room is filled to overflowing with future Michelangelos or at least Auguste Rodins. How the little fingers love to feel the soft clay responding to their touch and their little eyes glow as the vase, the shell, the candlestick materializes. They never want to go home, the days are never long enough to create all the masterpieces their small heads conjure up.

Then there is Miss Hurley's dressmaking department where the girls are all taught to make their own clothes and really it is wonderful to watch small girls making up all sorts of useful garments, quite unaided. Miss Jenning's room is on the same order for the younger kiddies, who are taught to make their doll's clothes so perfectly that they are really learning to make their own. It is so odd to see wee mites working away earnestly and proudly at sewing machines larger than themselves. Some of them are as at home with sewing machines as though they had been in the trade for twenty years.

The basketry room was another fascinating spot with small quaint little kiddies doing wonderful work. The very small ones were making doll's sweaters—and I just wished I was a doll, I can tell you. Here, too, they were making rugs by hand on frames, of a thick yarn not unlike Navajo rugs, the children designing and carrying out their own patterns.

But it was in the kitchen we lingered longest. Fancy the joy of watching thirty small girls make thirty small cakes from start to finish. The boys had made theirs in the morning and were carrying them proudly home in bits of The Times—a fact I noted with much approval. Such dear kiddies the girls looked in their little aprons and their important air. Cake day is the grandest of all. Usually "useful and eco-

Seven Babies of Six Different Nationalities.

THINK OF THE HELLOS REPRESENTED HERE.

Huge Pile of Sunset 'Phone Directories, being a large part of the seventy-five thousand copies just printed by the Times-Mirror Printing and Binding House, which also turned out about the same number of copies for the Home company. The books of both companies weigh approximately one hundred and eighty tons. Piled one on top of the other they would reach twelve thousand feet skyward, towering over two thousand feet above Old Baldy.

ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY THOUSAND telephone directories, containing 180 tons of "hello talk," and 100,000 names of subscribers, are now being distributed by the Pacific Telegraph and Telephone Company of this city.

This mountain of books is indicative of the great size and marvelous growth of Los Angeles when it is considered that twenty-five years ago there were only 410 telephones in use in this city and nineteen in the county.

The work of delivering these books to the 100,000 subscribers in the city and collecting the old books is to be completed tomorrow. The California Messenger Company, which has the contract for delivery and collection of the books of both companies, has employed 100 men at the work for the past week. Fifty automobile trucks and teams have been used.

The Pacific directory consists of 75,000 copies, each containing 460 pages. Its directory, published six months ago, consisted of 65,000 copies, each containing 332 pages. This shows the development of the city and the phone systems.

The Home telephone issue consists of about 75,000 copies, each containing 474 pages. In 1907 the Home had 15,000 telephone stations and a directory circulation of 20,000. Today it has approximately 50,000 subscribers, a gain of 35,000 stations in five years.

In 1895, Los Angeles, with a population of 75,000, had one telephone exchange and 1500 telephones. Five years later, 1900, the population had increased to 102,000, with about 5000 stations as against an estimated population of 450,000 today, and 100,000 stations.

Nearly 400 rolls of paper—about 1800 miles—were used in the directories. The books are just one inch thick, and if placed on top of each other would tower more than 12,000 feet high, over 2000 feet above Mt. Baldy.

Each company has a force of twelve men constantly busy, keeping the listings up-to-date, installing new stations, removing old names and changing numbers. Over 60,000 changes are made every six months. There are nearly 2,000,000 calls every twenty-four hours on both systems.

The New York Telephone Company's directory, recently issued, contains 780 pages, less than the total number of pages in the two Los Angeles telephone books.

Each year the Los Angeles telephone books have been growing as the city expands, and the number of subscribers increases, and as a consequence more books are issued every six months when the directories are revised. The size and growth of the telephone subscription is a safe index to the city's prosperity.

The directories were printed by the Times-Mirror Printing and Binding House.

The delivery is made in accordance with routes which have been previously prepared, so that there is no delay when the books come from the printer. The old books are gathered up wherever possible, as it is important that they be withdrawn from use on account of the many changes of numbers. These old books are ground up to make a cheaper grade of paper. The work of tying the old books in bundles preparatory to shipping, has kept three men busy for ten days."

TOWER O' BABEL.

national" dishes hold the bill of fare but there had been so much yearning for prowess in cake making that Miss R. I. Schrock, the cooking mistress, could no longer resist the appeal. So we saw thirty cakes popped into the oven all duly bearing a number—goodness me, that number is the most important part of the whole proceeding—and thirty proud embryo cooks take them home for the delectation of their families. I wouldn't have missed it for anything.

The vegetabe garden is a source of great pride to the youngsters. Here they are all taught to have to grow vegetables scientifically, girls and boys alike, and they are allowed to have all they raise. One youth was walking off with his blouse bulging with Swiss chard as we left. If "Back to the Land" is to be the cry of the future, it is one of the best omens that all these children love gardening and the tiniest tot to the biggest boy and girl, all do their share enthusiastically.

Enthusiasm is the key-note of the summer school. It seems unbelievable that this little polyglot crowd of mighty atoms could be made to work so happily, so joyously together with so little friction. The children all go to the school voluntarily and it is noteworthy that they all want to learn as many things as they can crowd in. Compared to their poor and often sad homes, the summer school is a veritable paradise.

The arts are not forgotten either. Miss Ronan teaches music in all its varied branches to a keenly critical crowd. She gives an example on, say, the guitar or the mandolin, and then each child is allowed to try and it is amazing what talent some of them show.

There are rooms, those of Mrs. Anthony Fullerton, Miss Paine and Miss Woodan, where the ordinary studies are taught to backward kiddies, and here again one was impressed with the harmony, the smiling radiance of happiness that seemed to pervade things. Queer little Indian babies with long lank black hair will stand smilingly silent and stroke teacher's arm as a mark of affection, the while teacher endeavors to explain the more elementary mathematical problems by pantomime!

Oh, the silent and wonderful adoration some of those fortunate teachers inspire. It is almost painful at times for the little foreigners can say so little and their emotions must be expressed somehow or explode. Hence the arm stroking, bunches of flowers, the little beads and trinkets, and the tremendous sacrifice of say, an old [illegible], as a gift, by a boy pupil. Teacher is called upon to be supremely tactful as you may imagine. But the teachers of summer school are all sweet women who love their work—that is half the secret of its success. This year three State Normal graduates are lending the Casa school their aid, just willingly helping in any department where they are needed, doing any task that is assigned to them.

WON'T TAKE BACK HIS GOLD.

Redondo Beach Man Says He Can't Remember Having Given Counterfeit Coin—Secret Service Busy.

Secret Service Operative Hazen is investigating the appearance of spurious $5 coins at Redondo Beach.

Frank Smith called at the Federal building yesterday with one of the counterfeits, which he took in change at a Redondo Beach restaurant about two weeks ago. He never had occasion to use it until Thursday, when he tried to pass it on his butcher, only to find that it is worthless. He at once took it to the man who had given it to him. This man said he could not remember about it and refused to make it good.

This is not the first case reported to Hazen and an effort will be made to locate the source of the counterfeits.

The coins are poor imitations. They are evidently new, but have already lost their brightness and are poorly molded and milled. It is believed they are the work of an amateur.

The arrest of George K. Osborne, a confessed counterfeiter, a few days ago by Hazen, cleared the mystery of the appearance of counterfeit dimes, quarters and half-dollars in small shops here. It is not believed, however, that Osborne has been engaged recently in the manufacture of counterfeit gold coins, although he served terms at Auburn and Joliet for making $5 pieces in New York and Chicago. A complete search of his home on West Eleventh street did not disclose any work indicating the molding of gold in any denomination.

NOT NEEDED.

"An easy guide to the stars" is the way a new book is advertised. If somebody will write a work which will be an easy guide to the earth, telling how to plant both feet upon terra firma and keep them there, it will be much appreciated.

GREAT GRAFT.

The book publishing industry of New York City is responsible for an annual production which sells for more than $30,000,000. Persons who read some of these books may suspect the publishers of obtaining money under false pretenses.

INVERSIONS.

There was once a poet named Catallus. Somebody charged that his verses were immodest. He replied: "A dutiful poet must be chaste himself, but his verses need not be." The modern poet seems sometimes to have a contrary practice.

SUBDIVIDING THEM.

The Chinese military commanders want President Yuan to establish a military dictatorship. It is unfair to condemn or to retard all of China because the outlying provinces may be troublesome. A military police force for the belligerent districts should be sufficient.

A DOUBTFUL COMMODITY.

A New York department store advertises that its clerks speak twelve foreign languages. If they also spoke English this would be a wonderful institution indeed. English in a department store, however, would certainly be a dreadful shock to its patrons. The surprise might prevent them from prosecuting bargains.

COMPLETING THE CIRCUIT.

Portland business men will raise capital to establish an oriental steamship service from their port. Other Coast cities might well join in the enterprise. The trade of the Far East will come in handy in connection with the Panama Canal. The Pacific Coast is open to the business of the world, and it must be willing to go anywhere after it.

DISGUSTED.

It was officially established that a man who died at Tuxpan, Mexico, was 185 years old. We suppose he got discouraged about the revolutionary situation and quit the game because he had no hope of living to see an end to the Mexican disturbance. His experience in 185 years taught him what a Latin republic revolution is really like when it gets started.

GOT THE MONEY.

United States Senator Marcus Aurelius Smith of Arizona looks out for the interests of his constituents, even if he is a Democrat and was over-zealous in his Marathon debate with the colored brother in the hotel elevator. The House appropriation for surveys was $700,000, and Mark and Senator Fall of New Mexico coaxed the Senate into making it $850,000, mostly for the benefit of the two new States.

KEEPING AT IT.

The officials of a western railroad have been holding conferences with citizens of the towns along the road in the course of a get-together tour they have been making. This is very good as far as it goes, but the big officials should do more to inspire local superintendents with this attitude, and when the local superintendent wants favors for his division they should respond in the spirit of this policy.

GALSWORTHY'S VIEW.

John Galsworthy says that "Democracy at present offers the spectacle of a man running down the road followed at a more or less respectful distance by his own soul." So far, so good. A man should know that his body is not himself, but that he himself lives in his body. Once assured of this, there should be no further separation of himself from himself. The only good in knowing this is that the two may appear as one and work in harmony as one.

SOUND PREACHING.

Tom Sharkey was once a prize fighter. Now he keeps a saloon. He accuses boy athletes of being the greatest robbers of the saloon till. He says that every schoolboy is taught that if he wants to be an athlete he must not drink or smoke, and that the schoolboy is growing up without either of these vices. This is not only a logical temperance talk, but it promises the only sane, constitutional and permanent answer to the liquor problem. Legislation cannot stop a man from buying a drink, but common sense can and will do so.

THE LADDER OF WEALTH.

Of course the chief advantage of being poor is the pleasure of exchanging work for money, the chief advantage of riches, exchanging money for work; in both cases the accomplishment of work being the main blessing. On the whole, the poor, since they are in the majority, must have the best of the bargain, as the voice of the majority rules. If riches were the one thing desirable, the poor would be in the minority tomorrow.

Poets have often sung the pleasures of poverty and sometimes endured the pains. No true poet ever raved about the pleasures or pains of a big banking account; because no true poet ever has written from hearsay or on second-hand information. Therefore, since poets have been invariably poor, the invariably poor have a better chance to become poets. So at the start in one of the most genteel of modern minor occupations the poor have a decided advantage over their richer brethren. When we compare the poor with the rich we speak of the moderately poor and the moderately rich. The extreme agony of the multi-millionaire and the last pang of the starving slum-dweller are exceptional and morbid and should not enter into a discussion of the law of averages.

We also see that, whereas it seems impossible for a thoroughly rich man ever to become decently poor again, the most hopelessly poverty-stricken may by a shuffle of the cards become at any time indecently rich. The poor man is really the man at the top of the ladder, the rich man is the one at the bottom. In a twinkling the poor man may plunge down into a depth of riches, but the once rich man must climb slowly and painfully up to the sublimity of poverty. Andrew Carnegie has been climbing the ladder now for a long time, but is still far, far away from the top. Rockefeller can never get as high as the first rung; he is too terribly handicapped. The only reason why there are so many poor at the top of the ladder and so few rich at the bottom is that the average man has not the skill to dive or the courage to plunge. Perhaps the real reason why the majority of people remain poor is because it is so much easier.

Through a superiority of allegory many words have lost their significance. High and low, great and small, have become confused. So that what we call the highest society is occasionally the lowest. "Jinks in high society" is a misnomer; there could be no "jinks" in high society. Meaning what jinks usually implies when used in this connection. Also many may be blest with the greatest wealth who have the least of riches.

Climbing the ladder of success has long been a favorite metaphor with those who preach the so-called gospel of getting on in the world. Most of these writers, showing men how to succeed in everything, appear from the sort of advice they offer to have succeeded in nothing themselves. That is why the metaphor of the ladder has been used in so topsy-turvy a fashion. The real ladder of success has the successful rich man at the foot and the successful poor man at the top.

Does anyone doubt this? If the ladder represents worthy ideals, to what figure should we be climbing? Surely at the top of the ladder we should place the figure of one—the most worldly poor—the most blessedly rich, the world has ever known—the figure of Jesus of Nazareth.

THE PROPOSED STEAL.

To condense the lengthy opinion of Atty.-Gen. Webb in a few paragraphs and place it in working harness, it appears:

1. That at the primary election to be held in September candidates for Senator and Assemblymen who are nominated as Republicans by Republicans, and hold-over Republican Senators, will constitute a convention to nominate thirteen electors who will be thereafter designated on the official ballot as Republicans.

2. That after the legislative convention it will be the privilege of 13,600 Republican voters who did not participate in the September primary, to nominate by petition thirteen electors, and if this privilege is availed of those thirteen electors will go upon the official ballot as "independents."

3. It will be equally the privilege—in case regular Republicans carry the September primaries—for 13,600 "progressives" who did not vote at the September primary to nominate by petition as progressives or "independents" thirteen electors who will vote for Roosevelt.

The knavery proposed by the Rooseveltians is to class in the first instance as Republicans and to elect at the September primary as Republicans candidates for the Legislature who are not Republicans, for they will have repudiated the nominations of the Republican National Convention and proposed to support the nominees of the 5th of August "progressive" party.

In brief, the conspiracy is to use the name of Republican to nominate as Republicans thirteen electors who will vote for Roosevelt.

If this scheme is carried out the only resource of those who are swindled will be to obtain the names to petitions of 13,600 voters who have not voted at all in September for the placing upon the official ballot as "independents" the names of thirteen electors who will vote for President Taft.

ROOSEVELT'S PLATFORM.

Col. Roosevelt has outlined his platform. He has telegraphed it to his organs throughout the country. He says candidly that "it will be impossible to work out for many years to come the reforms in political, industrial and business life" which he will prescribe for insertion in the platform. But he also believes that "if a beginning is now made" (by electing him President,) "two or three points will be made now, and within ten or fifteen years hence"—(or say sixteen years, which will make four more terms for Roosevelt) "the next steps will suggest themselves."

The colonel avers his belief that "most of the leaders of the other parties in their hearts believe in the measures that the colonel will advocate." But, lacking his magnificent courage, "they are afraid to stand publicly for such beliefs at this time."

The platform which the colonel has prepared for the 5th of August convention is filled—if one may use the word filled to denote emptiness—with sagacious omissions. Those who believe in protection to American industry and who expected the colonel to insert that doctrine in his platform, will say to him as the Irishman, who had descended from the train at the railroad station and who delayed re-embarking until the train had pulled out, shouted to the conductor on the rear platform: "Hould on, me boy. You've got a passenger aboard that's been left behind."

With respect to building more battleships the Roosevelt platform is to be silent. Personally the colonel is in favor of strengthening the navy. But, in deference to the opinions of voters who are more parsimonious than patriotic, he will seal his lips on that question.

The colonel is the originator of a grand reform in jurisprudence. It consists in referring Supreme Court decisions on constitutional questions to the people at the ballot box for reversal or approval. But this proposition has not met with a hospitable reception anywhere. Even pedoneum-wafting Johnson balks at it. So the colonel has banished it from his curriculum.

The colonel is graciously willing that voters who do not look favorably upon the initiative, the referendum and the recall may still vote for him, so these measures will not find a place in his platform.

The colonel announces that he will incorporate into the "Progressive" platform four great features. The first of these is "Diversification of industries." That phrase sounds well. It has a rotundity which should be given effect by being uttered in basso profundo tones. It has the advantage of being like the place where "oats, peas, beans and barley grows"—a place that "you nor I nor nobody knows." What industries are to be diversified, and how they are to be diversified, and who is to diversify them are questions left to the private interpretation of the voter illuminated by his private imagination.

"A minimum wage scale for women" is the next Rooseveltian plank in the Rooseveltian platform. Exactly what the President or the Federal government has, or can have to do with "the wage scale for women," is not clear to the common understanding. Will the bonnet-makers of Boston, or the corset-concocters of Chicago, or the dress-designers of Denver, or the adorable artificers of angels' apparel in this angels' city, or the wily waitresses of the Willamette Valley cities, or the sweet sirens of San Diego have their wage scales affected by anything that any President of the United States can do or leave undone?

The third plank of the colonel's proposed platform is a "six-day working week with a maximum of eight hours a day for employees in any continuing industry."

Everybody of whatever politics will agree to that. Everybody, in fact, agreed to it long since—except journalists who sometimes work sixteen hours a day. In fact, in many industries the workers work only five and a half days in a week. On Saturday afternoons they attend the baseball games, and on Sundays they worship God—or Gambrinus.

The fourth and last plank in the colonel's platform is "an attack upon the Democratic platform." To that plank The Times lends its cheerful and enthusiastic concurrence. It cries to the colonel in his own mother tongue: "Whoop it up, colonel. Punch Woodrow Wilson in the short ribs. Close his peepers. Sock him one for his mother. Dig him in his diaphragm."

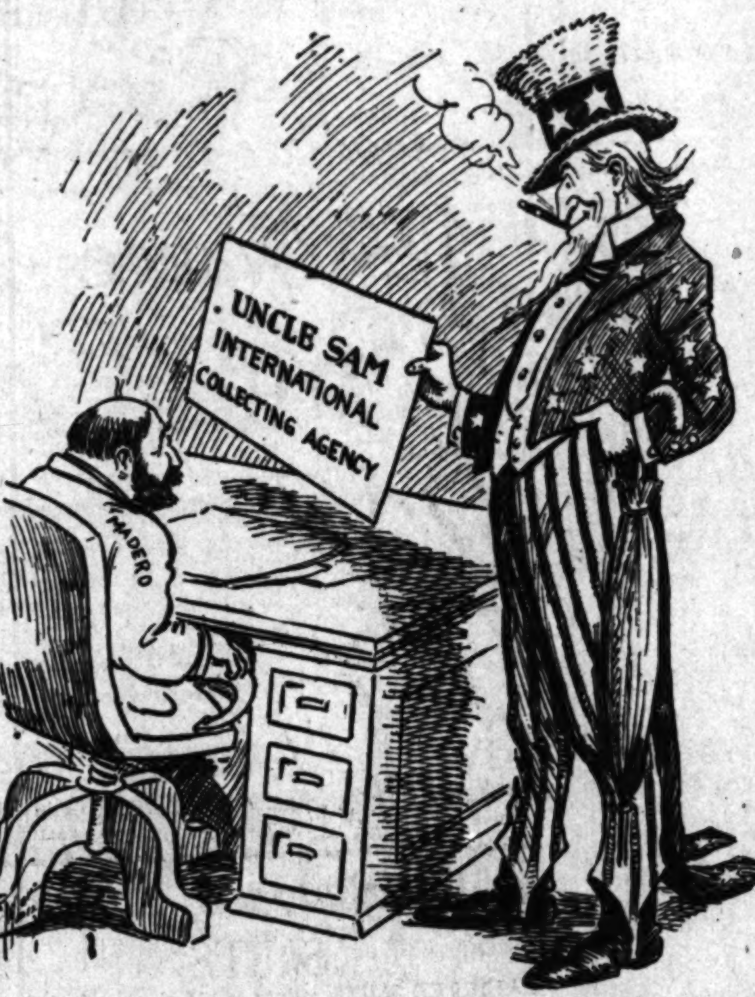
The planks in the colonel's platform are few. Its omissions are many. He does not speak a good word for the Lord's prayer. He fails to mention the Ten Commandments. He has not one kind thing to say of the North Pole, and he fails either to denounce or indorse the doctrine laid down in the thirty-fourth and thirty-fifth verses of the fourteenth chapter of First Corinthians.

The colonel in his authorized interview telegraphed to the "progressive" press says: "Since our (my?) withdrawal, the Republican party has consisted of bosses and those who follow them through folly, fear, or prejudice."

This characterization by the colonel of those who will not vote for him as fools, cowards or obstinate asses, might have been expected from a man who calls President Taft a "pickpocket."

The attention of the State Humane Association is respectfully but firmly called to the condition of the Bull Moose boom in California.

Will It Come to This?



THE MUZZLING ORDINANCE.

No true friend of the dog, no lover of animal life, which includes the human race, will object to a general muzzling ordinance for canines during the hot months of the year or while hydrophobia is a possible menace. There may be—there probably are—ninety and nine harmless dogs in the city of Los Angeles to every one vicious cur. Yet it were better that these ninety and nine should suffer the inconvenience of temporary restraint than that one human child should be subjected to the risk of rabies.

The streets belong to the public, and every citizen using these public streets has a right to be reasonably safeguarded against avoidable dangers. Owners who wish their dogs to share the privilege of the streets along with the ordinary plain citizen must expect these dogs to be amenable to laws provided for the public safety. All dogs are not vicious nor are all men burglars; but that is no reason against muzzles or policemen. Dog owners have no more right to complain at having the dangerous activities of their dogs held in check than a car owner has at having the too speedy ambitions of his automobile restrained by ordinance.

Dogs are not a necessity in a city, they are a luxury. Life and health are necessities, not luxuries. It has never been considered good equity that the necessities of the many should be jeopardized for the luxuries of the few. A muzzle properly designed and properly fitted is no torture to a dog; the worst muzzle is not nearly so cruel as to allow a neglected beast to run the streets during the hot hours of the day with no supervision, no shade and no water.

The dog owners who object to muzzling can keep their pets fenced in on some convenient back lot where there is plenty of shade and plenty of water provided for their comfort, so that those who prefer children to curs may let those children safely have their share of the public thoroughfares. The dog himself, too, would probably prefer this arrangement to enduring the heat and dust and torment of the open streets.

MEXICAN RAILROADS.

It is generally believed that the revolutions in Mexico have seriously and disastrously affected its industrial conditions. Whether this be true or not with respect to farming, mining and manufactures, it is not true with respect to railroads. An announcement has just been made by the National Railways of Mexico of construction work and the building of new branch lines. The New York correspondent of the Boston Monitor says:

> "Although business has been greatly depressed in the State of Chihuahua, in Northern Mexico, and in the States of Puebla, Morelos and Guerrero, in the southern part of the country, and although railroad traffic in those sections has been seriously interrupted because of the destruction of track and bridges by the rebels in the north and the bandits in the south, the business of the country generally and railroad traffic have not been materially affected. This is clearly shown by the earnings of the National lines throughout the revolution. The gross receipts week by week have been in the neighborhood of $1,000,000, which is a good showing, even under normal conditions."

It has been supposed that the insurrections had paralyzed, if not wrecked, railroad business in Mexico. If such had been the case the gross receipts of the roads would not have averaged $1,000,000 per week.

On June 1 there were 1116 miles of railroad branches in process of construction. One of these will connect the cities of Tampico and Vera Cruz. Another will connect Tampico with Matamoras. Another will run from Durango to a point sixty-seven miles north of the city of Zacatecas. There are several other branches on which bridging, grading and track laying have been finished.

The Orozco insurrection appears to be nearly at an end. No better evidence of its speedy termination could be offered than the present activity in railroad building.

Glad to know that Mrs. Hetty Green, at the age of 78 years, has been baptized. But the old lady was originally a Quaker and the Society of Friends sees no necessity for baptism. And we have always understood that Hetty never had anything to do with watered-stock.

STREAKS OF WIT.

A Fateful Number.

[Boston Transcript:] Baseball Captain: You shouldn't be so hard on the boys. They played very well. The game was lost through just one error.

Manager: Yes, so was Paradise.

Must Do Something.

[Kansas City Journal:] "What are the wild waves saying, mother?"

"I do not know, my child."

"But why do they dance all day long?"

"Well, my child, they cannot play bridge."

Where Obligation Ends.

[Washington Star:] "Are you under any obligations to that great capitalist?"

"None whatever," replied the candidate. "I have done him the favor of permitting him to contribute to my campaign, thereby giving an indorsement of his high character for which he should be eternally grateful."

Why Women Take All Day.

[Louisville Courier Journal:] "I wonder what has become of my husband. Three days ago I sent him to match a sample at a department store. He hasn't been seen since."

"I saw him yesterday. He was at the third counter of the fourteenth aisle, and was just starting for the fourteenth counter of the third aisle."

Understands Women.

[Life:] Lottie: How does that candidate on the suffrage ticket get so many votes?

Hattie: She addresses her 80-year-old constituents as 'Girls.'"

May Learn This Time.

"So scarce that Grace is learning to swim out of a magazine."

Told the Truth.

[London Punch:] Plain but Wealthy Spinster (to impecunious suitor, as they walk through a portion of their great estate:) Do you truly love me, Clarence?

Clarence: I worship the very ground you walk on.

Nobody Else Touched.

"Yes; I was one of the seconds."

"Anybody touched?"

"I was touched for the fares out and back."

Rather Plain.

[Boston Traveler:] Maud: I'm told I get my good looks from my mother.

Ethel: I wouldn't repeat that if I were you.

Maud: Why not?

Ethel: People will think your mother was stingy.

Not a Los Angeles Road.

[Birmingham Age-Herald:] "What is this?"

"The picture of an automobile going at high speed."

"I don't see anything but a cloud of dust."

"The automobile's inside the cloud of dust."

Frequently So.

[Judge:] Little Brother: What's etiquette?

Little Bigger Brother: It's saying "No, thank you" when you want to holler "Gimme!"

THE CALL.

Come hither, all ye Faithful, with energy and vim,
And build a brand-new Party made up of You and Him,
Or, if you think it better, and possibly more true,
Reverse the style and make it the clan of Him and You.
"The Himocratic party"—how's that, now, for a name,
To win an everlasting, a near-immortal fame,
With which to fight great battles, and every foeman trim,
Beneath such doughty leaders as Jim,
And Tim,
And Him!

From 'Frisco's distant mountains, from Texas's coral strand,
Flock hither, oh, ye Faithful, and by your Hero stand;
Fight on for Him and country; your watchword, "He Is It!"
He am the Sovereign Peepul; all others they are Nit!
From high hills of Ohio, from Flinnsylvania fair,
From Kansas and Wyoming—in fact, from everywhere—
Gird up your loins and follow, let naught your courage dim
While you've such doughty leaders as Jim,
And Tim,
And Him!

No matter what your Platform. His Will will do for that!
In clarion tones he'll sound it through his historic Hat!
Vex not your minds with thinking out platforms of your own;
He'll send you all fresh principles each day by telephone.
Sit tight and merely whistle His Himtune fresh and new,
In place of Yankee-Doodle, "O Waddle-Teddy-Doo."
There is no need to bother your mind with problems grim
While you've such doughty leaders as Jim,
And Tim,
And Him!

Somewhere somebody needs us—we do not know just where—
It may be in Alaska or down in Delaware,
For something is the matter, we do not know just what,
But we and they are victims of some kind of a plot.
Somebody's done somebody, we do not know just whom,
But Himocrats are sounding their everlasting doom—
The Hosts of Armageddon, with ample Cherubim,*
Are flocking to the conflict with Jim,
And Tim,
And Him!

*Angels.

The "Blues."

"Grit" will do more against the "blues" than all the coddling in existence.

Don't give in. Laugh at yourself. Tell yourself life is a good and wonderful thing and you are mighty lucky to be allowed a look-in with the rest.

Jolly yourself a bit, too. Recall anything nice that you've heard about and dandle it affectionately.

Once you begin to cheer up the least little mite you've conquered. No blues, however deep their dye, but fade before the tiniest of chuckles, and once more you are wholesome, normal and energetic.

Pen Points: By the Staff

No, the Wilson letter of acceptance will not be sent to his old college chum, Col. Joline.

The lumbermen of Washington and Oregon are organizing. That ought to be pop'lar.

Easy, there, you candidates, don't crowd; keep in line; no, you can't hire a small boy to hold your place.

The Bull Moose gathering will be held in Orchestra Hall, Chicago. It will not be a convention, but a solo.

In parts of Mexico they are hanging the rebels. It is possible, however, it is the same lot they hanged last week.

Miss Helen Taft will make a horseback trip through the Glacier National Park. Her distinguished father is also in the saddle.

Another big business block to [illegible] Broadway. They are growing like the famous beanstalk down which Jack clambered.

Here it is again, the familiar face of the historic "triple alliance," in the newspaper dispatches. Where has it been all this time?

That young Hollander, Cornelius [illegible]ker, ought to have also confessed that there are entirely too many letter "s's" in his name.

Six million dollars a year for golf balls, but then the folks who use the pesky things can afford the expense. So don't let us worry.

We might solve the high-cost-of-living problem by eating and wearing less, but who will keep the doctors and the police off the beat?

Spooning in the city parks of Sacramento is now done under police surveillance. That ought to make a great demand for jobs on the force.

An amateur aviator up-State fell out of his machine the other day into his own back yard and now we presume he is complaining of his hard lot.

The Premier of China wants to resign because he has lost somebody's confidence. Such a man is much too sensitive for the demands of modern politics.

It will be observed that there are just thirteen letters in Woodrow Wilson. But that is not the only thing that will [illegible] him over the political ropes.

And Tid-bit Tom Marshall, he, too, will hold on to the Governorship of Indiana and take no chances. It is well while one's head is in the clouds to keep a foot on the ground.

Tom is the first name of the Democratic candidate for Vice-President. It used to proceed Woodrow in the name of the leader of the ticket. Now watch President [illegible] beat the Tom-Tom.

The American athletes stopped at Berlin and captured all of the prizes within reach. And the Germans took their defeats like game sports and did not whine like the English cheapskates.

It is rather unfair for the clergy at the Huntington Beach camp meeting to denounce Mrs. Lot, the first woman mentioned in the Bible who looked back—perhaps to see what the other sisters had on.

In the murder of the gambler, Rosenthal, in New York the automobile played a sinister part. Some of these days murderers will be making their escape by the aeroplane. Yet we cannot condemn either invention.

Just in order to keep things moving the friends and opponents of President Taft are reproducing the Chicago convention. The address of Representative Mondell in defense of the President left nothing to be said on the subject.

Australia has joined in the protest against the United States permitting vessels flying its own flag to pass through the Panama Canal free of tolls. Perhaps the land of the kangaroo wants a similar concession for the Australian navy.

Old "Pop" Geers, the greatest harness horse driver in the country, is going down the line in the Grand Circuit, winning all of the big purses. "Pop" has carried off enough of the velvet in the last ten years to buy the entire State of Tennessee.

The sum total of the information obtained by the Congressional committee in regard to campaign funds is that it takes a pile of money to make a fight for the Presidency. But it is quite possible that the members of the committee themselves might have furnished some illuminating information as to the cost of the political game.

The address of General Manager Park of the Illinois Central Railway on the subject of Socialism, in which he declared that the railroads had temporized too long with socialism, syndicalism and other isms, was to the point. No other corporations have suffered from the avarice of labor leaders so much as the railroads, and Mr. Park is in a position to talk by the book. Labor itself must purge itself of these un-American features.

ADRIFT.

Sea line and sky line unending;
The sun like a huge ball of fire;
Shadows of torment impending
Ere loosing the body's desire.

The twilight comes swiftly—[illegible]
And, lo, from the waves' topmost height
The face of the waters is hidden
In soft, clinging garments of night.

Sunlight and moonlight and starlight,
And under the measureless dome
Naught falls to greet the keen sight
Save stars and dark water and foam.

Desolate sea and one pale star,
(And the wind—it is rising fast)
Will THIS wave sweep the Outer Bar
And win to the haven at last?

"Off again, on again, going again, Flannigan," explains the situation as far as the candidacy of Lyman Farwell is concerned, first for the Assembly, then not for that but for Supervisor, now not for that but for the Assembly again. Farwell, it will be recalled, was early in the fight for the Republican nomination for the Assembly from the Seventy-fifth District. He was indorsed by the Committee of Fifteen, for he was personally acceptable to Lissner and to Johnson, as well as to Bell and the others. In the meantime, however, there was trouble for the committee in the Second Supervisor District, now represented by H. A. McCabe and in which McCabe is a candidate for the Republican nomination for re-election. H. C. Hayes had strong backing and many friends, but the committee turned him down for W. F. Cronemiller. But Cronemiller would not accept the nomination after all, so they turned to Lyman Farwell. Farwell, however, had already forwarded his nomination petition to Sacramento and his filing fee, and he was not over-anxious to change to another fight. They fixed it at once, however, and forced him to move by placing Raymond W. Heffelfinger in the field as a candidate for the Assembly in the Seventy-fifth, with the Committee of Lissner's "Fifteen" at his back. Remember that the committee had endorsed Farwell to begin with. There was nothing for Farwell but to do as he was told and become a candidate for Supervisor.

But Farwell made one proviso. He became a candidate for Supervisor only with the understanding that he should be able to withdraw his papers as a candidate for the Assembly. And he cannot do so. "Secretary of State holds cannot withdraw nomination papers under the law," is the wording of a dispatch he has received from Sacramento.

That leaves Farwell in the fight, and the Lissner crowd without any candidate for Supervisor against McCabe. Incidentally, in their desire to punish the regular Republicans of the county, they have succeeded in putting in the field as a Lissner candidate in the Seventy-fifth Assembly District Raymond Heffelfinger to win away votes from the original Lissner candidate, Lyman Farwell. This practically gives the Republican nomination to R. W. Richardson, the Taft candidate, while Farwell, anxious for support of the Lissner Committee at all points, is injured by his faithfulness.

So far as the Second Supervisor District is concerned, the fight for the Republican nomination is now down to McCabe, Norton and E. E. Johnson, the last of whom entered the contest this last week. Johnson has a strong following among Republicans, and is a Taft man from 'way back. He was City Tax Collector of Los Angeles for eight years. So it begins to look as if the fight is between McCabe and Johnson, rather than to consider the Lissner end at all, and it is not likely that any new candidate will be sprung at this late date, as all nomination petitions must be filed by tomorrow night.

A. H. Kallmeyer will not be the nominee of the Democratic party for Congress in the Tenth District, and George Ringo, the young and comparatively unknown Bourbon who announced his candidacy early in the week, will be unopposed for the nomination, because Kallmeyer has withdrawn. His nomination petition lacked twenty votes of enough to satisfy the needs of the law, so yesterday afternoon he called at the office of the County Clerk and announced that he was done—"I'm out of it," he said. He had 117 qualified electors on his petition, but of the forty or fifty others signed originally so many were disqualified that it left him out.

The Republican Club had a luncheon at Brink's yesterday. The members meet in an informal way every Saturday at noon. The attendance yesterday was not as large as had been hoped for, because many had made engagements out of town, but W. H. Holabird, candidate for Congress from the Tenth District, made a good talk, right from the shoulder, in which he said that the club should be for Taft night and day, and should make the people realize that the industries and very life of Southern California depended on the tariff. Col. Holabird, speaking for his own canvass, said he was going to see every man and woman in the district whom he could and talk to them all, and he was going to ask the votes of all classes and overlook none. "The vote of a laboring man counts as much as that of Henry E. Huntington at the polls," he remarked. The club will establish headquarters tomorrow on the fourth floor of the Merchants Trust building.

There are 80,000 Republican voters in the city of Los Angeles who have registered to date. Of these, the thousands who live in the Sixty-sixth, Sixty-fifth and Sixty-first Assembly districts are likely to decide the nominee of the party for Congress in the Ninth District. It is figured that they are probably for C. H. Randall by a slight majority at present. Close students of the situation figure that this contest now lies between the two Pasadena candidates, with Bell, on account of the support of the women, rather in the lead, so far as the interior districts are concerned. Windham probably holds the lead in the Coast districts and will easily walk away with his home, Long Beach. Pitzer expects to carry Alhambra and ought to do so, but it does not seem probable as things are at present that he will figure largely in the final result. Randall has been through the district carefully and will pick up all the odds and ends and, if he should lead in the three city precincts, he will have a fair chance for the nomination. But it will have to be a good lead. There is no disputing the fact that the indications favor the nomination of Bell, despite the fact that he was originally elected by Democrats to the Legislature, refused a place in the Republican caucus to which he applied for admission and only obtained admission to the caucus after he had demonstrated to the satisfaction of the managers of the party fights that he could stay placed as a Republican at least temporarily. He takes his orders from Lissner or from Johnson.

Judge Peter J. Summers of the District Court of Nevada, has been spending a week here. He returned to his home in Goldfield last night. The judge is chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee in Nevada, and has been an active participant in the State's affairs ever since he took up his residence there. In the early 90's he represented Milwaukee in Congress for two terms. Of course he foresees a Democratic victory, but he says it will be especially sweeping in his State.

THE WATCHMAN.

AN OPEN LETTER TO HIRAM JOHNSON.

BEAUMONT (Cal.) July 25.—Hon. Hiram Johnson,

My Dear Sir: I desire to ask you a few questions and request an answer to the same.

As a member of the bar, would you vote to disbar an attorney who took employment from one side and aided the opposing side? In other words, who was working on both sides of the case.

The Republicans of California made you their standard bearer and employed you to represent their political estate. Still retaining that position of trust you have signed a call for a convention to form an opposing party the object of which will be the overthrow of the Republican party. Is there any reason why you should not be debarred? Or to put it more practically, why should you not be recalled?

Mr. Johnson, you prate a great deal about progressiveness and are preparing to assist in forming a "progressive" party. Has not the Republican party been a party of progress from its incipiency to the present time? Under its management has not the nation advanced from a minor position to the first place in the nations of the world? Has not Republican rule made the people of this nation the most prosperous people in the world?

Is it not true that the Republican party has been one of construction, and that the policy of the so-called progressives is one of destruction?

Is it true, Mr. Johnson, that you have destroyed the S. P. political machine in this State? If so, is it not also true that you have replaced it with a more dangerously oppressive and restrictive machine of your own?

You say a great deal about letting the people rule. Do you consider that the people are ruling when it is necessary to have the consent of a committee of fifteen, composed of your personal followers, in order to be nominated for public office in this State?

Your voice is frequently crying "thief." Was the taking of the Senatorship from Spalding, after he had received the indorsement of the people at the primaries, according to your primary law, and giving it to your henchman, Judge Works, theft or larceny?

If, as you assert, the seating of the two delegates who received a majority of the votes in their district, was theft, or petty larceny, would the taking of the thirteen electoral delegates from the Republicans and voting them out of their party be grand larceny?

If you answer these questions honestly, sincerely and unequivocally, will the answers be to your credit?

Awaiting your reply, I am, very truly yours,

[illegible] J. BURDICK.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY.

The Hollywood Board of Trade has formulated a proposition for insertion in the proposed city charter, providing that bond districts may be created throughout the city, to issue bonds on the assessable property within such district for extension of municipal water system. This may be opposed as it would impair the general bonding limit of the city.

The City Council yesterday closed the agreement with C. A. Canfield whereby he gives $25,000 and the city and county each $10,000 for the purpose of building a handsome grand stand in Exposition Park.

The City Council decided yesterday that hereafter no consideration will be given to petitions for change in street names unless at least 51 per cent. of the street frontage is represented.

Councilman Whiffen reported to the Council yesterday that the bank syndicate will not be ready to report on the proposed purchase of the old Normal School site on behalf of the city until tomorrow morning. The Council will convene in the afternoon to receive the report.

A shattered romance is shown in a divorce suit filed by Mrs. Mae Koss against her husband, who is over twice as old as his wife. The case is to be pressed for a hearing in the Superior Court.

At the City Hall.

HOLLYWOOD HAS NEW BOND PLAN.

WANTS CHARTER TO PROVIDE FOR DISTRICT SECURITIES.

Proposal of Board of Trade Made to City Board of Freeholders Will Be Considered by the Law Committee—Would Use Method for Extensions of Water System.

The Hollywood Board of Trade has a new plan to propose for insertion in the new municipal charter, to take the place of that the Public Service Board has adopted as it policy—assessment districts—for the extension of the city's water system to districts not now reached. This plan, which has been presented to the City Board of Freeholders by B. Winterer, on behalf of the Hollywood Board of Trade, is for bond districts.

Winterer proposes that the various districts of the city be given authority under the new charter to organize bonding districts and at special election they may by a two-thirds vote authorize the issuance of bonds for not more than forty years to the amount of 12 per cent. of the district's assessed valuation. Such bonds, of course, must be paid, both principal and interest, by the district itself.

That there will be some objection raised to inserting this provision in the new charter is apparent, as the adoption of such a plan by the various districts which need a new water supply would make serious inroads on the general bonding ability of the city.

FINE GRAND STAND.
IT'S ASSURED FOR PARK.

A contract consummated at an adjourned meeting of the City Council yesterday forenoon assures a handsome and commodious grand stand for Exposition Park, to cost at least $40,000.

The Council yesterday, after a general discussion of the provisions of the agreement, authorized the Mayor to sign on behalf of the city the provisions whereby the city is to give $10,000, the county $10,000 and C. A. Canfield $25,000 for the erection of a grand stand in Exposition Park and for other improvements.

Canfield, as president of the Los Angeles Light Harness Club and Driving Association, and L. J. Christopher, secretary of these organizations, appeared before the Council and signed the document, in which certain modifications had been made from the original one presented. Acting Mayor Williams signed the agreement yesterday and when the county authorities add their signatures the instrument will be complete.

This opens the way for construction at an early date of a grand stand that will cost at least $40,000. The extra $5000 will be used for the construction of a subway underneath the race course to the athletic field and for improvements in this field.

The grand stand is to be built on graceful lines so that it will be an ornament to the park. Its base is to be of concrete, faced with brick, and the frame is to be of steel, with a tile roof.

The city and county are to have free use of the stand throughout the year with the exception of twenty-two days, during which time the stand is to be for the use of the State. Fifteen days of this time are to be alloted to the driving associations, and the other time is for agricultural fairs.

Ask for Modification.

The Pacific Home Picture Machine Company, and certain realty dealers of this city have asked the City Council to make a modification in the ordinance regarding the operation of moving picture machines so as to allow their use for private entertainment in home and by realty dealers in their offices to show their properties, etc. The claim is made that by new inventions the necessary light for such shows can be secured from any ordinary electric light socket and that the danger is therefore eliminated. The request was referred by the City Council yesterday to the Fire Chief and the City Attorney for their recommendations.

Redraft Dance Hall Law.

The City Council yesterday authorized the City Attorney to redraft the ordinance regulating dance halls, which was submitted by Prosecuting Attorney Eddie. It is proposed to prohibit the holding of "benefit" or social club dances in halls where the license permits have been revoked, unless special permits are issued by the Police Commission. It is alleged that in some of the places where permits have been revoked, the "benefit" and similar dances have been so frequent as to almost amount to a regular running of the places as dance halls.

MUST GET MAJORITIES.

The City Council yesterday indorsed the stand taken by the Streets and Boulevards Committee that hereafter no consideration will be given petitions asking for the change in names of streets unless fifty-one per cent. of the frontage of the street affected, is represented on the petitions. This action was brought about at this time by a protest against the proposed change of the name of Santa Monica boulevard to Colegrove boulevard. While there are two streets in the city bearing the name of Santa Monica, there are protestants against any change of name on the Santa Monica boulevard in the northerly part of the city that includes any use of the word Colegrove, and the City Council has referred this subject to the City Engineer for his recommendation of a name.

Bankers not Ready.

At the adjourned meeting of the City Council yesterday forenoon, Councilman Whiffen, representing the special committee that has been looking after the proposed purchase of the old State Normal School site on behalf of the city, reported that a conference was held with the bankers the previous evening, but that two points had arisen on which the representatives of the clearinghouse wished to consult with their attorneys, and that their report would not be ready until tomorrow morning. The The Council agreed to meet tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock to receive the final report from the bank syndicate on the proposition to purchase the land for the city. It is understood that there is an implied pledge on the part of the Councilmen that if the banks provide the necessary funds for the desired purchase, the next big public improvement to be provided for by the city will be the erection of a City Hall upon the site of the Temple block. In case any serious hitch develops which will prevent the bank syndicate making the Normal School site purchase, the proposition of the Los Angeles Investment Company stands open, as this is made as an emergency provision. The land is to be sold from the steps of the Grand-avenue entrance to the school building on Tuesday forenoon.

A Charity Commission.

The Los Angeles Conference of Social Workers has asked the City Council to appoint a charity commission to consist of five members, for the purpose of centralizing the supervision of charitable work. The general scope of this committee would be to investigate charitable organizations, give its approval to those that are worthy and eliminate those that are duplicating the work now being done, while encouraging the expansion of work into fields that are now inadequately served. The plan would also provide that the commission should be empowered to receive bequests and donations, to be prorated amongst the approved charities.

More Authority Needed.

The City Council yesterday received from the Police Commission a communication stating that the recent instruction from the Council to invoke the "move on" ordinance against the crowds that assemble almost nightly at Crocker street, just off of Fifth and hold street meetings until late hours, is not adequate, as the street is not within the restricted district. More authority is needed, either by including this street within the restricted street-speaking zone or by other legislation that will apply generally to the assemblages of crowds on streets where they make themselves a public nuisance. The communication was referred to the Public Welfare Committee.

The Rose-Hill Franchise.

What is generally termed the Rose-Hill franchise, giving the Pacific Electric a franchise to cross Mission road, Tourmaline and Turquoise streets, was before the City Council yesterday and was referred to the Legislation Committee. This franchise provides for five-cent fares to Harriman avenue, the northerly city limits, and for the construction of a five-foot sidewalk along one side of the railroad right-of-way.

Gets Orders to Proceed.

The Board of Public Works yesterday authorized Assistant Harbor Engineer Vincent to instruct the Standard American Dredging Company to begin work at once on the proper dyking and filling of that area at the Los Angeles Harbor lying north of the slip between the city's property and the Outer Harbor Dock and Wharf Company's property.

For Wireless Telephone.

The General Research Company yesterday filed with the City Clerk an application to the City Council for permission to place on the top of two down-town buildings two steel poles, 100 feet high, for the purpose of establishing a long distance wireless telephone service. It will go before the Council on Tuesday.

SHOE SCARES BURGLAR.

An old shoe thrown with sufficient force across a bedroom that it struck with a resounding slam against a window casing, and a lusty yell that vibrated throughout the house, shortly before daylight yesterday morning, saved P. Krueger, No. 3231 Huron street, from burglars, according to a report filed at the Central Station. Friday's mail brought Krueger a registered letter from Germany containing a draft on a local bank for $3500. He said yesterday he is firmly convinced that someone who knew he had received the draft thought he would cash it and take the money home. It hadn't been cashed however. The would-be thief had forced a screen to the bedroom window where Krueger was sleeping, and was endeavoring to raise the sash when he was awakened. Krueger picked up a shoe on the floor by leaning out of bed and as he threw it in the direction of the window yelled at the top of his voice: "Get out of here!" The prowler did.

SEEKS ABSENT SON.

Charles M. Dutton of Clinton, Ind., who is lying dangerously ill, seeks to locate his son, whose first name is not given. The son was in Texas last fall and is thought to have come to Southern California. Any information may be sent to Mrs. Florence E. Hughes, No. 1167 East Forty-seventh street, Los Angeles, who is a relative.

WEST ADAMS DEDICATION.

The cornerstone of the West Adams Methodist Church will be laid this morning at 11 o'clock, at LaSalle avenue and West Adams street. The sermon will be preached by Dr. F. M. Larkin, district superintendent, and Rev. P. H. Bodkin, founder and first pastor of the church, and Rev. G. A. Henry will take part in the services. The structure to be built will be constructed of brick and stone, and the interior will be finished in oak.

Troubles of Koss Family Are Once More in the Superior Court, This Time on Divorce Proceedings Brought by Young Wife on Grounds of Cruelty.

A new chapter is being written in the marital troubles of the Koss family. The wife has brought suit in the Superior Court for divorce and yesterday her attorney, Birney Donnell, said the case will be pressed for a hearing. He does not know whether the husband will contest, but as there is nearly $50,000 worth of property involved, it is believed there will be a determined fight over the distribution of the estate and award of alimony.

Mrs. Mae Koss brought an action in the Superior Court last March to have her husband, Nicholas Koss, declared an incompetent. She is a handsome woman of about 30, and he is over 60 years old. She alleged that by reason of his habits he had become incapable of caring for his ranch near Lankershim and that she should be appointed guardian.

W. F. Callandar represented, by E. J. Fleming, filed an action asking that he be appointed guardian, alleging that Mrs. Koss had apparently married Koss because of his property interests and that a disinterested person should be in legal custody of the man. The case never went to hearing and the papers are still on file.

It is alleged that the husband became engaged in an altercation with his wife in this city last February in which she was severely hurt. Other acts of alleged cruelty are specified in the divorce complaint.

Attorney Donnell said he did not know where the husband is but presumably he is in this vicinity. He declared his client has nothing to fear from any contest and that the disparity in their ages has nothing to do with the marital infelicities.

TOO MANY ALIASES.
WIFE WANTS ANNULMENT.

Mrs. Inez Thompson filed in the Superior Court yesterday a petition for annulment of marriage from her husband. She believes his true name is Nicholas Aranovitch, but she isn't certain. Among other names by which he has been known are, Nicole Enri, Thor Raje, Jacques Franc, Frank Jacoby, Frank Rose and Fritz Aranovitch.

She avers when they were married in 1906 he was known as Thor Raje. They lived happily in San Francisco for several years and then came to Los Angeles. The wife alleges she began to suspect her versatile husband was leading a life that was far in excess of what is generally known as "double."

In the complaint there is a separate petition that there be an accounting and award of the community property, which is said to include lots in San Francisco, the furniture of a flat at No. 704 Oak street, that city, four pianos, three violins, and eight lots on Dayton avenue, Los Angeles.

The reason given for not filing the amendment petition sooner is that Mrs. Thompson did not find out what she now alleges until recently.

ROOM FOR ARGUMENT.
COLLISION OF ELECTRICS.

The dry court papers do not contain any hint as to what may have taken place between Mrs. Anna Sinsabaugh and Mrs. Jean Schmitt when their handsome cars collided on Second street. Mrs. Sinsabaugh filed a complaint in the Superior Court yesterday against Mrs. Schmitt, asking damages of $5155.

The accident occurred April 23 last. The plaintiff was crossing Second street. There was a collision and the plaintiff declares she was shaken and suffered bodily injury from the shock.

A similar damage suit was filed yesterday, but men were plaintiff and defendant. Moses Keller asks $5000 damages because, as he alleges, the automobile owned by the defendant ran into his wagon, throwing him from his seat and bruising him.

THE MORNING AFTER.
IT'S GRAY DAWN FOR BOYS.

Five chastened boys were taken to the Detention Home yesterday to await hearing in the Juvenile Court on a charge of larceny. The records of the culprits are not yet ascertained. They decided to go to Venice last Thursday. Three had no bicycles, so three were taken from the curbstone and appropriated to the use of the party. The boys had a gay time in a way, but lacked money to buy food. A nickel secured a loaf of bread.

The boys decided next day to go in bathing and five suits were stolen from a bath-house and the lads walked toward Playa del Rey before entering the water. They were finally caught and brought to this city. The boys gave the names of Alfred Murray, Virgil Shumaker, Charles Shumaker, Van Robinson, Harry Waters. All admitted their guilt.

GRADING DAMAGES.
DECISION IS EXPECTED.

Judge Bordwell is expected to announce his ruling tomorrow in regard to the action of referees to appraise damages at San Pedro caused by the grading of the harbor boulevard.

The referees went to the judge to learn whether owners of adjoining property as well as abutting property owners should get damages. They also wanted the law on the question whether the city should pay according to increased prices because values have risen through the improvements in that section.

COURTHOUSE NOTES.
BREVITIES MISCELLANEOUS.

UNDER ADVISEMENT. Judge Wood has under advisement a motion made yesterday by defendant's counsel for a new trial in the case of Viva Lynch against the Pacific Electric. The jury some time ago brought in a substantial verdict for the plaintiff. In the event a new trial is denied an appeal will be taken.

NEW GUIDEBOARD. A new bulletin-board was placed at the Broadway entrance of the Courthouse yesterday. It gives the name of each department of the Superior Court, and the Extra Sessions as well. On one side is given a list of all the offices in the Hall of Records and the floors on which they are located. The Hall of Justice is also indexed.

OFFERS ALIBI. Charles D. Fredericks presented a writ of habeas corpus in Judge Cabaniss's court yesterday in order to get a hearing on his effort to prevent extradition. The authorities of Auburn alleged Fredericks obtained money under false pretenses several years ago. Fredericks declares he was not in Auburn at the time the alleged offense was committed.

MUST WORK NOW. J. F. Fleming, charged with non-support of wife and children, was yesterday sentenced to pass ninety days on the county chain gang. Judge Cabaniss declared that "outside" work best fits a case like Fleming's. It appeared from a statement by Deputy District Attorney Doran that various persons had befriended the man, but to no avail.

DEFENSE AT BAT. The defense in the case of Miranda Rogers against Linda Scott will be resumed Tuesday. Mrs. Scott will probably be cross-examined. Mrs. Rogers asserts she gave her property to the defendant under a misapprehension, and now wants it back. Mrs. Scott so far, in her testimony, has attempted to show that she never asked for the property and that she has always given the income to Mrs. Rogers, for whom she professes a warm attachment. Other witnesses will be called for the defense.

INCORPORATIONS. Huntington Park Woman's Improvement Club, incorporators, Mrs. Mary A. Wilson, Mrs. Emma Chapman, Mrs. Lucille Kennett, Mrs. Lida Lillie. Mrs. Hannah Nutt; capital stock, $10,000; subscribed, $5. Shipman Cement Brick Company, incorporators, D. L. Shipman, Miles Anderson, R. T. Quinn; capital stock, $15,000; subscribed, $25. IN THE INFERIOR COURTS.

Young Man Calls Taking Watch a Joke, Sent to Jail Thirty Days to Figure Who Joke's On.

A joke is a joke, but stealing a watch from a young woman isn't, according to the view taken yesterday in the Police Court at the Central Station yesterday, when Richard Fowler was sent to jail thirty days for taking a timepiece from Miss Ruth Lewis, No. 300 North Fremont street.

"What did you take the watch for?" asked the court.

"In a joke," replied the young man, as he tried to smile.

"Where is the joke?" demanded the justice.

"The people had moved away, and I couldn't find them," replied the defendant.

"Thirty days in the City Jail; that'll give you plenty of time to figure out who the joke is on," replied the court.

"Whew," said the young man in surprise, as he took his seat in the dock.

Held to Answer.

Fred W. Wood, about 30 years old, charged with murder in the first degree for the stabbing of Joseph Hennessy, a young aqueduct worker, was held to answer to the Superior Court yesterday by Police Judge Frederickson. Patrolman R. M. Greene, who made the arrest, swore to the complaint. Hennessy was stabbed in the left shoulder following a quarrel over a card game in a South Main-street rooming-house, and died half an hour later at the Receiving Hospital from loss of blood. The stabbing occurred on the 12th inst. Wood admitted the cutting but asserted it was in self-defense.

Former Employee Accuses.

C. E. Anthony, head of the Western Motor Car Company, and Earle C. Anthony, president of the California Motor Company, have been ordered to appear before Police Judge Williams tomorrow morning to answer to a complaint sworn to yesterday by William Telle, inspector for the State Bureau of Labor Statistics, in which it is charged that they worked Miss Louis L. McCandless, their bookkeeper, more than eight hours a day in violation of the State labor law. It is charged the young woman worked nine and more hours every day in the week. A similar action was instituted last week against C. E. Anthony in Justice Frederickson's court. The case was called yesterday, but was continued to permit of an amended complaint being filed. Both men deny the charges.

Had Covetous Eyes.

Irene Jones, a Pasadena negress, 18 years old, was caught shoplifting in a South Broadway department store yesterday by Detective Nick Harris, and was later sent to jail for thirty days by Police Judge Williams. The testimony was to the effect that Miss Jones stole a blue silk dress and tried to hide it under a long cloak she was wearing.

Appears Drunk in Court.

W. D. Carter, neglected to sober up before he appeared before Police Judge Williams yesterday in answer to a drunkenness charge, and was sent to jail for five days.

"I'll send you where you'll have to sober up," mused the justice.

Carter was arrested Friday night for intoxication, and upon securing his release on cash bail continued his spree.

Young Flirter Fined.

Nat Dana, a well dressed young man, was given his choice of a $15 fine or fifteen days in jail yesterday by Police Judge Williams after Miss Adelia Carmeny, a prepossessing young girl, had testified that for more than a month the defendant had annoyed her as she passed Third and Main streets by making comments relative to her clothes, and otherwise trying to attract her attention. Dana denied the charge, but two other young girls swore he treated them in a similar manner.

FINED FOR BRUTALITY.

Upon complaint of officers of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, H. A. Shurtleff of Belvedere, was haled before Justice Reeve yesterday charged with unspeakable abuse of a colt. The testimony in the case showed that he had allowed the animal to lie in the road all night, suffering from a fractured skull brought about by earlier mishandling. Justice Reeve at first considered an arbitrary jail sentence, but finally let Shurtleff choose between ten days or $100. The man paid the fine.

SIMPLE VILLA A BIG PALACE.

Germany Amazed by Crown Prince's Extravagance.

Health of the Kaiserin Still Cause for Alarm.

Vanity of a Maid the Cause of Fight and Crime.

[By Atlantic Cable and by Wireless from Chicago to The Times.]

BERLIN, July 27.—The new palace of the Crown Prince, which is being built on the borders of the lake at Potsdam, is provoking a storm of protest. His Imperial Highness is accused of reckless and shameful extravagance. At first it was announced that the palace would be only a little country house in the purest English style, with English gardens running down to the lake and of the simplest domestic architecture.

"There will just be room for me and Cissy and the babes," the Crown Prince is reported to have said.

Now it is announced that the "simple English home" is to be a great palace, bigger even than the Emperor's, with 500 feet frontage on the lake, extensive gardens, fountains, and a great covered garden for the children to play in on wet days.

SUITE FOR THE PRINCESS.

The Crown Princess will have a whole suite of apartments, and there will be three fine courtyards, one surrounded by an Italian patio (open court) in white marble. The Berlin Press wants to know how much the country will have to contribute to this enormously expensive palace, but it is hinted that the Crown Princess's millionaire relatives in Mecklenburg have offered to bear the greater part of the cost.

The health of the Kaiserin, which is again giving cause for anxiety, has not benefited so much by the Nauheim treatment as had been hoped. Those few people of her intimate entourage who have been allowed to see her Imperial Majesty notice the change in her way of life, which, from being energetic in the extreme, is now reduced to practical inactivity.

A MAIDEN'S VANITY.

At the village of Kupferhammer, near Lucerne, a beautiful girl, out of vanity, became engaged to three young men. For some time she cleverly kept them apart, but eventually the three met by accident at the girl's home, and a fierce quarrel resulted. Two of the men took common part against the son of a wealthy resident of Lucerne, who probably was regarded by them as the more dangerous rival, and threw the young man out of a third-floor window in the presence of the terrified fiancee. The man fell on his head on the pavement, and was found dead by a milkman in the morning. His assailants have been arrested on a charge of murder, and the girl has been ordered to hold herself at the disposal of the police, and has been forbidden to leave the village.

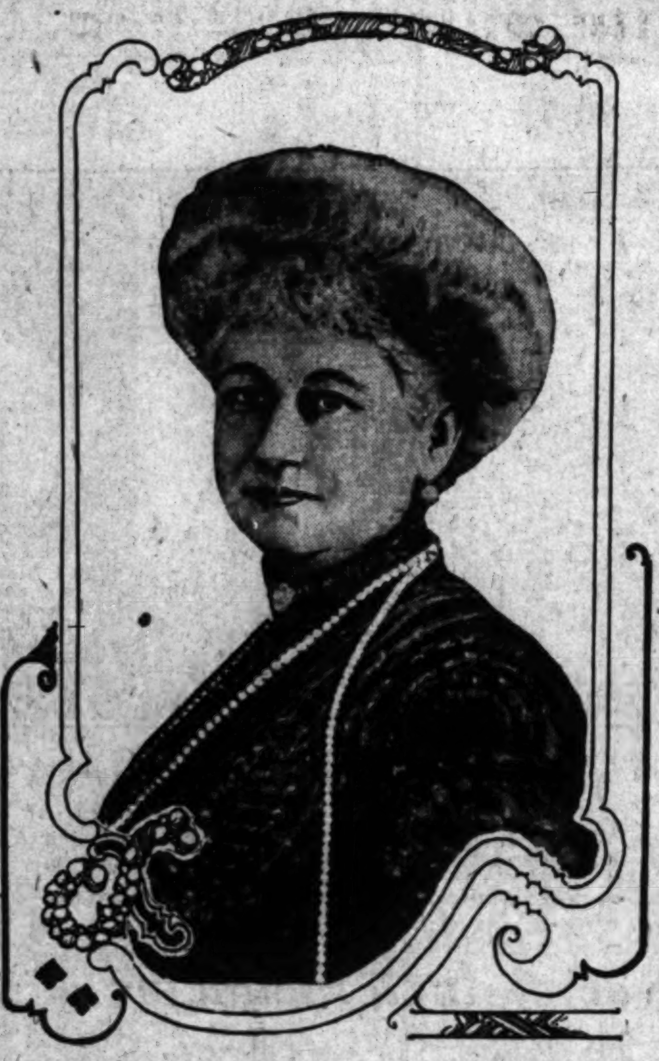
Kaiserin's Illness Causes Much Alarm.



Empress of Germany,

Whose improvement in health has been so slow as to cause general alarm in the Fatherland. Her malady, it is reported, does not yield so well as was wished to the treatment of the baths at Nauheim.

AGED EMPEROR AIDS YOUNG ROYAL LOVERS.

BY EMIL ANDRASSY.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND BY WIRELESS FROM CHICAGO TO THE TIMES.]

VIENNA, July 27.—A romance concerning the young Crown Prince Poris of Bulgaria and the beautiful and accomplished Princess Elizabeth of Roumania has just come to the ears of Vienna court circles. The young people desire to wed and both appealed to the Emperor Francis Joseph to aid them in overcoming the hostility of their parents. The heart of the Emperor of Austria was touched when he heard the story of love's young dream, he wrote personal letters to the rulers of Roumania and Bulgaria, and formal announcement of the betrothal is now expected.

One day Prince Boris saw a photograph of the Princess, whom he had never met. He at once fell madly in love with her and penned her a letter which divulged his passion. She was at first inclined to be angry, but reading the letter over again she kissed it unconsciously and found herself in love with a man with whose appearance even she was unfamiliar. A meeting was arranged and the flame ripened until both determined to ask permission to wed. This being refused, appeal was made to the aged Emperor of Austria.

ARCHDUKE QUITS ARMY.

A notable figure has retired from military life in the resignation of General the Archduke Eugen. His resignation is a great loss to the country, as the Prince fills some very important military posts. He is not only an acting general and an army inspector, but a commandant of the land defense of the Tirol-Vorarlberg. In this latter post, near the Italian frontier, where conflicts between the Italian and the Austrian soldiers frequently occur, he has shown himself to be a clever diplomatist, as well as a distinguished soldier.

MYSTERY IN POWDER ATTACKS.

Great uneasiness has been caused in military circles throughout the monarchy by the systematic attacks persisted in for some time on the military powder magazines. The authors of these dangerous attempts are as yet undiscovered, and their motives are still obscure.

Recently an attack was made upon the powder stores at Wiener Neustadt, followed by the explosion of a magazine in Semlin. Then the country was startled by the report that at Olmutz, Marovia, two men who had forced their way into the tower were surprised by the guard. They fled, firing as they went, the fire being returned. The noise brought in the rest of the men on duty, but a long search failed to show any trace of the malefactors. The mysterious proceedings are ascribed to political agents.

Strange Case.

NEITHER SPINSTER, WIFE, NOR WIDOW; NAMELESS.

BY PAUL VILLIERS.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND BY WIRELESS FROM CHICAGO TO THE TIMES.]

PARIS, July 27.—The strange case of a woman without a name, who is neither spinster, wife, widow nor divorced, is interesting society and lawyers in Paris and throughout the greater part of France. This woman is in a position which the French law overlooked when it framed the code governing domestic ties and divorce.

The law decrees that if divorced people find they have made a mistake and want to re-marry they cannot again appeal to the law to free them from their bonds. The second marriage is forever.

Sixteen years ago, a wealthy merchant of Arles found that his wife's temper and habits were beyond forgiveness. He secured a divorce. Later, both decided that they would try to get along with each other and remarried. The reunion soon proved irksome to both, and the husband was given a separation order for cause, but compelled to pay alimony. Within a few months he was back in court, explaining how his separated spouse was disgracing his name and begging for protection. The court decided that he should continue to pay the alimony, but that the wife had no right to abuse his name, which was taken away from her. Under the law, she is forbidden to resume her maiden name. She is thus a woman with no name, and neither spinster, wife, widowed nor divorced.

VIRTUE, BEAUTY, STRENGTH.

The Rosiere prize of Grenoble has been won by Mlle. Mallery, who is adjudged to have the virtues of a saint, the beauty of Venus and the strength of Sampson. She is over six feet tall, in exquisite proportion, a lovely blue-eyed blonde, with milk-white skin and dainty hands and feet. She can lift 220 pounds with the greatest of ease and believes she could knock out Jack Johnson. Mlle. Mallery is a farmer's daughter, milks cows, is gentle with children, and by winning the F2000 left by an eccentric miller of Grenoble as an annual prize for some young woman proved to be possessed of all the virtues, she has a good "dot" to tempt a husband.

CYCLOPLANE FAD.

The latest fad in French sports is the cycloplane, which many think will ultimately replace the aeroplane as a means of practical flying. A cycloplane has just been tried out which managed to cover over 110 yards without alighting. This is about ten times the best distance previously accomplished.

A curious damage suit has just been decided with a verdict which could only be delivered in France.

M. Lebaudy, a well-known sportsman, hunted a stag in the forest of Fontainebleau. The stag, followed by hounds and huntsmen, took refuge in the garden of Mme. Brouillot. Her son, assuming that the stag had come to him for protection, claimed it in default of a gratuity of $25. M. Lebaudy refusing to pay, the son killed the stag and Madame helped him to eat it. M. Lebaudy sued in the Fontainebleau civil courts for damages. Madame answering with a counter-suit. The judge awarded both sides $25 damages and costs.

Gallardon, the district where M. Zola placed his murderous and rapacious peasants, has just furnished a tragedy suggesting a chapter from "La Terre."

Augustin Sanson, a mason, 25, was the lover of his cousin, Lucie Houssu, who was an embroidress in Paris. A child was born. Then followed violent scenes between the lovers.

An avaricious man, Sanson attacked the embroidress in the streets at Gallardon, felling her to the ground. She succeeded in escaping, but Sanson returned armed with a revolver, and finding Lucie at a relative's fired four shots, the bullets entering the woman's head. She died after enduring agony for twenty-five days.

Witnesses came forward at the man's trial at Chartres and testified that it was the embroidress's dream to marry the father of her child, but the mason's family considered that she had not enough money. On the eve of the crime he was about to marry another woman.

The jury found that Sanson had not premeditated the crime, and sentenced him to penal servitude for life.

WEDDING CELEBRATION CAUSES GRIM TRAGEDY.

BY CLEMENT J. BARRETT.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND BY WIRELESS FROM CHICAGO TO THE TIMES.]

ROME, July 27.—Desire for novelty turned the wedding of a wealthy Avellino belle into grim tragedy.

Signor Mennino, a rich country squire of Melito Valle Bonito, resolved to revive the custom of scattering fireworks instead of rice at the marriage of his daughter, Muzetta, to a neighboring landholder. Fireworks were used outside the church in the old days among Neapolitans. He filled his pockets full of all sorts of rockets and carried three handkerchiefs full of bombs. While he was at the head of the merry procession, boys and girls dancing around the bride and groom, decked out in fanciful costumes, the bombs suddenly exploded with terrific force. Mennino was blown into fragments, the bridegroom and many of the guests were thrown on their faces and terribly mangled, while the adjacent houses were shaken to their foundations, one collapsing. The bride, strange to say, although she was quite near her father, was only stunned and slightly bruised.

FAMOUS BANDIT PARDONED.

King Victor Emmanuel has pardoned Guiseppe Bellettien, after this famous bandit had just completed his forty-seventh year in prison. The brigand chief, once infamous throughout Italy and condemned for sixty-five murders, numerous blackmail cases and other deeds of violence, became very penitent after his first year or two in confinement. Upon his release, the former brigand chief found himself almost immediately surrounded by a large body of friends, though it is suggested that the friendship is not entirely disinterested. The story runs that Bellettien's band had safely buried large stores of treasure, which have not been unearthed, and the released prisoner's new-found friends are regarded as having an eye upon the probable recovery of that treasure by their protege.

PEASANTS ATTACK COUNT.

The Count of Turin had a very unpleasant adventure during a motor trip to Lake Maggiore, states a telegram from Milan. In passing through a wayside village the Count's car overturned a peasant's cart, and at once an angry crowd of peasants gathered round and assumed a threatening attitude. They made a determined attack upon the car and attempted to overturn it with its occupants inside, but, though the attempt was unsuccessful, considerable damage was done. The Count was roughly handled, and, indeed, his life seemed in some danger until a posse of gendarmes arrived and rescued him. Even the gendarmes, however, could not prevent the crowd from completely wrecking the car.

LITTLE ARAB HERO.

A dispatch from Tripoli states that among the prisoners taken by the Italians at the battle of Sidi Said was a little Arab boy. He was observed firing in the front line of the Arabs, where he was a conspicuous figure, bravely standing upright until a bullet struck him in the chest. An Italian soldier carried him on his shoulder to the Italian camp, where, after his wound had been dressed, the lad declared that he was 10 years of age and that he had gone into battle with his mother, his father having been killed the previous day. The little hero showed extraordinary intelligence, and it is proposed, if he recovers, to send him to Italy.

POMONA BUILDING NOTES.

New Skyscraper Will Soon Be Ready for Its Tenants—Operahouse Plans Are Changed.

POMONA, July 27.—Work on the new fireproof building of the Pomona Investment Company at the corner of Third street and Garey avenue is progressing well and it will be ready for occupancy next month. Most of the offices have already been rented. The elevators are now being installed and also the heating plant.

The structure is five stories high, the finest office building in the city, and the first to have elevator service.

The improvements to the Fender Block on First street and Garey avenue, by which the second story and part of the first are being arranged for hotel uses, are nearing completion, and H. Widowsky who has leased the premises and will conduct the Hotel Oxford there, is preparing to open for business.

It is hoped that work may be commenced soon upon the new operahouse, which is to be constructed at the southeast corner of Third street and Garey avenue on part of the site of the old Congregational Church. The plans have been changed to meet some requirements so that the ground floor may be used for store purposes. The plans and specifications are prepared for the three-story brick building of the Consolidated Water Company, on South Garey avenue, between Third and Fourth streets.

NEWS BRIEFS.

James Bowyer, superintendent of school buildings and equipment for the local Board of Education, is busy these days superintending the renovation and cleaning of all of the buildings, making changes in some of them and doing necessary painting and repair work. Because of the increase in attendance in the grade schools, it will be necessary to use the old Kingsley tract schoolhouse, which has been closed for some time, the pupils from there having been sent to the newer buildings. The Kingsley school is being made ready and Miss Anne L. Scott will be the teacher there.

Leonard E. Walker, secretary of the Pomona Securities Company of this city, has purchased from Mrs. Franklin Cogswell of Claremont the latter's home, adjoining that of Dr. F. W. Myers in the college town. Mr. Walker has leased the home to Hon. Charles G. Neely, who will occupy it with his family the coming college year, since he is now professor of constitutional history and law in Pomona College. The Neely family, which has been occupying the house owned by Allen P. Nichols at the corner of Park avenue and Preciado street here for some time, will soon remove to Claremont.

Park Superintendent Paige is getting the park grounds around the City Hall in splendid shape. Much shrubbery has been planted and a great area has been seeded to lawns, which have grown rapidly. These lawns are watered entirely by an entirely new underground system of water pipes with sprinkler jets sunk at regular intervals, which is proving an economical and successful way of keeping the grass green.

SAN DIMAS NOTES.

SAN DIMAS, July 27.—During the past week the local orange and lemon houses entertained several district managers representing the Fruit Growers' Exchange in eastern markets. Mr. Black of the Boston agency, Mr. Cook of the Chicago agency, Mr. Scanlon of the Minneapolis agency and Mr. Brown, together with Mr. Farley, who is in charge of the advertising for the exchange, and Mr. Brandon, representing the advertising firm of Lord & Thomas of Chicago, all spent considerable time at the two houses inspecting the methods in use for the careful handling of our famous frostless fruit.

At a recent meeting of the directors of the First National Bank, it was decided to take immediate steps toward arranging for the increase of the bank's capital from $25,000 to $50,000. The wisdom of increasing the capital to $50,000 is apparent at once when the splendid growth of the town and community during the past year are taken into consideration. With this increase in capital, the bank will be in a position to take care of the needs of the business community for the future. The bank has also arranged for the [illegible] present quarters so that [illegible] have twice the present [illegible] vaults and other [illegible] be made.

BRITISH NAVAL PLANS GROW.

Big Building Contemplated by Budget Figures.

Liberal Party Platform Has Radical Features.

Minimum Wage and Land Courts Leading Planks.

BY PAUL LAMBETH.

[By Atlantic Cable and by Wireless from Chicago to The Times.]

LONDON, July 27.—According to figures given in an official paper just presented to Parliament, Great Britain will be able to sing "Britain Rules the Waves" for some years to come. At present England possesses sixteen dreadnoughts and battle cruisers, as against fifteen possessed by all the other powers whose shores touch European waters. Next year England hopes to have twenty-four ships of this type, as against twenty-one in the hands of the rest of Europe.

LIBERAL PARTY PLATFORM.

The platform upon which the Liberal party will go to the country if an election is precipitated during the coming autumn or winter will be based principally upon the following planks:

(1) A minimum wage, varying with the cost of living and peculiarities of each district, is to be secured for agricultural laborers.

(2) Land courts are to be established to fix agricultural rents and terms of tenancy.

(3) In fixing rents the land courts are to have regard to the minimum agricultural wage payable in the particular district; for example, if the wage for the agricultural laborer is 15s. a week, and the minimum wage for the district is fixed at 17s., the land court will take into account the increased wage in fixing the rent of the farm. Thus, if the farmer employs ten laborers, he will be compelled to pay £1 per week, or £52 per year additional in wages, but this sum will be taken into account by the land court in fixing the rent of the farm.

(4) An extensive scheme of rural housing.

(5) Land courts are to be established to settle questions relating to town leaseholds, such as terms of renewals of leases and fines, and increased rents for alterations.

GAMBLERS OUTWIT POLICE.

So rapidly is the craze for baccarat and chemin de fer developing in the West End that fresh gambling houses are springing up in all directions. Many people are wondering why the police do not take action, but the simple explanation is that Scotland Yard is finding it impossible to obtain evidence against the ones they wish to catch, namely the proprietors who are making huge fortunes from their wealthy clientele. These wily gentlemen are now acting with the utmost caution, and no one is admitted to their houses unless they are convinced as to the "safety" of the would-be player. They can afford to discriminate, for ten or twelve rich players are sufficient for the game. These are readily obtained, and there is no necessity to encourage the stranger.

The London season will now soon be over and the wealthy punters will be scattered in all parts of the country. One resourceful man who runs a prosperous gambling den does not intend to relinquish his easy mode of making a fortune. So he has chartered a luxurious yacht; curiously enough, the guests are all gamblers and rich. The saloon of the yacht is a large one, and will be used as a gaming-room, and, moreover, there is no danger of a police raid. It is rumored that if the experiment is a success the yacht will cruise along the coasts of England and France, and in this way the proprietor hopes to be able to keep his vessel working—with profit to himself—until it is again time to open out in London.

LIES DEAD A YEAR.

A startling discovery has been made at Gateshead. Several years ago two sisters, both over 70 years of age, retired from business as dressmakers and lived a secluded life. Lately a relative visited the couple and the discovery was made that one sister had been dead over twelve months and the remains were still in the house. There was only a thin covering of skin over the bones. The surviving sister, who is in feeble health, was removed to the hospital.

THIEF INVADES THE BAILEY.

It has just been learned that a thief—or thieves—departing from a rule of the profession which discourages acquaintance with the Bailey, actually committed robbery in the court building and got clear away with a substantial haul. About 10 o'clock one of the nightwatchmen discovered that the window of the keeper's office was open and the room in a state of confusion. Further investigation revealed the fact that the safe had been opened and a considerable sum in cash abstracted.

Whether the perpetrators of this grimly humorous plot concealed themselves in the building earlier in the day, and left by the window, or whether they secured access to the room by this means, is not known, but they ran a considerable risk, for watchmen are continually on duty in the building. The police are making inquiries and hope to become more closely acquainted with the experts who played this joke under the very nose of justice.

GLIMPSES OF SAN FRANCISCO.

[Special Correspondence of the Times.]

SAN FRANCISCO, July 26.—Gertrude Atherton, novelist, would like to be in Munich listening to grand opera, but instead she is in this city. It is not that she likes us best, but because she wishes to vote and this is the only place in the world that she can exercise her rights as a suffragist. Incidentally she mentions that equal suffrage is the theme of her latest book, and we hope the advertising will help the sales.

We offer another example of fallen royalty. From king to deputy register is an awful jump; but Don Gaspar de Portola, otherwise known as Senor Nicholas Covarrubias, made it without a murmur. He is recompensed by receiving a salary, whereas he reigned over our former festival for nothing.

It is good to have the high officials of the United Railroads with us. Patrick Calhoun, Mason B. Starring, James H. Reid and George W. Bacon are daily talking about giving us sixty more cars and preparing for transportation extensions to the fair grounds. They mean business and the strap-hangers are rejoicing thereat.

According to a report of Auditor Boyle, municipal bonds aggregating over $97,000,000 have been voted. Of this $9,000,000 were canceled. About $62,000,000 are unsold, while $22,000,000 are now bearing interest. The good old days when we did not have a dollar of debt are gone never to return. The boosters tell us that the future will have to settle up, which reminds us of the humorist who says "Let George do it."

An Oakland member of the I.W.W. chained himself to a post to prevent the police from taking him to jail. He is a martyr to the cause and ready to suffer anything rather than work. Attorney Kirk, who labored hard for the Workers in San Diego, will not toil for his small child, so Police Judge Shortall has found him guilty. Work is a nuisance anyway and ought to be abolished.

The dog editor of a local newspaper censures certain Los Angeles women for protesting against the muzzling of dogs. He writes: "Their fathers ought to take them out in the woodshed and reason with them with a good old-fashioned shingle." Perhaps he would like to wield the shingle himself.

Alleging that former Fire Commissioner Jewell stayed away from home too much, his wife, Clara, got a divorce from him in one hour. This is too easy, and as the lawyers say contra mores. Some husbands might take it into their heads not to go home at all.

SOCIETY TAKES UP BANGLE FAD.

Family Album Is Carried on the Wrist in London.

Queen Mary Frowns on Custom of Five O'clock Tea.

Duchess of Sutherland Sees Glowing Vista Ahead.

BY LADY MARY MANWARING.

[By Atlantic Cable and by Wireless from Chicago to The Times.]

LONDON, July 27.—Bangle portraits comprise society's latest fad. You carry the family album on your wrist.

Some of the designs in portrait bracelets are wonderfully clever—clustered medallions caught together by cobweb chains and diamonds—locked links being particularly fashionable. The idea has caught on almost spontaneously.

CUSTOM IN JEOPARDY.

Queen Mary is discouraging 5-o'clock tea, one of England's most-cherished customs. Her Majesty is a strong stickler against "habits" of any kind. She holds that where one makes a set custom of doing anything it becomes tantamount to a vice.

CREATES NEW INDUSTRY.

To offset the bothers of complying with the insurance act, a new industry has established itself in London. The "domestic contractor" will provide you with a complete establishment of servants, look after their insurance, and generally solve the servants' problem for London's matrons. It is a business proposition which seems to appeal to many of the distressed mistresses of Mayfair as deserving of encouragement.

OPEN ROAD IN SIGHT.

The Duchess of Sutherland, speaking at a meeting of the North Staffordshire Cripples' Aid Society, said the day is coming when no one will be grateful for the crumbs that fall from the rich man's table.

"It will be a good day, too," she added. "We absolutely must advance, and if there is some squealing about the advance and a little overhurry about it, at any rate people can see daybreak at the end of the tunnel, and know they will emerge into fuller light. Years ago, when I came inexperienced among you, you called me 'Meddlesome Millie.' As far as a miserable Duchess could be an agitator, I strove to be one; but what changes since those days!

"Slowly, definitely, the aspiring democracy demand an open road; slowly, surely, people move from byways to the open road. The very mansion at Trentham in which I nursed my ideals is razed to the ground, and the place is open to the public. I live in a cottage in peace and independence as a friend among the workers for whom I strove so many years ago. Is not that enough to make one optimistic, and is it not symbolic of all change today?"

The editors of the Encyclopedia "Information Cuss" have frittered away a lot of time in research. There are several young women right here in Los Angeles who know everything printed and a good many things that have never found their way between leather. They are the persons who preside behind the information bureau counters and they entertain thousands of inquiring visitors in the course of a day.

After a spectator listened for less than ten minutes yesterday to the endless flood of interrogation points, a few of them pertinent, but for the most part "incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial," one man who looked as though he ought to know better was asked why he propounded such a fool question? He wanted to know what the clerk supposed had detained his daughter, who should have met him a half hour before.

"Well," he replied, "that there sign says this here place is a information bureau, and that there is the information I want powerful bad. The sign just struck me, and I guessed I popped the question without thinking."

That is what a good many of the inquirers do. For instance, here are a few at random:

"If I go to Long Beach now will I have time for a swim?" This chap evidently thought the ocean closed at 6.

"What do I see if I go to the ostrich farm?" "You see 'ostricks,' you mutt," growled the man next in line.

"What is the population of Winnipeg, Canada?"

"I've missed my car. What shall I do?"

"Clarence has a toothache, have you a clove?"

"It's the third house from the corner and it is painted blue, but I have forgotten the street. Where will I get off?"

"Is the San Gabriel Mission a nice place to take a girl?"

"Why don't the cars run all night?"

"Do you know of a furnished house for rent?"

"Haven't these folks any homes?" referring to the constant hurrying crowds.

"A conductor made me pay fare for my little boy and I never had to pay fare for my little boy before. I think it is an outrage, and I want to know what you are going to do about it? Why, yes, he is about 11 years old, but I tell you I have never paid fare for him before."

So it goes all day and most of the night; yet, if the attendants once in a while become just a little out of patience at some particularly inane inquiry, the patron of the counter is huffed, miffed and highly insulted.

"Human nature is a blamed funny business," remarked the seventh man in line as he abandoned his purpose of asking how high is the Singer Building? and fled through the gate in pursuit of his car.

WATER SUPPLY.

In keeping with the provisions of the tentative agreement entered into between the trustees of the city and the directors of the water company for more than doubling the storage capacity for water and for the purchase by the city of the city reservoir and distributing mains of the mutual water system, the city has appointed as its representative on the board of arbitrators, Fred D. Hall, cashier of the First National Bank, while the water company has selected R. M. Cross, civil engineer of Los Angeles. These two will select a third appraiser and the board will fix a value on the city reservoir and distributing system, for whose purchase and improvement, it is proposed the city shall bond itself. The water company also agrees to spend at least $150,000 for increasing the capacity of the storage reservoir, seven miles east of the city.

E. M. Tarvin has been re-elected City Recorder by the City Trustees.

HEALTHY LAND MARKET.

Railroad Talk Causes Unusually Interest in Real Estate in and near San Jacinto.

SAN JACINTO, July 27.—The revived railroad talk has had its effect on the land market of the San Jacinto Valley, realty dealers declaring that inquiries are more numerous than they have been before for several months. The latest talk is the effect that money is already in sight for a railroad from San Diego to San Bernardino. In the San Jacinto Valley the proposed line will pass through the towns of Winchester, Hemet and San Jacinto. South of this valley the line will pass through French Valley to Temecula. It is claimed that surveying parties are now at work on the new line, and some enthusiasts claim that by putting their ears to the ground they can hear the toot of the locomotive. Nevertheless, it appears that another railroad, either steam or electric, is practically an assured fact, the only question being when it will become a reality.

CROP REPORTS.

With a year of short crops for the grain rancher, such as this, it is encouraging that some ranchers are harvesting bumper yields in spite of the general partial failure. And these ranchers that are doing so well owe their success in every case to summer fallow. Among the men who will have yields of from fifteen to twenty sacks this year are, M. A. Aguirre and sons, who will have a 20,000-sack crop on the Wolfskill ranch northwest of town; F. W. Siefkes, who has a camp near Armada; J. H. Maxwell, who owns considerable land adjoining the Siefkes tract, and W. R. Harper, who is farming the tract of land that made E. J. Logsdon rich.

These men are cutting fifteen and twenty-sack grain this year, and it's not because their land is better than their neighbors, or the Lord gave them more bountiful showers, either. It is simply because they summer-fallowed their land. Not one of these men will ever attempt to ranch without summer-fallowing.

The firm of Sanders and Bentley announce the sale of fifty acres in the Fruitvale district this week to parties from Los Angeles. The land is unimproved. The consideration was $7000.

HALF-CENTURY SPAN BRIDGED.

Cousins Meet Here After a Long Separation.

One Has Thrilling Indian Experience to Tell.

Captured by Sioux, Escapes, Aids Government.

Sooner or later all the world comes to Southern California.

After a lapse of fifty-two years, during which time they had entirely lost sight of each other, two cousins met yesterday in this city in surprised and joyful recognition. It was a happy reunion, for they had been close friends in girlhood and until chance brought them together here, neither knew whether or not the other was living.

They are Mrs. M. M. Blakesley, No. 228 East Fifty-sixth street, and Mrs. William J. Larimer of Fort Worth.

Reunited After Half a Century.

Mrs. William J. Larimer of Fort Worth (left) and Mrs. M. M. Blakesley of this city, whom chance brought together here. The interval between their girlhood parting fifty-two years ago, and joyful recognition yesterday, has been filled with thrilling and remarkable experiences for Mrs. Larimer.

Mrs. Blakesley has lived in this city fourteen years. She said yesterday the recognition was mutual because of the strong family resemblance. They lived in Kansas during their girlhood days and the last time they met was in 1860 at Mrs. Blakesley's father's house in Kansas.

Since that day Mrs. Larimer has been twice around the world, has met with thrilling adventures among the Sioux Indians, has written a book and practiced law. The story of her experiences has proved exceedingly interesting to Mrs. Blakesley, whose life has been passed more quietly and peacefully in the Golden West.

A few years after her parting from her cousin in Kansas, Mrs. Larimer, her husband, later Judge William E. Larimer, and her 7-year-old son, were members of a party crossing by wagon over the Wyoming trails. When about eighty miles southeast of Cheyene the party was attacked by a band of Sioux on the warpath. Some were killed and the others were captured. Mrs. Larimer saw her husband fall with two bullet wounds but was immediately separated from him and taken to an Indian camp. Another woman was captured with her and both were permitted to keep their little boys with them.

INDIAN ATROCITIES.

The Indians traveled all day and part of the night to another camp, compelling their captives to ride horseback and without food. When the camp was reached the women were roughly bound. The other woman's boy was frightened and sobbed almost continually. This angered the Indians and one of them seized the little fellow by the feet and dashed out his brains. Mrs. Larimer, fearing for her own boy called one of the leading warriors to her and with as diplomatic a speech as she was capable of, presented her boy to the tribe. She believes this act was the means of having his life and perhaps hers.

On the night of the sixth day, she resolved to make an effort to escape. Since the little boy had been formally adopted as a member of the tribe, she had been given more liberty and was able to get away unobserved by cutting a hole through the wigwam. She travelled that night until her strength gave out and then hid in a little nook under a cliff. It was fortunate that she took shelter when she did, for within an hour she heard a band of Sioux searching for her. Two of them passed directly over the cliff and another walked within three feet of where she crouched.

DOUBLE DELIVERANCE.

She dared not emerge all the next day, but resumed her journey the following night. At daybreak of the third day after her escape, she came upon a company of soldiers from the fort. Her joy at her own deliverance was augmented tenfold when she saw her husband, also safe with the soldiers. His wounds proved to be slight.

Mrs. Larimer was able to give accurate and detailed information concerning the plans of the Indians and the disposition of their forces. This information was directly responsible for preventing a general raid throughout that entire section, which would have resulted in the loss of hundreds of lives.

Army officers, who were cognizant of Mrs. Larimer's service in this respect communicated with Washington, with the result that the government later made her a gift of several thousand dollars in recognition.

Mr. and Mrs. Larimer afterward went to Fort Worth, where he practiced law. Mrs. Larimer wrote a book entitled, "Life Among the Sioux," which contained a description of her experiences. Later she studied law and practiced for several years with her husband. Her son was also a practicing attorney in Fort Worth. Both husband and son died several years ago, since when Mrs. Larimer has travelled extensively in this and other countries. She will remain in this city and vicinity all summer.

THROUGH CAMERA'S EYE.

California Life as It Looks to Wineman's Kodak to Be on Exhibit for Children's Benefit.

With the most ideal of altruistic motives and the idea of inculcating these same motives in the minds of the young people of Southern California, Mode Wineman, recognized as one of the foremost amateur nature photographers in the world, will exhibit his pictures of this State for the children of the orphanages, the settlement associations and the general schools during the first week of August in the ballroom of the Hotel Windermere, Santa Monica.

Wineman has been working through California the past seven years, coming from his home at the Chicago University for several months every wear and with his cameras wandering through the mountains and forests, over the deserts and in the open country, "shooting" the pretty things of nature as he travels. The wonderful results of his camera's eye have been shown in Chicago, Washington and other eastern cities, particularly to the children with the hope that they will arouse and build up a love for outdoors and nature.

After the exhibitions many of the pictures are given by Wineman to the various charitable institutions to be reminders of outdoor wonders, and to bring a little of the refreshment of vigorous open-air life to the inmates of many of the hospitals by way of suggestion. It was Wineman who organized the club of children of the rich of Chicago, who through their own self-denial and their own labor saved money in considerable sums to bring joy to the hearts of their little outcast brothers and orphan sisters.

One of the wealthy little girls shined shoes for her brother, while the boys cleaned automobiles, studied French and did many other unusual things to provide funds. This same plan has been adopted by Wineman in other places and with his motives of philanthropy in educational form, he has just brought his pictures from Chicago here.

Among them are many taken around this city. Some of the most interesting are scenes from Yosemite Valley and one of particular interest is probably the last picture that was ever taken of Galen Clark, discoverer of Mariposa Grove, a short time before his death about two years ago. The eminent naturalist, who was one of Wineman's best friends, was past 96 when the camera snapped him.

A "Corot" in interpretation is a group of eucalyptus trees taken in Santa Monica Canyon. These and many others will form a part of the exhibit which will have a special society opening next Saturday evening.

Many of the noted artists of Southern California and numerous society people of Pasadena, Los Angeles and Santa Monica have been invited to the private salon which will open at 8 o'clock in the evening and continue two hours, followed by a musicale and dance.

CLEARING THE CALENDAR.

United States Judges and Government Officials Closing Shop to Go to Mountains and Seashore.

The final session of the United States District Court for the summer will be held tomorrow, when Judge Wellborn will dispose of several pending matters. The present week will witness a general hegira of court officials on vacations.

There will not be a cessation of operations at the Federal building, however, during the vacation period. Commissioner Van Dyke will hear the complaint this week against Quirino Limon, charged with the murder of Ambrose Farias at Mexicali, April 1, 1911, on an order for the removal of the prisoner for trial in Mexico. About a dozen witnesses, living in the vicinity of Mexicali, Calexico and other points along the boundary, have been subpoenaed.

Another case of unusual interest will be the demand of the Dominion government for the return of Arthur B. Fletcher, formerly of Vancouver and Calgary, who is wanted on a charge of having secured goods under false pretenses. All of the testimony has been taken and the argument will conclude the hearing.

A number of business firms of Vancouver and the Hudson Bay Company are behind the prosecution of Fletcher. It is also alleged that Fletcher, now a Venice grocer, has practiced frauds in other parts of Canada.

FIRE CHIEFS ARE COMING.

Pacific Coast Association Will Hold Convention Here in September. Large Exhibit of Apparatus.

The twentieth annual convention of the Pacific Coast Association of Fire Chiefs will be held in this city September 9 to 13, inclusive. From 150 to 200 fire chiefs will be here from all parts of the Pacific Coast and the western States.

One of the main features of this meeting will be a large exhibit of the most modern fire-fighting apparatus and appliances.

Thomas Davis, chief of the fire department at Victoria, B. C., is the president of this association, and Harry W. Bringhurst, chief of the Seattle fire department, is secretary. Fire Chief Eley has been perfecting details for the programme, which will include several side trips and a banquet, and tests of apparatus that will be of interest to the public.

The association will not devote its time altogether to recreation, however, for there is a long list of solid topics for papers and discussions. Among these are the following:

"Effect of Politics upon Fire Departments," "Utility of Fire Cisterns," "California Saw Mill Fires," "Gas Leakages and Explosions," "The Future of Motor Apparatus," "Chemical Fire and Engine Systems," "Smoke Protectors and Helmets," "Keeping Up Interest in Volunteer Departments," "How Should Volunteer Firemen Be paid," "Fire Alarm Systems for Small Cities," "Water Supplies for Fires in Small Cities," "Theaters and Moving Picture Shows," "The Auto Fire Apparatus in Small Cities," "Oil Tank Fires," "High Pressure Water Systems," "Veneered Buildings," "Fireboats," "The Storage of Gasoline," "Spontaneous Combustion," "The Care of Auto Apparatus," "The Gasoline Fire Engine," "Basement Fires," "Fires in Mines," "Specifications for Two and a Half-Inch Hose," "Fire Excits and Fire Escapes," "Auto Apparatus on Steep Grades," and "The Advisibality of Mixing Fire Alarm Systems."

HE'S A TRUE PATRIOT.

Man Who Understands the National Game but Fails to Grasp the "Star Spangled Banner."

The fire of patriotism burns in every normal hunman being, needing only the spark of imagination, of spoken word, or of music to attune it to the outward and visible expression of an inward emotion; thus when a theater orchestra plays the "Star Spangled Banner" or the national air is otherwise introduced in public the audience as a matter of course stands upon its several and respective feet, and at the conclusion cheers and resumes its place.

All rules have their exceptions, and although in this instance the exception is difficult to understand or to deal with patiently, it is occasionally ludicrous enough to be indulgently received.

Last night such an incident occurred in a local theater. The stirring national song was being exquisitely rendered by trained singers and the audience was standing—almost reverently.

One man evidently did not understand the custom. He looked about him in a dazed way, when everyone arose, and after a moment of indecision he, too, stood, although plainly mystified. He pondered deeply for a moment and the convolutions of his mind could almost be heard to creak—that is if convolutions ever do creak. Finally a smile cracked his countenance, and he whispered joyfully to his nearest neighbor:

"I've got it now. It's just like 'stretching time' in the seventh inning of a ball game

BIRDS DINE IN STYLE.

Doves in Central Park Prompt to Answer Dinner Call—They Know When Sunday Comes, Too.

A wordy war was precipitated yesterday in Central Park when a thoughtless youth threw a missle at one of the doves which make their home there, and dine cafeteria style from 11 to 2 o'clock, hopping along from one seat to another when workers from surrounding stores and office buildings are eating their midday lunch.

The birds have become very tame and absolutely fearless of the passing crowds; pedestrians frequently having to pick their way carefully lest one of the feathered flock be injured.

Some of the birds have their own particular lady and "jumpman" friends to whom they go at the proper hour with clock-like reguarity. Not only this, but the feathered when Sunday comes serve the day, for about the "lunch first day of the week.

The birds are so feed from the hand, them will perch upon the shoulders of their is a strong feeling of tween the man and their tickets, and no untoward ing to frighten or harm tolerated by the daily city's attractive breathing

WHIRLWIND WEDDING FOLLOWS TELEGRAM.

Mr. and Mrs. Harlan.

HERE is a short-order, cafeteria wedding, as it were, where a blushing bride was hurried to the altar on a moment's notice, where the minister who tied the nuptial knot was figuratively lassoed on the street, and where the groom raced madly to his own happiness with a speed that utterly bewildered his friends.

As a matter of fact, it was an up-to-date, rush-and-get-it-over-with wedding where the bridegroom showed the material that a young Los Angeles business man is made of by planning it, arranging for the inviting of guests via the telephone, securing the consent of the bride-to-be, and capturing a minister all in a few hours.

Miss Florence Smith, niece of Edward C. Lupton of No. 611 East Twenty-first street, and Hugh C. Harlan of Glendale, were the principals in the mile-a-minute romance. The wedding had to come off in a hurry because Harlan suddenly received a telegram summoning him to Tacoma to take a responsible position with a manufacturing company. They two had been engaged three years, and the date of the wedding was set for next month, but the telegram changed the situation.

When Harlan received the message and saw that his future depended on an immediate response to his orders he rushed to a telephone and called up Miss Smith.

"Hello, Florence, will you marry me—," he began, when Miss Smith broke in with an exclamation.

"Why, what's the matter Hugh?" she said, in astonishment. "I have promised to marry you so many times that I have forgotten the number."

"Yes, I know," said Hugh, talking at lightning speed, "but I want you to marry me now, this minute, instanter!" he explained.

"Why, why," gasped Miss Smith.

Then Hugh explained. Miss Smith saw a great light. She thought a moment and murmured a soft "yes" into the telephone transmitter.

"All right, good!" shouted her fiancee. "I'll get the minister right away. In the meantime you call up as many of our friends as you can get on the 'phone and tell them to come to the wedding."

Harlan was in despair about a minister. He called up every one he knew, but either could not get them on the telephone or they were unable to perform the ceremony because of other engagements. He was rushing madly along the street wondering what on earth he would do, when someone grasped him by the arm. It was an old friend, the Rev. S. F. Montgomery of the Presbyterian Church of Alhambra, whom he had not seen in years.

"How are you, Hugh?" he said, and then wondered why Hugh's face lighted up and why he clutched him in a death-like grip.

"You are the very man. You have got to marry me this evening," said Harlan.

"All right," said Rev. Mr. Montgomery.

In the meantime Will Harlan had been notified to don his finest bib and tucker and act as best man. He hurried home from his work and made himself look as much like a best man as possible in twenty minutes. Miss Smith called up a girl chum, Miss Esther Smith, and told her she would have to be bridesmaid. Miss Esther gasped, gurgled, started to explain why, "I just can't" on such short notice, but finally she consented and flew about the house. She soon appeared at the Lupton home looking like a May-blossom bridesmaid.

The wedding was a complete success, even if it was a hurried-up affair. It occurred Thursday evening. Yesterday morning the bride and bridegroom, followed by a troop of friends and relatives who showered them with rice and old shoes, boarded a boat for Tacoma.

LOSES EYE FOR SODA POP.

Bottle Explodes and Sliver of Glass Enters Boy's Optic—Happy Party's Unhappy Outcome.

A bottle of soda pop, thought to have been surcharged at the factory, its effervescent powers augmented by having been placed on ice, exploded Friday evening while Wooley Geldman, 16 years old, No. 5857 Howard street, was trying to open it. A sliver of glass entered the right eyeball. At the California Hospital yesterday morning the punctured optic was removed.

Geldman entertained a few boy friends Friday evening. Just before the party disbanded he asked his companions if they would like to have some soda. The bottled were passed around. The cork on the one Geldman held in his hands did pot respond easily to the cork puller, and the boy gave it an extra jerk. The bottle exploded with a loud report, and Goldman put his hands to his face with an exclamation of pain and horror. Blood streamed from facial lacerations.

A physicians found that a long, sharp-pointed splinter had entered the right eyeball. A more careful examination yesterday showed that the ball had been so severely injured that it was impossible to save it.

TAKE FIRM GRIP ON EPIDEMIC.

STRINGENT MEASURES TO RID CITY OF DISEASE.

Council's Approval Will Be Asked of Proposed Method of Conquering Infantile Paralysis — Proposition that Children Be Excluded from Public Places.

When the City Council meets in adjourned session tomorrow afternoon, Health Commissioner Powers and other members of the special committee appointed to act with him in the work of controlling and suppressing the epidemic of infantile paralysis will present a set of resolutions adopted by this committee, and ask for the Council's approval.

Stringent measures will be taken at once to rid the city of the disease, which has been spreading for several weeks.

The special committee, which was appointed at a conference of the acting Mayor, the Commissioner of Health, Superintendent of Schools, Superintendent of Playgrounds, several leading physicians and others interested, held at the Mayor's office Friday night, is composed of Drs. H. G. Brainard, S. P. Black, S. D. Brooks, W. LeMoyne Wills, L. M. Powers, Ross Moore, T. J. Orbison, W. A. Edwards, Acting Mayor Williams and Rev. R. L. Windsor.

This committee decided yesterday forenoon that Rev. Mr. Windsor and Drs. Orbison and Powers shall constitute a committee on publicity, to formulate and furnish information to the public as an aid in the suppression of the disease, and the press of the city was asked to co-operate with the general committee and the Health Commission to the fullest extent in informing the public about infantile paralysis and the best means of abating the epidemic.

Drs. Moore and Edwards were appointed a committee to confer with the Supervisors and the County Health Officer.

Dr. Wills was made chairman of a temporary municipal hospital committee, and was empowered to choose three others to assist him in the immediate establishment of a temporary hospital. Where parents are not able to take proper care of and isolate the children afflicted with infantile paralysis, the Commissioner will ask authority from the Council to remove such children to the temporary hospital, the expenses to be paid by the city.

Among the propositions the Health Commissioner and the special committee will submit to the City Council for approval are these:

That the Amelia-street, Macy-street and Castellar-street schools, which are conducting day nurseries, and which have in them about 1500 children, of which 1000 are under the age of 10 years and which are under the inspection of city nurses, be allowed to continue in operation at the discretion of the Health Commissioner, unless a case of infantile paralysis should be discovered within these schools.

That all children under 15 years of age be excluded from all public gatherings, places of amusement, etc., at the discretion of the Health Commissioner, and that the Commissioner of Health exclude from all public playgrounds all children under 10 years of age, and that parents be requested to keep their children of this age and younger under their own personal supervision and to isolate them as far as possible from other children.

CATHOLICS' GREAT OUTING.

Nearly Thirty Thousand Persons Expected to Attend Reunion Picnic at Redondo Beach Next Month.

Nearly 30,000 persons are expected to attend the Catholic reunion picnic to be held August 24 at Redondo Beach, and the committee in charge has provided an especially interesting programme to make the festival attractive.

There will be a literary programme of more than ordinary excellence, the principal speakers being Bishop Conaty and Judge McCormick. There will be the usual attractions of the baby show, races and athletic games and as special feature a tug-of-war for the married men.

D. F. McLaughlin, past president of the Ancient Order of Hibernians of this city, is president of the committee. The Executive Committee in charge is as follows: Stephen Bahr, chairman; J. J. McBride, secretary; John Reagan, treasurer; Walter Goldsmith, Charles A. King, Thomas P. Write, William Kamps, M. J. Gonzaleb, George Bertoneau, H. P. Bishoff, John O'Sullivan, Michael Stepan, Pat Higgins, Col. Tobin, Dr. A. J. School, Tom Nash and Tom Hurlihy.

Special accommodations will be provided by the railroads and at Redondo Beach for handling the large crowd, and special rates from Southern California points will be made.

AVIATOR CAPTURES FUGITIVE.

New Use for Aeroplane in Russia. Escaped Prisoner Has Day Start But Is Caught.

BY GEORGE FRASER.

[By Atlantic Cable and by Wireless from Chicago to The Times.]

ST. PETERSBURG, July 27.—An aeroplane has just participated in a sensational chase after an escaped prisoner. The convict managed to elude the guards protecting a gang of recently condemned prisoners on their way up the valley of the Don River. The escape was not reported until next day, when the officer in command of the troops of the district was inspecting the working of a military aeroplane. He directed the subordinate in charge of the machine to fly ahead of the patrol sent out and signal the presence of the prisoner as soon as he could sight him. The aviator did so, located the convict, descended and arrested him.

TO INVADE MONGOLIA.

Russia is about to send heavy reinforcements of troops into Mongolia. They are not being sent as soldiers but as road builders, ostensibly. It is generally believed here that Russia will place Mongolia and surrounding Chinese territory under rigorous military rule, and that the Japanese government assents to these plans.

DAIRYING INCREASES.

Cheese-making and dairy-farming on a large scale is growing at a rapid rate in the provinces within easy reach of St. Petersburg. During the last few months twenty large establishments with a joint output of 16,000 tons have been successfully launched. An export trade will be built up during the coming year.

SOLDIER TURNS BANDIT; NOW HE'S CAPTURED.

RECOGNIZED by soldiers formerly in his command, Lieut.-Col. Miguel Guerrero, formerly a well-known army officer, was arrested in Guadalajara yesterday on charges that are likely to result in his early execution, according to private advices received from the Mexican city last night.

Although the secret service of the Mexican government has long been on the track of Guerrero, it was not until he engaged a room in the Hotel Cosmopolita, Guadalajara, that suspicion was directed toward him by a volunteer soldier who served in his ranks when he arose against the government and started a bloody campaign against Americans living in the Territory of Tepic.

Until about four months ago, Lieut.-Col. Guerrero was one of the most trusted officers in the service of Madero, but it is alleged that he became enamored of power and the lust of loot and with his men, renounced his allegiance to the constituted authorities and began a campaign of plunder seldom equalled even in this country.

Unarmed Americans owning property in Tepic were massacred without mercy, it is alleged, and tens of thousands of dollars worth of property was carried off by the "pronunciados" acting under the orders of Guerrero.

Troops composed of rurales were sent in every direction to run down the bandit holding a commission in the Mexican army, but no trace was found, and it was supposed by many that he had perished in combat with the loyal troops of Madero.

Monday he went to the Cosmopolita Hotel and engaged a room under the name of Miguel Flores. He was taken into custody as he was preparing to flee from the city.

Upon being made a prisoner, Guerrero begged his captors to kill him on the spot rather than subject him to legal execution, which he believes inevitable.

Upon being required to make a statement to the judge of first instruction, the military man asserted that he had been battling against oppresion, and that his attacks upon American citizens were due to the desire to force intervention in order to get rid of the present executive.

"I have nothing against Americans because of their nationality, but rather because they are in a position to free my fellow countrymen and thus far have failed to do so," he explained.

The prisoner was sent to the penitentiary of Escobeda on four charges, any one of which is punishable by death in time of war.

Guerrero was one of the youngest, as well as one of the most daring officers in the service of the government and since his outbreak is asserted to have transformed himself into a veritable assassin and robber seeking opportunities to kill and enrich himself.

TREASURE-TROVE OF CIVIL STRIFE.

PHOTOGRAPHIC HISTORY GIVES AUTHENTIC STORY.

Brady's Camera Retained Impressions Which Would Have Been Lost but for His Brave Campaign at the Front—Priceless Record of the Past Yours for a Trifle.

A history which is at the same time a beautiful book of art—this is what the Patriot Publishing Company of Springfield, Mass., have attempted, and succeeded in making.

Fifty years ago the bravest photographer in the world lived in America. His name was Mathew B. Brady. He carried his camera with him through the countless dangers of the Civil War, and at the cannon's mouth and the bayonet's point wrested graphic records—thousands upon thousands—of the most stupendous value to the world. He had intended to give them to the world, but the great war left him abjectly poor, as it did so many other noble men, and he was compelled to sell these marvelous photographs at auction. They were scattered broadcast; Brady himself never knew what became of them.

After fifty years of patient search, no less than 3800 of them have been found—a treasure-trove of infinitely more worth than 3800 bags of gold. It belongs to us, to every citizen of the United States, to the men and women and children of the North and the South, and if Midas were alive today he could not buy it from us.

It belongs to us, because it is not hidden in a dark vault where none may gloat over it but the privileged few. It has been recoined, so to speak, and may now pass current everywhere. And each one of us may possess the whole treasure. Though divided into sixteen parts, it is compact and portable. It is known today as "The Civil War Through the Camera."

Drop into the office of The Times some day and estimate its value for yourself. You will say at once that it's the one big thing you have been looking for, and that you must have it. And its acquisition is so absurdly easy! You read The Times every day, of course. Well, look for the display advertisement of "The Civil War Through the Camera." At its bottom you will find a coupon. Cut this out, present it with 10 cents at any of the business offices of The Times, and one slice of the treasure is yours. Keep this up for sixteen weeks and you'll be the richest man, woman or child in America!

There are not only several hundred wonderful photographs of men and events of the Civil War in each of these parts, you will find, but verbal descriptions as factful and thrilling as the pictures. Henry W. Elson, professor of history in Ohio University, prepared all the written data—vivid pen-pictures of famous generals, of bloody battles, of marvelous maneuvers and thrilling coups. Pictures and text—written and unwritten chapters of history—what a book to fire the imagination, to stir the blood to a noble patriotism, to enrich the mind and heart through all one's future days!

There is color in every sentence written by Prof. Elson for this great history of the Civil War, but there are facts and figures as well. He tells you everything you ought to know, and in such a way that you will remember it. He chronicles events, but also probes for causes. His sidelights are often as illuminating as his searchlights. In short, he has the gift of the true historian.

Consider what you have in this new-found treasure, "The Civil War Through the Camera." In every one of the sixteen parts there is a thrilling story—an account of one or more of the world's greatest battles. In every part there are at least 200 of the Brady photographs, all authentic and truthful, because all were "taken on the spot" fifty years ago. Besides the photographs, each section has a colored frontispiece reproduced from a painting by some famous painter of battle scenes. The frontispiece to Part Three, for instance, "Battle Between the Monitor and Merrimac," painted by E. Packbauer, is as pictorially effective and dramatic as Turner's famous "Burning of the Temeraire." Indeed, at first glance you are reminded of the great Englishman's greatest picture, though Packbauer's painting is in no sense an imitation.

The artists who contributed to "The Civil War Through the Camera" seem to have been truly inspired by their subjects, and to have achieved the highest level of their attainments in every case. "The Battle of New Orleans" is like the lurid mouth of hell; "Flanking the Enemy" shows the glaring heat of Southern highways in October; and so on through the list—everywhere the artist's individual touch.

The waste of that great war was appalling—how appalling no one in all the world but Brady knew till now. "The Civil War Through the Camera" will win more advocates for universal peace than all other human efforts combined. It is a great work, nobly planned, and after fifty years most nobly carried out.

LETTERS TO "THE TIMES."

One of the Many Neglected Opportunities of Southern California.

LOS ANGELES, July 27.—[To the Editor of The Times:] The history of every industrial development in every nation shows that it obtained its start from the time it produced soda-ash and its many allied and by-products cheaply and in a high state of purity. There is not a household, camp, farm, shop or factory which does not use soda in some form or other. But there are many industrial enterprises which are impossible without a cheap supply of soda-ash or soda-lye. The more extensive use of waste from our sawmills, the manufacture of better grades of glass, the production of cyanide for our mines, the development of the textile industry, which have done so much for England, France, Germany and the eastern States are directly dependent upon a large and cheap supply of high-grade soda-ash. These and many others would become a source of great income on this coast, while others already established would increase in size and importance as soon as a home-manufacture of soda can furnish a sufficiently pure product at approximately the same price which prevails in the eastern markets free from the prohibitive freight from eastern factories to this coast.

In the East as well as all over the globe, the crude material for the manufacture of soda is common salt. This, of course, we have here in abundance. We also have cheap fuel in our fuel-oils. But unfortunately, we can not furnish the cheap ammonia nor electricity which are the all-important accessories in the East. We cannot hope, therefore, to see this industry launched on the basis of salt as a raw material in the near or distant future.

We have, however, in our despised desert-alkali, a source of sodium-salts peculiar to the semi-arid regions. They occur in places in vast inexhaustible quantities. Wherever they can be obtained cheaply, they present a raw material from which soda-ash, caustic soda, etc., can be manufactured. The cost of production will compare very favorably with the cost of the same products from salt in the East, but it will have the additional advantage of not being hampered with chlorine, for which the eastern factories can only find a limited market, while the market on this coast is very small indeed.

Under existing conditions, the consumption of soda-ash and allied products on the coast amounts to something like 100,000 tons annually and is steadily increasing. What it could be, if the price was cut squarely to one-half is hard to say. To bring this about, of course, will require a considerable outlay of capital, since operations of this kind can not be carried on successfully on a very scale. Their success, however, is assured, if capital and highest chemical engineering skill work in harmony to the desired end.

The indirect value of thus laying the cornerstone for an industrial development in an entirely new direction for this coast and especially California is beyond estimation.

DR. JULIUS KOEBIG.

The Dog's Tale.

LOS ANGELES, July 27.—[To the Editor of The Times:] To muzzle or not to muzzle is the question in the air, both sides being very vehement in their conclusions. As nothing has been said by the dogs I crave a little space to tell the story, as told by the chief cause of the present excitement. With the facts before them it should not be hard for the Humane Society, or the powers that be, to find a remedy at once, effectual and permanent, that will protect both humanity and the dogs.

HIS STORY.

"No home worth the name; almost starved, my only food an occasional rotten, maggot infested bone that was worse than poison; no water for days at a time, abused by the children, fought by the other dogs, eaten up by fleas, no rest, day or night, is it any wonder the fever got in my blood, that my brain got on fire, and I went crazy-mad—call it what you please. I lost all control of myself, knowledge or care of what I did."

MAD FIDO.

Thousands of dogs in this city and elsewhere, are suffering the same torture, anyone of them liable at any time to go wild and become that terrible thing, an irresponsible, dangerous animal. It is useless to insist there is no such thing as rabies. The name of a thing makes very little difference, when it has been proven to be some specific disease, terrible in its agony, and infectious, not only to other animals, but to human kind. But if denying the trouble is useless, muzzling the healthy well-cared-for dogs is almost as much so; fully as useless if it is to be continued only thirty days; a fresh case is liable to crop out any time. At best it is only a temporary remedy and no more strikes at the root of the matter than screening a house would have wiped out the scourge of yellow fever.

It is the homeless, uncared-for dog that starts the trouble. The evidence is clear. Get rid of the homeless dogs, the dogs with no pedigree; start the campaign early before the heated term makes his existence unendurable. Extend the restrictions regarding the keeping of dogs in certain districts; they are not allowed in apartment-houses or hotels; they should not be allowed in the congested tenement districts. It is a question in the minds of many whether any but house dogs should be allowed inside the city limits; they certainly should not be allowed to roam the streets unaccompanied by their owners any more than horses or cows. If they are to be kept it should be in shady, roomy yards, with clean, comfortable sleeping quarters. It might be an excellent idea to raise the license for large dogs; a man who cannot pay for a license cannot afford to keep a dog, anyway.

Disseminate literature on the proper care of dogs. Not one person in 100 knows how to care for a dog, or the symptoms of the most common diseases. A properly cared for dog never roams and seldom leaves his home for any length of time. I speak from experience on this for I have kept a dog several years.

Fear of the wastebasket deters me from speaking of such common ailments as a flea in his ear, a carious tooth, or other ailments that sometimes fall to the lot of the best cared for dog, making them "act queer" and frightening the uninformed. The Humane Society can start something a good deal better for the dogs than trying to recall any of the health board, who are simply using the only ordinance at their command.

Yours for the children and the dogs.

The woman's name is Maxima Carmon, of Spanish birth, 23 years of age, slight build, very light complexion. CITY TO MAKE CHEESE.

teries, crematories and morgues, conduct almshouses and municipal farms.

The charter draft specifies in a long list the various propositions in which the city may engage, with the blanket provision thereafter that it may engage in any propositions necessary or convenient for the transaction of public business or for the promoting of health, morals, education or the welfare of the inhabitants of the city, or for their amusement, recreation, entertainment, or benefit. In short, whatever you want, ask the city to furnish it.

The height of buildings is limited to 150 feet, except public buildings and monuments, and spires, domes and towers of houses of religious worship when authorized by ordinance.

PENSION SYSTEM FOR AGED.

The city is authorized to provide an adequate pension system for the aged.

Each month the commission shall publish in at least one newspaper, or print in pamphlet form, a detailed itemized account of all the receipts and expenditures of the city and a summary of the proceedings during the preceeding month.

If an initiative petition be signed by only 5 per cent. of the qualified voters it must be submitted by the commissioners to the electors at their next municipal election.

PATERNAL, SURE!

The city is to be paternal to an extreme degree, if the clause recommended by Dr. Delos P. Wilcox, the New York charter expert engaged to help prepare these plans, is finally accepted. The clause reads:

"It is hereby declared to be the policy of the city of Los Angeles to own all public utility plants, either within or without the city limits, which are or shall be necessary to supply said city, or the inhabitants thereof, with local transportation, communication, light, heat, power, water, refrigeration, terminal facilities, or other public services which can be conveniently rendered by private parties only by virtue of franchises or other special privileges granted by public authority. It is also declared to be the policy of the city of Los Angeles to operate all public utility plants owned by it, except in such cases and to such extent as may be determined from time to time to be impracticable or not for the best interests of the city, every such determination to be made by or in accordance with an ordinance approved by the people of the city."

The Wilcox proposition also includes a clause declaring:

"All private investments in distributing systems, land, rights of way, buildings, sources of supply, equipment, machinery, or other portions of any public utility plant necessarily and properly used or intended to be used in the supply of a commodity or service to the city of Los Angeles or the inhabitants thereof under special franchises or rights granted by public authority, whether such investments are already existing or shall hereafter be made, are hereby declared to be investments in aid of public credit."

The Wilcox creed, which he has submitted for insertion in the proposed charter, and which has been referred to a special committee, provides, in brief:

NEW CREED.

(1) The public ownership of all properties of public utilities, including steam and interurban railroads, within the city, acquisition to be by an amortization fund out of the utilities' earnings or the city's taxing powers, or by using the city's credit, with the invoking of condemnation proceedings, if necessary.

(2) Provided it will agree to sell to the city the property it already has in the city, and that it will surrender all existing franchises, and agree to extend and improve its property as the city may direct, and that it will provide a fund for the purchase of the property by the city out of its own earnings, any public utility may be given a new franchise for not to exceed twenty-one years, except steam and interurban railroads on private rights of way, which can have forty years.

Neither of these limitations mean anything, since the city is to have the right to buy at any time upon intervals of not more than two years. Simply expressed, this is a proposition that the public utilities, including steam and interurban railroads, shall surrender their existing franchise rights, fix prices upon their property in the city, and give the city an option to buy at such agreed prices any time, but at intervals not greater than two years. The city has the right to buy on its own account for somebody else.

(3.) If the city buys the terminals of a railroad, either steam or interurban, it must rent these terminals at a fair rental to let such railroads get into the city as may be necessary; but the city is to have, for example, the right to buy a railroad's property and permit a rival road to use it if such rival so desires.

(4.) Any franchise granted hereafter to a public utility that does not make "a franchise contract," as described in the foregoing paragraphs, shall provide that the city can buy the property created thereunder at one year's notice. It shall have no longer life than that of the connecting utility's franchise, and a maximum limit of twenty-one years; except that if it be a new public utility the city may allow it five years to live before the city has a right to purchase.

Until an entire city plan shall have been worked out, no terminal improvements of any nature shall be permitted, or if such franchises are granted, they shall be subject to modification.

AS CAPITAL SEES IT.

The views of men who invest their money in railroad enterprises on this proposition were succinctly expressed by W. E. Dunn, chief counsel for the Los Angeles Railway Corporation, at the meeting of the Board of Freeholders the past week, when he declared:

"You cannot develop through private agencies to any great extent if you put such limitations upon them as will cause them to stagnate, or if you do not permit them to receive a fair return on their investments. You must consider the question of public utilities in a new and rapidly-growing city as different from that of those in an old and settled community, where the rate of growth is definite. These are two entirely different propositions. Capitalists can get 6 per cent on their money on the street without taking any hazards, if that is all that is to be considered. Either we must have provisions that will allow us to go ahead or we must shut down all extensions and try to get out what we can before the franchises expire."

Vice-President Shoup of the Pacific Electric, at a previous meeting, informed the Board of Freeholders that, under the limitations proposed he was absolutely certain that it would be impossible for his company to get capital to build the proposed subways which are so greatly needed for the future development of the city, and to relieve the present congested condition of the downtown district.

Special Counsel Halstead of the Salt Lake railroad, told the commission: "I do not think it would be fair to condemn our railroad terminals and take them over. It's rather a startling proposition that a road which is operating 1000 miles or more of trackage should have its terminal taken away from it."

REFUSES TO BE EASY MARK.

Uncle Sam Objects to Paying Expenses of Twenty-two Chinese Witnesses for Alleged Smuggler.

"Billy" Gerald, an alleged smuggler in the County Jail awaiting trial in connection with the Starlight affair, would like to have the government pay the bill for the maintenance of the twenty-two Chinese contraband now held in Los Angeles and San Francisco as witness in his behalf until some time this winter, when his trial will be had.

All of the Chinese are under orders of deportation, twelve in the County Jail here and ten in San Francisco, and orders are expected from the Department of Commerce and Labor to have them shipped North. It is the intention of the government to keep six as witnesses against Gerald, but Gerald's attorney was informed yesterday that if his client desires the presence of all the prisoners as witnesses it will be necessary to make an arrangement for their pay of $1 a day until so called.

Gerald has been expecting to get financial assistance from the East. It is said that six of the Chinese have turned State's evidence and implicated all of the defendants jointly charged with Gerald.

Frank M. Porter, dean of the College of Law of the University of Southern California, left last night for a ten-day hunting and fishing trip in the Santa Cruz Mountains. At Bowlder Creek he will be met by R. E. Maddock, one of this year's graduates of the college, who will accompany the dean back into the wilds.

SOUTH PARK REPUBLICANS.

Organize Taft Club and Pledge Themselves to Support Only Straight-out Candidates of Party.

The South Park Taft Republican Club is a healthy organization organized in the south part of the city, which will meet every Tuesday and Friday evening at the club headquarters, No. 3826 South Park avenue. It is composed largely of old soldiers and sons of veterans, who declare they believe in the principles of the old party and are not seeking after strange gods or would-be third-termers. They believe that President Taft was renominated according to the rules of the Republican National Committee, and that he therefore is the only Republican candidate for President. They have pledged themselves to further the interests of only such candidates as are of the true-blue, straight-Republican type.

The officers of the club are as follows: S. A. Dove, president; B. M. Chesley, Sr., J. R. Pendory, vice-presidents; Edward L. Burgoin, treasurer; G. L. Hager, secretary; Executive Committee, Henry Norton, W. F. Clarke, E. La Verne, J. B. Marleau, C. F. Schmidt, Job R. McKain, J. J. Hayes, A. T. Bradley, A. F. Meyer, M. A. Hager, J. F. Snyder, A. L. Brizius, G. D. Smith, R. Goddard, G. E. Monroe, E. L. Burgoin and G. L. Hager.

THE SOBER MAN ALWAYS WINS

Because His Brain Is Not Clogged With Alcohol and His Judgment Is Good.

No man whose nerves are wrecked and whose brain is clogged with alcoholic poison can keep up his end in the business world. Both employer and employe find themselves handicapped. The business man finds his competitors outstripping him and his customers leaving. The employe finds his work is getting behind and he is losing confidence in his employer. In both instances the family see and pay for the inevitable result. A continuance of this condition means loss of friends and ruin for the business man and loss of position for the employe. It is the sober man who wins. When men find the use of liquor is getting the best of them they should go at once to the Los Angeles Neal Institute, where in three days' time all craving and necessity for alcoholic stimulants will be entirely removed and they can at once go back to business and employment new men, with clear brains and steady nerves. The Neal Treatment is ethical—a purely vegetable remedy, taken internally, with no hypodermic injections.

The Neal Drink Habit Treatment is successfully administered at fifty-three Neal Institutes in the United States, Canada and Australia.

TAYLORING THIS TOWN.

All the Girls Would Look Just Like Laurette.

Everybody's Doin' It, Say the Photographers.

Slop Hat, Slap Coiffure and the Slip Gown.

BY GRACE KINGSLEY.

We aren't tailored any more.

We are Taylored!

Taylor is, of course, quite a general term, like Smith and Jones. Being qualified with a "Laurette" makes all the difference.

Laurette Taylor is the girl whose name is in our hearts and on our chewing gum!

We are naming our sailboats and babies and soft drinks and new systems of philosophy after the charming little actress, and there is now a Laurette Taylor waltz, a Laurette Taylor cigar, and a Laurette Taylor sundae. I even know a Johnny who, as a touching mark of his devotion, has named his polo pony for her, and a small boy who has L. T. on his Irish mail. Popularity can go no further.

In deed, a new genus is being born: the Matinee Girl's Girl Matinee Idol!

And—have you noted?—the Girl Idol must be the very quintessence of femininity—women feel a vague distrust of masculinity in other women. Laurette Taylor is peculiarly a woman's woman, like Maude Adams and Ruth Chatterton. In these is something which attracts other women subtly—like a fine harmony inaudible to ears not tuned to it; subtlety calling to subtlety, passing clean over masculine heads.

When have we heretofore swallowed, as it were, an actress whole? We have gurgled the Ethel Barrymore gurgle, we have hoo-hooed like Mizzi, we have walked and curled the Billie Burke walk and curls, and have wriggled the Anna Held wriggle. But when it comes to really starting something, Laurette Taylor is the original Mayflower.

"Everybody's doin' it,"—Peg and her charming little slouchy gait, and her dear little slovenly accent.

What has become of the svelte figure that used to trip down Broadway? Gone. And in its place patters down-street a quaint little shape, slouching along with daintily drooping shoulders and softly shuffling slippers. And take the large, husky woman, with the openwork countenance; she has a hula gait now. And the lady of one dimension walks the way an oyster would if it could walk at all.

When you go to a party nowadays, do you sit up nice and straight, and speak in a clear, ringin., tone? Not by a long ways. You droop and wilt like a top-heavy lily, and talk in a soft little monotone, with a thick tongue. And as for manners, why a little modest violet beside a mossy stone is a great, rude, coarse creature compared to your gentleness—save that you occasionally allow yourself a saucy little bon-mot.

And do you slick back your hair and roach it up neatly? No, sir., you scramble it.

And talk about your Mad Hatters! Why, that classic individual was a professional logician compared to the girls of this town. To be correct, you wear a floppy hat so low that it looks like the cover to a dish. The more dejected and left-out-all-night you can make your hat look, nowadays, the more fashionable you are; and if you can achieve a look as if it had been used as referee in a dog-fight, you may feel your day hasn't been wasted.

Also, you name your dog Michael, if he's the right brand. Just think of the tails that wag responsive: French poodles, New Foundlands, Spitz, Boston terriers, and all. Why, you can start a dog fight any time just by standing in the middle of the street and shouting "Michael!"

Now no dog should be named Michael except one with a long, sad face and water eye—one that looks as if he would pray if he saw another dog coming. But here are short, fuzzy dogs and tall woolly ones; dogs with pedigrees so long they have a perspective, and bar sinister dogs; intellectual canines that can ask for a drink of water, and low-brow animals with no thought above a chop; cold, haughty dogs, and small frisky ones; big dogs with mansard roofs, and low, rakish dogs, self-seeking dogs, who would take your last bone away from you, and dogs who believe in the transmigration of souls!

I heard of a "Peg-o'-My-Heart" party, the other day, where all the girls brought their dogs. The result was—well, to put it delicately and briefly, those dogs acted as if they were holding an anti-muzzling convention. It was very exciting. A friend of mine tells me she is wearing her dog in a sling, this week, as the result.

The first symptom of the Laurette Taylor disorder that I noted was on the car, one day.

"It's the way me mother dhresses meh!"

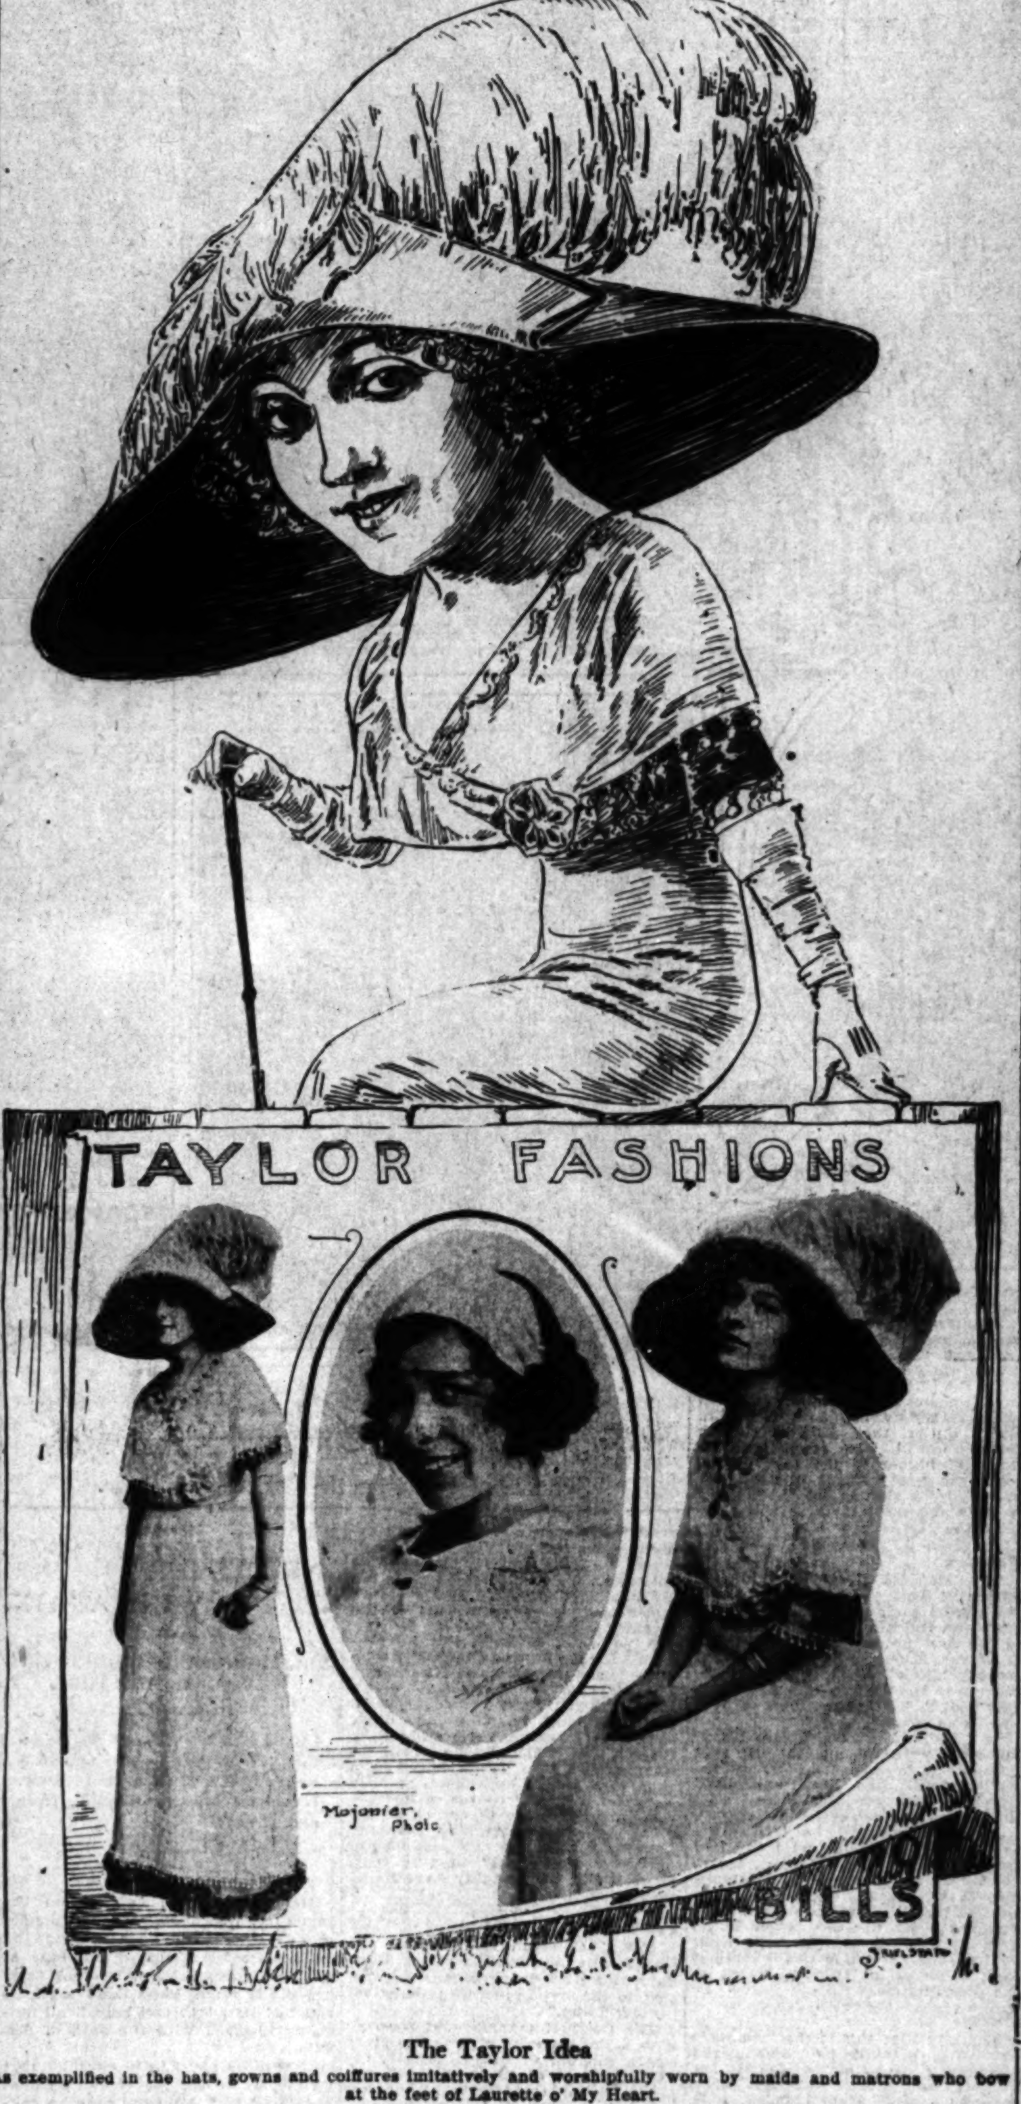
"Why," I murmured, "if that doesn't sound just like that cunning Laurette Taylor," and glanced involuntarily round to behold—a fat little German girl I knew!

We are completely demoralized. We are charmingly dippy. Peg has done more for the Irish cause and home rule in this town than all the politicians. Who cares if the maid does come in with wandering eye, answer our yearning for cream without enthusiasm, and spills the coffee down our backs; we know her shuffling gait and manner is just a Peg stunt!

Before their mirrors, at home, the little society maidens are practicing the Peggy droop, and they drape themselves over the furniture or lie on their little tummies, in the drawing-room and never, never know when someone enters the room.

Now it's all very well for the little slim girls to play at "Peg-o'-My-Heart;" but just take some sylph who weighs 250, and move her out of her corsets, and into a Laurette Taylor mother-hubbard. As the poet feelingly puts it: "Waistward the gown of empire takes it way!"

If you receive at home, you must have a dog. If you haven't a dog, you must rent one. Even a cold-storage dog will do, at a pinch, I understand, for I heard of a girl who lives in one of those canned flats and carries a little stuffed one around with her.



The Taylor Idea

As exemplified in the hats, gowns and coiffures imitatively and worshipfully worn by maids and matrons who bow at the feet of Laurette o' My Heart.

A friend took me to tea, the other day, without warning me. We entered a room where girls all dressed in empire gowns, were lopping about.

"What's the matter with these girls?" I asked. "Is this a rest-room in a spinal infirmary, or have they over-partaken of ice cream and become colicky? Evidently this is no place for us. Let's go away before the poor things see us."

She looked at me pityingly, and said: "Why, no, this is a 'Peg-o'-My-Heart' party."

"Oh," I said, "I thought it was just something the matter with them—the hot sun or something."

And I went in and pretended to like their nosy little dogs.

But don't for a moment imagine all this careless effect is obtained without trouble. It's a studied carelessness that achieves that wind-blown hair, those loosely-hung gowns, that graceful little droop of the shoulders; and I'd advise only an artist to try it.

But the thing was inevitable, anyhow. Laurette Taylor was merely the come-on lady. We've been all ready to read the declaration of independence to our stiff clothing for a long time; and the empire gown (which, as the politician said of his speech, "covers everything and touches nothing," goes romping right to the goal.

But the imitation goes still deeper. For a long time there has been a subtle longing, a vague hankering, to get back to naturalness and genuineness and truth. "Peg-o'-My-Heart" is the concrete example. Yet I do not believe the little actress would ever have gained her wonderful hold on us, had she not been first Laurette Taylor, and afterward the little Irish maid.

Despite the mad rush of imitation—a popular beauty-snatcher tells me he has taken fifteen pictures of these near L.T.'s this week—there is, afer all, just one Laurette Taylor.

The Week.

REAL FINALE FOR "PEG" PLAY.

MANNERS'S LONG-RUNNING HIT MUST COME OFF.

Second Week of "Man from Home"—Conclusion of Fischer's Present Company With Repetition of "Tillie"—Kolb and Dill Laying Off to Rehearse.

"Peg o' My Heart" continues to be the wonder of the entire show world and while theaters all over the country are closed for what is admittedly the dullest period—in a theatrical sense—of the year, this charming comedy of Hartley Manners', with Laurette Taylor in the name role, will start on its tenth and positively last week of popularity and prosperity this afternoon at the Burbank.

With the performance next Saturday night, "Peg o' My Heart" will have established a new attendance record for stock performances. When George Broadhurst's financial play, "The Dollar Mark," was given here several years ago it was played for 100 times, but this was at the height of the tourist season, when every theater was crowded at all times. The Manners's play will have been given for 101 performances with the Saturday night presentation, thereby surpassing "The Dollar Mark's" record by a single performance—made possible by the extra matinee given to local and visiting professionals and the general public when "Peg" was four weeks old.

In the meantime, Richard Bennett, Mabel Morrison and Ada Dwyer are in Los Angeles anxiously awaiting the end of "Peg," so they may have a chance to play their original parts in "The Deep Purple."

Belasco.

There is no more popular individual in the vicinity of the Belasco Theater nowadays than "The Man from Home." So well liked is this quaint whimsical, shrewd, Indiana lawyer, as played by John Barrymore, that he will continue to provide a vast amount of keen, genuine pleasure on the Belasco stage for a second week, commencing with tomorrow night's presentation.

"The Man from Home's" second week at the Belasco will terminate the special starring engagement of Mr. Barrymore. Immediately on the conclusion of the final performances of the Tarkington-Wilson comedy Mr. Barrymore will leave for New York. The next attraction to occupy the attention of the Belasco players will be "The Taming of Alberta," a new play by Edward Childs Carpenter, in which Lewis S. Stone will be seen for the last time before leaving for Chicago to resume his original role in "The Bird of Paradise."

Mason.

Commencing Monday night, the Mason will for the first time house the celebrated Alaska-Siberia motion pictures. These pictures are said to be the finest ever taken; the details are plain, distinct, and are full of excitement and adventure.

The engagement of these pictures will be of short duration, running for two weeks, with regular matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

The Carnegie Museum of Pittsburgh, Pa., in the spring of 1911, sent out an expedition under Capt. F. E. Kleinschmidt for the purpose of collecting scientific data and specimens of the animal and bird life (fauna) of Alaska, Siberia and the Arctic. Owing to the fact that the season was the most open (that is the Arctic Ocean was the most free from ice) of any time in the last twenty-two years, the expedition was able to penetrate to the furtherest north ever reached by ship (Wrangel Land,) 73 degrees north latitude. The motion pictures secured covered the principal events of the trip.

The reels show the inside passage between Seattle and Alaska; the Bogoslof Islands are part of the Aleutian group that extend into the Pacific from the Alaska peninsula; Seward Peninsula; Kings Island, between Alaska and Siberia in the center of Bering Strait; Wrangel Land, 200 miles north of North Cape, Siberia, and scenes in the open Arctic north of Bering Strait, with wonderful views of animal life and virgin country.

Fischer's Lyceum.

Beginning with today's matinee, and running one week only, as his farewell offerng of the Fischer Follies company and May Boley, "Pop" Fischer will put on a tremendous revival of the company's greatest success, "Tillie's Nightmare," with May Boley as Tillie Blobbs.

Immediately following its close, the summer season of silly shows begins, with Rice and Cady starred.

That it will be a week of packed houses and tremendous enthusiasm goes without saying. The original role, which May Boley interprets so exceedingly well, will again grip her thousands of admirers, and it is certain that a most unusual presentation will be the result. The original cast, including Madson Smith, Reece Gardner, Texas Guinan, Jane Urban, Laura Oakley, Herbert Cawthorne, and, of course Bob Lett, will be in evidence, and the same brilliant array of chorus numbers and dances will be offered for the edification of all.

In no particular will the show be slighted and its four weeks previously assures a finished performance from the start. There will be performances every night, and the usual Sunday and Saturday matinees, with the bargain matinee Wednesday.

On the following Sunday, Rice and Cady, the best of German dialect comedians, will open up, without a break in "I O U," the first of the silly summery shows that will be played for a season, two a night, with frequent matinees. An excellent company is to support Rice and Cady, including several of the Follies principals, and most of the present chorus. The bill will change every Sunday.

Orpheum.

The absolute top note in vaudeville will be reached at the Orpheum the week opening with tomorrow's matinee, when, for the first time, an offering by the mast of American drama and stage craft, David Belasco, will be made in the two-a-day. The admirable selection of "Mme. Butterfly" has been made for this Belasco debut into a new field for him—a drama which he wrote from the dainty story by John Luther Long, and which he originally made for a starring vehicle for Blanche Bates.

Just as she used it—for "Butterfly" was only a one-act play originally—it will be given now, only, of course, with all the modernity which progress has made meanwhile, in the way of skilled light effects, stage illusion and atmospheric betterment.

The caste is headed by Clara Blandick as Cho-Cho-San; Ynez Seabury as little Trouble; Earl Ryder as Sharpless, and George Wellington as Pinkerton, while the subordinate roles are equally well placed—as is the invariable Belasco habit. In every possible detail it has been sought to offer in "Butterfly" an absolutely perfect stage play; one originally a gem, now still more beautified by improvements in every line, including stage, lights, atmosphere and caste.

The five original Periscoffis, European juggling family, are notable for their ensemble work, the united quality of their act and their marvelous skill. Ray L. Royce is a character study interpreter alone in his class. Edna Luby is a graceful English girl mimic, of rare beauty, worth and range. In her line she is inimitable. The Elliott Savonas, in their musical act, "The Concealed Bed," the Graham-Moffat Scotch act; Ed Wynn, with Edmund Russon, and the Boudini brothers, remain.

Pantages.

Lucia Lotti Collins who will be the star of the Pantages show this week, needs no other introduction to Californians than her mother's name. It is twenty years since Lottie Collins made herself and Ta-ra-ra-boom-de-ay famous in a single night, and the little English comedienne is still a happy memory to all who saw and heard her. Lotti second makes her first apearance in the country with the Pantages show, reaching here via Australia. After her Pantages' engagement, she is scheduled for the New York Winter Garden, and then returns to England.

Something unusual in athletics is expected from Romano brothers, when they appear next week at Pantages. These men are athletes of the type that Homer and Virgil praised in their epics of the demi-gods and heroes. They illustrate the games of the ancient gladiators, and coming down to modern sports show the knockout blows that have made and unmade modern prize ring champions, past and present.

Carl Rosine and M'lle Marguerite, his dainty assistant, have an act that depends for its phenomenal success on the performers' dexterity in presenting their stage illusions. One of their most successful attractions is a trick clock that does things no clock ever thought of doing before, and probably never will again.

Bond Morse, monogolist, otherwise known as "The Man From Nowhere," will qualify as a regular Pantages feature in a series of tramp-life stories, each of which is tagged with a hearty laugh.

Doelsch and Zillbauer, Viennese street musicians, are described as a comedy hit. They were last seen in Los Angeles about five years ago.

The headline feature of the week's show is the miniature musical comedy "A Night in the Edelweiss," with a company of ten people, singers and comedians. The scene is laid in the "Edelweiss" Cafe and the act is heralded as the cleverist of its kind yet presented in vaudeville. Into the story are interpolated half a score of catchy song numbers ranging fro

Empress.

The Sullivan and Considine Road Show, consisting of seven selected acts, and forming what is promised as the best bill that has ever been sent over this popular priced circuit, will come to the Empress Theater for an engagement of one week, commencing with the matinee tomorrow. The bill is headed by that famous satire on prison life, "High Life in Jail," which will be presented by the original cast, headed by Wm. H. Mack.

"High Life in Jail" has proved one of the biggest and best fun provokers that has come to the vaudeville stage in the last five years, during which it has continually headed bills in many of the most prominent vaudeville theaters of two continents. In the particular jail represented in this comedy, the prisoners are a crowd of grafters and crooks, who live in constant fear of being pardoned, that they will have to again go out in the cruel world and live as ordinary people live.

The second feature of the Road Show bill will be the well-known comedian Harlin E. Knight, who has won an enviable reputation as the "Original Rube From Maine." With his company of four, he will be seen in the new one act rural comedy "The Chalk Line." This is the delightfully humorous story of the troubles between an old postmaster and an old storekeeper who have a little combination store in a small Maine town. In the role of the irritable old postmaster, with a peculiar vein of humor, Mr. Knight will again have an opportunity for his clever character study of his justly famous rural character.

Third in importance on the new bill will be the popular Olivotti Troubadours, Italian musicians. The Olivotti Troubadours have been seen at the Empress theater before and have never failed to score the biggest hit of any of the acts surrounding them.

McIntyre and Groves, a team of young comedians, should furnish much good fun with their laughable skit called "On Father's Train." McIntyre is the son of the famous minstrel man of that name, and has inherited much of his father's ability as a comedian. Harry Cutler, the English singing comedian, will also contribute his share of humor to the programme, while the four Mayos in a novelty comedy roller skating act and the new comedy and news pictures will complete the Road Show bill.

Majestic.

The Majestic Theater will remain dark this week, but will reopen one week from tonight, August 4th, with Kolb and Dill and their big company in the first production on any stage of Frank Stammers' new musical comedy "Peck o' Pickles," which Mr. Stammers has written as a new starring vehicle for this fine team of German comedians.

In "Peck o' Pickles," Mr. Stammers has written a musical play that promises to be even a greater hit for Kolb and Dill than "The Politicians," which is quite generally regarded as the best of the Kolb and Dill offerings.

It is what might be termed "a dream play," the first act being laid in the little town of Walpole, Mass., the second act takes one to Washington, D. C., at the time of Lincoln's election, the third act goes ahead one hundred years to 1960, when Theodore Roosevelt has been made King of the United States, with the last act back to earth in Walpole, Mass., at the present time.

Mozart.

The fact that this is the "woman's age" will certainly be emphasized when upon the opening of the Mozart Theater on Grand avenue near Seventh, a week from Monday, it is realized that the entire working force, from the management down, is to consist of women. The manageress has her hands full just at present superintending the new decorations of the theater, engaging her feminine working force, and installing the colossal Fotoplayer, which was built especially for this theater, and shipped across the continent for the opening on August fifth, its complex parts being put together and properly placed under the personal direction of the inventor himself.

A series of pictures will be presented for the first time, including such subjects as St. George and the Dragon, Custer's Last Fight, Blanche Walsh in the "Resurrection," Edgar Allen Poe's "Raven," and many other equally dramatic and interesting films.

Even the picture films will be manipulated by young ladies who were sent from Los Angeles to New York for a special course of instruction in order to do this work at the Mozart—to say nothing of the lady policeman, especially commissioned to "preserve the peace" in this cosy, comfortable, thoroughly ventilated theater.

Colonial.

Nat C. Goodwin will come to the Colonial for one week, starting Monday, with his own personally-selected cast, in the motion picture production, "Oliver Twist."

The Colonial management recently gave a private exhibition to the press and a number of theatrical folk, including some of those who will appear with Mr. Goodwin in his coming starring engagement in this city, and all praised the star's portrayal of the brutal "Fagin," and the clever work of the supporting company. Mr. Goodwin himself was delighted with the splendid success of his first appearance in motion pictures.

OHLMEYER WINS AGAIN.

CORONADO BAND HIGHLY COMMENDED IN THE EAST.

But It Is a Los Angeles Organization, Nevertheless—Its Constituency and the Work of Its Director. Incidental Musical Mention, Here and There.

BY JULIAN JOHNSON.

Henry Ohlmeyer, again upon the sands of Coronado, has thoroughly earned his eastern laurel. Ohlmeyer is an accredited success not only at Willow Grove, but in the other eastern cities where good band music is rated at its worth and bum band music is received with the sniff of disdain.

It is quite pleasing to consider that Ohlmeyer is an Angeleno, resident here, and that his band may be considered a genuine home affair, most of the men living here, though the contracts are, in good part, eastern made.

Ohlmeyer has a concert band—not a boiler factory aggregation for harmonic blasting at the head of the Fourth-of-July parade. His programmes at Coronado this year are of the best class of music.

John Hughes is solo cornetist; Ross Millhouse is his assistant; Franz Helle is still the beautiful brass voice in the Fluegel-horn chair, and James G. Seebold, a Pennsylvanian, is demonstrating unusual artistry at the head of the wood-wind section, as flute and piccolo soloist.

Eastern critics, hearing Ohlmeyer last month, declared that he was the only man in America to class with Sousa and Victor Herbert, as a leader of a concert organization of his class.

One might add that Ohlmeyer is out of the class of most directors, as he is not only conductor, but his own manager and promoter, attending to every detail of his band's financial and other business, and personally arranging and conducting all tours and concert pilgrimages.

As said often in The Times musical columns—when a good band is formed of local men it has to go to Coronado, Catalina, or some far-distant place to obtain an engagement. We had a municipal band and threw it down, miserably. The material is here. We organize and towns afar reap the pleasure and benefit.

I hear that the band will play an engagement at the Auditorium under Behymer's management, in September.

Song Recital.

Ellis M. Rhodes, tenor, recently returned from Italy and Germany, where he devoted the past two years studying Italian opera and German lieder, presented an evening of song in the assembly rooms of the Albemarle Apartments, No. 2343 Scarff street, last evening. Mr. Rhodes possesses a tenor voice of fine quality which is well handled, and his work shows that he has had masterful training. His singing was thoroughly enjoyed by a critical audience. Mr. Rhodes leaves within a month for Des Moines, Iowa, where he has been engaged as dean of music in the Methodist College there, he also assuming the position of director and tenor soloist of the Methodist Church in the same city.

Joseph Lhevinne, pianist, who will make an extensive tour of this country the coming season, has just enjoyed a most gratifying triumph in his London appearance with the London Symphony Orchestra, presenting three concertos, Beethoven's "Emperor," Liszt's E Flat, and Tschaikowsky's in B Flat. He was most enthusiastically received and compelled to give an encore after the long Tschaikowsky number.

Kitty Cheatham, the distinguished American diseuse, who will make her debut on the Pacific Coast, next February, gave her only matinee this season at the Little Theater, London, under the immediate patronage of Princess Victoria of Schleswig-Holstein. Miss Cheatham was in capital form and gave her usual interesting and varied programme. She is now on the continent resting and planning the presentation of several new numbers on next season's programmes.

Rudolph Ganz, solo pianist with Riccardo Martin on the latter's fall tour, will remain in this country until next May or even later, judging from the demands received for solo appearances of this brilliant pianist.

George Hamlin, who will be one of the tenors with the Chicago Metropolitan Grand Opera Company when here next March, has arrived at his summer home on Lake Placid. Mr. Hamlin will be available for a limited number of recital engagements while here with the opera company.

Next season will be Alice Nielsen's last in this country for two years, as a world tour is now being arranged that will not bring her back to this country until 1915. Immediately following her Pacific Coast appearances in October, Miss Nielsen will join the Grand Opera of Boston, of which she has been a most valued member for the past three seasons.

Up from the depths of the sea where

Limitless leagues of light that filter

Up from the shell-strewn pink of his High on the crest of the wave up-

Lilliputian Pictures.

A picture gallery in a cigarette case! Doesn't sound possible, does it? Nevertheless, Zel E. Talbert of Los Angeles carries one about with him all the time, and if you ask him to throw it open for your inspection, as I did, he'll pull it out of his vest pocket and do it with pleasure.

There are more pictures hung in that nifty little gallery than you might suppose—a round dozen of them, all cleverly painted with microscopic touches that will make your eyes pop out of your head if you try to separate them. Eleven of the paintings are portraits in water colors—Mr. Talbert is by profession a miniature painter—and one is a landscape in oils.

The landscape is one inch by three quarters of an inch in size. It's a California scene, with a clump of eucalyptus trees in the middle distance, of course, and equally of course with a purple shadow lying over the foreground path, for the sky shows the pale yellow of late afternoon. This picture is painted on real canvas mounted on a tiny stretcher, and is as complete as if its size measured in feet instead of inches. There's more feeling in the painting than you might think—compressed and suppressed.

Among the very smallest of the portraits is one of Mr. Talbert's little daughter painted on a kernel of corn and inclosed in a round shadow box. This is the property of Alfred Montgomery, who is known all over the country as "the corn painter." Mr. Talbert wanted to show Mr. Montgomery that he himself could "paint corn." The likeness is perfect, the color good, the values are carefully kept. A life size portrait could say no more than this little speck on a grain of corn.

But the tiniest picture in the whole cigarette-case gallery is one exactly half as large as that on the kernel. It might have been done on the head of a pin, though in reality it was painted on a speck of ivory. It's inclosed in thick glass and set in gold, with a tiny gold loop at each end, and may be used as a watch charm. Mr. Talbert's patient baby girl posed for this picture, too. The artist confesses the work was rather trying on the eyes, and that he generally laid it aside after two hours. Two hours! You and I would have said two minutes—or two seconds.

The other pictures in this unique collection are somewhat bigger, one being the size of a collar button, another a dime, while the rest have the usual measurements of miniatures. For the artist does not pretend to take these Lilliputian affairs seriously. They are merely artistic stunts, done for his own amusement, and that of his friends. He is a miniature painter by profession, not a sleight of hand performer, and has been such for many years.

He has lived and painted for many years in New York and other eastern cities, six or seven years in Los Angeles. His present studio—which is not a band box, but a room of comfortable dimensions—is in the Hotel Seville on Flower street.

Mr. Talbert believes that a miniature should have as much character as a life-size portrait. He is out of sympathy with those painters of miniatures—and their name is legion—who hold that a miniature must be a highly idealized representation of the sitter—so idealized as to be almost unrecognizable by friend or foe.

The Kuehnrich collection of paintings and prints is still to be seen in the Kanst gallery, No. 642 South Spring street. Two marines and two California landscapes by Carlton T. Saunders-Barnwell.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Barnwell, No. 992 West Thirtieth street, was beautifully decorated Wednesday evening with palms, ferns, pink hydrangeas and Killarney roses, the occasion being the wedding of their niece, Miss Agnes Galt Barnwell, to Arthur W. Saunders of St. Paul. The bridal gown was a dainty affair of white charmeuse satin trimmed in Bohemian lace. With this a long tulle veil was worn and held in place with sprays of orange blossoms, and a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley and orchids were carried.

Miss Florence Barnwell, a sister of the bride, her only attendant, assisted as maid of honor and she was attired in a pink charmeuse satin with trimmings of shadow lace caught up with pink roses, and carried an arm bouquet of Killarney roses. J. Thompson McMillan of St. Paul assisted as best man, and the officiating minister was Rev. H. H. Fisher, pastor of the Third Presbyterian Church.

Before the ceremony Miss Jennie Winston sang "O Perfect Love," and "Call Me Thine Own." As the bridal party entered little Marjorie Simmonds, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Simmonds, gowned in a dainty lingerie frock over pink, scattered pink rose petals from a gold basket in their pathway, and an orchestra played the popular marches. The service was read in front of a bank of palms and ferns, on either side of which was a huge bouquet of pink hydrangeas, from which extended white satin streamers to the stairway, forming an aisle. In the library and hall large vases filled with Shasta daisies were utilized.

The bride's table was beautiful with Killarney roses. A huge vase occupied the center of the table, surrounded by smaller crystal vases and being held in leash to the center one by means of crystal chains. Other features of its decoration were the pink-shaded candelabra and cut-glass dishes filled with bon-bons.

Mr. Saunders, who is connected with the Northwestern Fuel Company in St. Paul, will make a home in that city for his bride. They will go East over the Canadian Pacific, stopping off at Santa Barbara, San Francisco, Portland, Seattle and Banff en route.

Removed to This City.

Mr. and Mrs. R. D. List and family have removed to No. 1632 West Forty-ninth street from South Pasadena, their former home, where they will receive their many friends.

Bridge Party.

One of the delightful affairs of the current week was the bridge party given by Miss Mildred Whitnah, complimenting her house guest, Miss Georgia Clark of Fresno. A color scheme of green and white was carried out in the rooms given over to the affair by the use of Shasta daisies combined with potted ferns. Following the games dainty refreshments were served and handsome prizes awarded to the honored guest, Mrs. Guy Boynton and Miss Wachter. OUT-OF-TOWN-SOCIETY.

Pasadena.

FOR the midsummer season, Pasadena was unusually gay socially last week and two announcement luncheons in formal acknowledgement of the engagement of two attractive society girls added to the eclat of social entertaining. The first was the luncheon given Tuesday by Miss Bessie Mattison, daughter of Dr. F. C. E. Mattison of West California street, announcing her engagement with Ernest Behr, son of Dr. and Mrs. Arno Behr of Arlington drive. Miss Elizabeth Childs was the guest of honor and it is rumored that her engagement with Alec Nottmeyer will be formally announced in the near future, both weddings to occur within the year. Yellow carried out in coreopsis and golden glow formed a pretty color scheme in the decorations and the announcement was made by a tiny ivory-carved bear hidden under each serviette with enlightening explanation. Covers were laid for Mmes. George Arthur Vedder, Benjamin Douglas, Samuel B. Martin, Royden Vosburg, Misses Louise Hawkins, Margaret Percy, Irene Vedder, Katharine Wadsworth, Edith Edminson, and Margaret Merrill.

The second engagement-luncheon was given Thursday by Mrs. Oliver Perry Gould of East Washington street announcing the engagement of her daughter, Miss Mary Augusta Gould and Charles H. Terstegen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Terstegen of East Washington street but recently of Elizabeth, N. J. Covers were laid for thirty-six and after the luncheon an interesting programme was given by Miss Lucy Chamberlain giving appropriate readings, Misses Louise Nottmeyer and Gertrude Cook contributing vocal solos with Miss Agnes McManis at the piano. Luncheon was served at small tables which were decorated with Cecil Brunner roses and plumbago and this dainty color scheme of pink and blue was carried out in the adornment of the dining-room and living-room with pink and blue hydrangeas. The announcement was made in dainty envelopes which were used as place cards. Out of doors after luncheon, games entertained the guests and prizes were awarded. Covers were laid for Mmes. O. P. Gould, Fred Ferstegen, Frederick Badenhausen, Alfred Scott, Jay Cooke, Earl West, Ed Merchant, Alec Lacey, Rowland Laws, William Landon, J. Flint, Russell Wilbur Force, Allan Sickler, J. Harrington, Julian Adams, John McDonald, Misses Louise Nottmeyer, Elizameth Grinnel, Clara Vaughn, Edith Moore, Florence Hill, Maizie Lynch, Theresa Swigart, Mable Gould, Stella Packard, Esther Packard, Florence Doolittle, Amy Doolittle, Cora Hill, Callie Patton, Irene Lisk, Gertrude Cook, Agnes McManis, Bessie Seargeant, Louise Lacey and Mary Augusta Gould.

Dr. and Mrs. Charles Wesley Leffingwell celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding Tuesday evening at their home on San Rafael Heights with a reception which was enjoyed by seventy-five of their friends. Receiving with Dr. and Mrs. Leffingwell were Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Leffingwell, Jr., and assisting about the rooms were Mmes. E. M. Dickey, Misses Marion Gwinn, Marion Armstrong Mary Ranney, Jane Rowland and others. Golden glow and quantities of other golden blossoms were used in decoration and in the dining-room, where supper was served, pink roses adorned the table and sideboard. Music was furnished throughout the reception hours by an orchestra. Among the guests were Right Rev. and Mrs. Joseph H. Johnson, Dr. and Mrs. F. F. Rowland, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Folsom, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Blankenhorn, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Cheesewright, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Schuyler Volkmar, Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Who Said Corns? I Use "GETS-IT!"

It Works On a Sure, New Plan.

"Glory! Come and See How GETS-IT Works!"

"GETS-IT," the new corn cure on a new principle, works like the touch of a fairy's wand. No more knives, razors, files or other instruments of torture for corn-sufferers. No more salves, plasters and bandages that hurt the rest of the toe more than they relieve the corn.

"GETS-IT" never irritates or turns the true flesh raw. It is safe as water. But my, how it does get after corns, bunions, callouses and warts. It works painlessly, but it shrivels 'em right up till they drop off, leaving the firm, healthy flesh underneath.

"GETS-IT" is guaranteed to give satisfaction, or your money is refunded.

All druggists sell "GETS-IT" at 25 cents a bottle, or it will be sent on receipt of price by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago.

Famous in a Day for the Beauty of Her Hands and Arms

A Free Prescription That Does Its Work Over Night—You Can Prepare It at Your Own Home.

"It's my own discovery, and it takes just one night to get such marvelous results," answers Miss Grace Benson, when her friends asked her about the marvelous change in the appearance of her hands and arms. "You can do the same thing if you will take my advice," she says. "I feel it my duty to tell every woman what this wonderful prescription did for me. Just think of it! It did all this in a night.

"It affords me a world of pleasure to tell anyone else just how such remarkable results were brought about. I give you, absolutely free, the identical prescription which has removed every defect from my hands and arms. You can form no idea of the marvelous change it will make in just one application. The prescription, which can be prepared at your own home, is as follows:

"Go to any drug store and buy an ounce bottle of Kulux Compound. Pour the entire bottle of Kulux into a two-ounce bottle, add quarter ounce of witch hazel and fill with water. Mix this at home, then you know that it is the genuine article. Apply night and morning. The first application will astonish you. It makes the skin transparent, removes all discolorations such as tan, sun spots, freckles and coarse pores, roughness and wrinkles, and, in fact, every blemish the hands and arms are heir to. It also produces a marvelous effect on the neck and shoulders.

If the neck is discolored from being exposed to the sun or from wearing high collars, this prescription will immediately relieve that condition. No matter how rough and ungainly the hands and arms, or what abuses they have had through hard work and exposure to sun and wind, this prescription will work a wonderful transformation in twelve hours at the most. Thousands of women are using this prescription with just the same results that I have had."

The Trend of Autumn Fashions

—accords first place to the satin-faced fabrics. Notwithstanding that satins have held undisputed sway for four years they were never in such strong demand as now. Rich satin charmeuse is pre-eminently a leader among these favored weaves. Corded Bengalines, corduroys, velvets and silk velveteens are also given preference. In dress goods the soft, dark colorings prevail in rough mixtures, invisible diagonals, zibelines, etc. Tailored suits of the smart and practical navy serge are as strongly entrenched as ever in the liking of modish women. Coats are in 30 and 32-inch lengths with cutaway or straight fronts; skirts are somewhat fuller and longer but retain their trim and graceful lines. Buttons are cleverly used as trimmings.

Exquisite tailored hats of felt in all the new and delicate shades are decidedly fetching and highly approved by the fashionably elect. In accessories a number of clever and novel conceits are shown, among them new mounted back combs—narrow bands of gold and engraved and carved effects in both amber and shell. Gold-filled bracelets in pretty, new engraved designs have made their appearance in Autumn jewelry novelties. Changeable silk stockings in shades to match the changeable silks now so much in vogue are the latest word in smart hosiery and dainty vests of white Italian silk have embroidery in pink, sky or lavender.

To Overcome Sunburn, Tan, Freckles, Wrinkles

If you are freckled, tanned or sunburnt, dab a liberal amount of mercolized wax on the face and allow it to remain over night. When you wash off the wax in the morning, fine, flakey, almost invisible particles of cuticle come with it. Repeating this daily, the entire outer skin is absorbed, but so gradually, there's not the slightest hurt or inconvenience. Even the stubbornest freckles yield to this treatment. The underlying skin which forms the new complexion is so fresh and youthful-looking you'll marvel at the transformation. It's the only thing I know to actually discard an aged, faded, muddy or blotchy complexion. It is also good for arms, hands and neck. One ounce of mercolized wax, procurable at any drug store, is sufficient in most cases.

If sun and wind make you squint and frown, you're bound to cultivate wrinkles and crow's feet. To overcome these, bathe the face in a solution made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel

HANDS BURNING ITCHING, DISFIGURED

Cracked and Swollen. Could Not Sleep. For 2 Years Nobody Could Cure His Eczema. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Completely Cured.

905 Lowell Place, Chicago, Ill.—"The trouble began by my hands burning and itching and I rubbed and scratched them till one day I saw little red sores coming out. My hands were disfigured and swollen, and troubled me so that I could not sleep. They were cracked and when the small sores broke a white matter would come out. I could not do any hard work; if I did the sores would come out worse.

"For two years nobody could cure my eczema, until one day I thought I would try the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I used warm water with the Cuticura Soap and after that I put the Cuticura Ointment on my hands twice a day for about five or six months when I was completely cured." (Signed) Sam Marcus, Nov. 28, 1911.

Not only are Cuticura Soap and Ointment most valuable in the treatment of eczemas and other distressing eruptions of skin and scalp, but no other emollients do so much for pimples, blackheads, red, rough skins, itching, scaly scalps, dandruff, dry, thin and falling hair, chapped hands and shapeless nails, nor do it so economically. A single cake of Cuticura Soap (25c.) and box of Cuticura Ointment (50c.) are often sufficient when all else has failed. Sold throughout the world. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

Perhaps the Most Remarkable

Purchase Women's Neckwear In Years—Representing 65c to $4.50 Values ... 50c

—Perhaps you've attended neckwear sales before, perhaps you've bought neckwear at 50c, but we venture to say that there isn't a woman in Los Angeles, who knows values, who can afford to keep away from this sale of Neckwear that we present Monday.
—We've given the comparative values at 65c to $4.50. This doesn't mean that just one or two pieces of high-priced neckwear have been thrown in with a lot of mediocre neckwear to make a sale. It means that there is a big assortment of the higher valuations.
—This much we know—that the first hundred women who come to the neckwear counter Monday will be given an opportunity to buy the finest quality neckwear at this ridiculous price.
—Here are Chemisettes, Coat Sets, Dress Sets, Shawl Collars, Quaker Collars, Yokes, Sailor Backs, Round Collars, Etc.
—Some of the fine Plauen lace effects, some of Ratine, lawn and lace, some in the heavy macrame.

Another Shipment of That Beautiful Chiffon Cloth 79c

—So much in demand for overdrapes, auto veils, etc. It's 40 inches wide, in just the shades you want. No wonder this veiling and chiffon section maintains leadership.

Sale Women's Tailored Suits Values From $12.50 to $29.50 $7.50

Several Styles Pictured

—If there's a woman in Los Angeles who needs a splendid summer suit, here's an opportunity that is rich in value giving. Navy blue serges, cream serges, black serges, whipcords, beautiful tan and gray mixtures; pongee silk suits, taffeta silk suits, plain tailored garments and fancy suits. 250 garments that are marked and have been selling throughout the season at $12.50 to $29.50, for a final July Clearance, at $7.50. We wish it were possible to put the suits before you that you might judge of their value, for mere quoting of valuation is so insignificant in comparison to the values themselves. Surely you wouldn't expect to buy the material for such a price, to say nothing of the making.

—Remember, there are only 250. They should fairly fly away at this price. Come early for choice. See the big lot of them in the window.

—We bought them for less, consequently are able to mark them for a big special sale feature at $1 yard.
—Now then, we want to create great enthusiasm in the silk section Monday and throw every yard of these on the Bargain counter at 49c yard.
—The department buyer says that this item should cause a stampede in the silk department, for just imagine 42-inch beautiful foulards with a border have been Fashion's favorite silk this season, now you buy them at 49c yard, while they last.
—Besides this there are a lot of plain and fancy silks suitable for nearly every purpose that are in themselves really startling values at the sale price 49c.
—The buyer says, "Don't mistake this for a typographical error—49c is the sale price."

"NO-BODY LOVES A BALD MAN"

Every day we see YOUNG men and women, who have grown prematurely grey. They immediately fall into the "Old Age" class, because grey hairs are so closely associated WITH OLD AGE.

It is extremely discomforting and humiliating to be bald—to be grey when the years do not justify it. The girls laugh at the young men so marred—the young man soon learns to discriminate between natural hair in its full bloom of health and NATURAL COLOR, and shabby looking grey and faded hair.

Give nature a chance. If she is encouraged, stimulated, assisted, she will give you a head of hair that you will be proud of.

Give it to her. Use—

Lillian Russell's Warning.
Sore Feet Bad Health

Lillian Russell is a physical wonder. Now in mature years, but having preserved the fresh beauty of youth. In the Chicago Tribune she says: Care of the feet, hardest worked members of the body, is absolutely essential to health. Irritation from sore feet often causes serious nervous disorders, and nothing brings face wrinkles quicker." Here is the best treatment known to science for all foot ailments. It works through the pores and removes the cause: "Dissolve two tablespoonfuls of Calocide compound in a basin of warm water. Soak the feet in this for full fifteen minutes, gently rubbing the sore parts." The effect is magical. All soreness disappears instantly. Corns and callouses can be peeled right off. It gives instant relief for bunions, aching and sweaty smelly feet. Any druggist has Calocide in stock, or will quickly get it from his wholesale house. A 25c box usually cures the worst feet. Calocide is not a patent medicine. Don't waste money on uncertain remedies. Insist on getting what you want from the druggist.

Children Need Extra Care in Hot Weather

Summer Heat Dangerous to Little Ones if Bowels Are Neglected.

The mother cannot do better for her children than to train them, from infancy, to regularity of the bowels. Chronic constipation in later life can be avoided if the child learns early the need for a daily evacuation of the poisonous stomach waste.

There will, of course, be times when the little one will become constipated and bilious. In hot weather, especially, immediate attention is necessary, as much serious illness results from inactive bowels. Salts, cathartics, purgatives and similar drastic irritants are harsh and violent and only bring temporary relief while disturbing the whole system. A gentle, pleasant bowel stimulant like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is far preferable. Syrup Pepsin contains no narcotic drug, being composed of simple laxative herbs combined with pepsin, and acts gently in a natural manner, on stomach, bowels and liver. By thoroughly cleansing the bowels and removing the foreign matter that irritates and inflames the tissue, it will quickly check the summer diarrhoea that is so weakening in its effect.

Druggists sell Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin for fifty cents and one dollar bottle, the larger size being intended for family use. A free trial bottle, postpaid, can be obtained by writing to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 406 Washington st., Monticello, Ill.

THE MOCKER.

BY HUBERT WHITEHEAD.

It was the early morning when
I woke, and thought to take my pen,
And write a tale of wondrous deeds,
Of armed knights, caparisoned steeds;
Of richly mantled ladies fair,
With veils of gold, and golden hair.

Just then a mocker, liquid toned,
His joyous matin, soft intoned;
He drew my thoughts a-wandering,
His golden notes a-squandering;
He flung them 'cross the morning light,
As he had flung them all the night,
In melodies that framed the beams
Of silver moon, in springtime dreams.

I left my pen and paper there,
And forth I went into the air.
The early light from out the east,
Was pale and wan, night hardly ceased
Her shadows in the west. Above
I heard the mocker's song of love,
As cristal clear as growing light,
When dawn springs forth from out the night.

A meadow lark was fluting low,
The mocker mocked his liquid flow;
And, as he flew from tree to tree,
He spilled his song so carelessly,
He never seemed to know, each note
Was liquid gold within his throat.

I followed him as off he flew,
Like one who would his youth renew.
From tree to tree he quickly sped,
I gladly wandered where he led,
'Til, 'neath a pine tree's shadow long,
I halted while he sang his song.

The sun was up, a merry throng
Of blackbirds 'mid the rushes long,
Were scolding, chatt'ring, arguing.
Some flew on crimson shouldered wing
A little way, then back again;
Their hurried chatter fell like rain,
And each one there seemed very sure,
That only he should have the floor.

Within the pine tree's tracery,
A linnet sang so tenderly,
I knew his love-mate there did rest
Upon her eggs, within the nest;
Then, as his song changed to a cry,
I saw gray butcher passing by;
His rounder head and cruel beak,
Flashed by me like a steely streak.

A sudden flash of red-brown wing,
And then a soft, quick, tap-tapping,
Above the calling of the birds,
Above the lowing of the herds,
Above the busy insect's hum,
I heard that clear, incisive drum:
A "flicker" there is hunting food,
To feed his hungry, waiting brood.

So quiet I sat—most indiscreet,—
A squirrel ran across my feet;
Then, with a jump, and startled cry;
Sat up, looked round with beady eye;
And seeing me, he jerked his tail,
While with quick notes he seemed to rail
At me, for lying there so still;
Then, out his pouches ate his fill.

But suddenly, with frightened dash,
He found his burrow in a flash:
With eyes a-glitter, ears alert,
He sat there bold and malapert;
Bobbed up and down, with scolding cry
He hurled defiance at the sky,
Where, silently, on poised wing,
A hungry hawk was hovering.

Then out the waving tules near,
The blackbirds, knowing naught of fear,
Up through the air with chatt'ring scream,
An epauleted army stream,
The dark intruder to attack.
They scratched his wings, they pecked his back;
And when they'd hustled him away,
Came straggling back from out the fray.

Excitedly they told the tale,
With bubbling notes, a perfect gale.
Each one the valiant army led,
Each ruffled up his shoulders red,
Each strutted round his wond'ring mate
With prideful air, and swagg'ring gait:
As though to say, "Behold! 'Twas I!
I made the bold devourer fly."

But thrilling through their shrill refrain,
I heard the mocker's song again;
He mocked the wild canaries' note,—
A wond'rous power was in his throat—
He took the lovely, silver strain,
And poured it forth as gold again;
Transmuting, like the sages old,
The duller metal into gold.

And then a bluejay, darting by,
Filled all the air with jarring cry;
The mocker mocked him; but sat dumb,
When on the ear a hurried hum
Fell, herald of a jeweled mite,
Which paused upon it's darting flight;
Then, like a tiny, fairy thing,
It vanished on it's misty wing.

But hark! The mocker's flood of notes,
From out a distant palm tree floats:
I saw him, with uneven flight,
Pass o'er the trees, and out of sight;
And then I heard his distant call
Across the sunshine softly fall;
It mingled, like a golden beam,
Among the fancies of my dream.

STORIES WELL TOLD.

To Make a Strong Report.

[Washington Star:] Jim Mann of Illinois, Uncle Joe Cannon and Representative Stanley, who is about to jab the steel octopus in the tentacles with a report which will be on the wires in a few days now, were all at dinner in the Press Club the other night. Uncle Joe asked Mr. Stanley whether or not the report on the steel investigations would be a rip-snorter, and the Kentuckian smiled one of those imperturable smiles of his.

Then Uncle Joe started on a story: "Joe Blackburn told me once that he was walking down the street in a nice old town down in that sleepy South country, when he met a regular Kaintucky cunnel. The cunnel had on a seven and five-eighths black hat, with a brim about a yard wide, and he was chewing tobacco.

"'How do, Mistah Blackburn.'

"'How do, cunnel, wheah have yo' been?'

"'Wheah have I been? Wheah have I been? Why I just been down heah to Mistah Brickley's hotel, sah, and I have just had the most powahful argument you evah heard, sah, with Cunnel Strothers.'

"'What was the argument about, cunnel?'

"'We argued about the state of southern Democracy, sah. We flipped a coin to see who would go first and he won. He led off and argued for two solid hours, and then, sah, I got back at him for two hours.'

"'You got the best of him, didn't you, cunnel?'

"'Got the best of him? Mistah Blackburn, I started out by calling him a low-down, black-hearted traitorous and ungentlemanly yellow dog, and got stronger and stronger till the two hours were up.'

"And that," said Uncle Joe, "is the way you'd better start that street trust report—if you want to get anybody to read it."

Meeting the Emergency.

[Minneapolis Journal:] Senator Dixon was condemning a piece of political deception.

"The thing was as flagrant," he said, "as the railway case."

"Two men, one of them very short, were passing through a station toward the train gates when the bigger one was heard to say:

"'I've took a half ticket fur ye, George. Yer so little, ye'll pass, all right.'

"'But, protested George, 'how about my beard?' And he twiddled his chin beard nervously.

"'Oh,' rejoined the other, 'tell 'em it's a mole.'"

From Bad to Worse.

[Washington Star:] Senator Bristow, apropos of Independence Day, was analyzing in Salina the troops under Cornwallis during the revolution.

"And in the end," he said, "they became so panic-stricken that they were like Blanc's wife.

"Blanc's wife, you know, whenever a shutter rattled or a board creaked, would wake up her husband and say:

"'Oh, John, there are burglars downstairs. Don't you hear them? Oh, what shall we do?'

"But Blanc hit at last on an idea that, he thought, would compose his wife permanently.

"'Look here,' he said, 'you can rest assured those noises aren't burglars. Burglars work in absolute silence. You never hear a sound from them.'"

"And now," he said, "Mrs. Blanc wakes her husband up in a blue panic whenever there's no noise."

Would Do His Duty.

[Baltimore American:] Gen. Ramsay Potts, praising patriotism at a Fourth of July dinner in Chicago a few years ago, said:

"I like to hold up as a patriotic example young Si Hoskins.

"Si once decided to enlist. He burnt with a desire to serve his country. So he applied at a recruiting office, and was duly punched and prodded, trotted up and down, jumped over chairs an tables, and so forth.

"Then came question time. All sorts of questions were fired at Si, and his answers were most satisfactory. Then came the stern inquiry:

"'Have you ever served a jail sentence?'

"'N-no, sir, Si stammered; 'but, he added hastily, 'I'd be very glad to do a medium-sized one if it's necessary.'"

Seeds Didn't Come Up.

[Boston Post:] Congressman Cyrus A. Sulloway of New Hampshire, known as The Tall Pine of the Merrimac, never neglects sending out spring free seeds to his devoted constitutents. I hear that in this connection Cy recently received the shock of his career, when a letter came from a Hampton farmer inclosing a bill, as follows:

"To two days' labor preparing ground at $1.50, $3; to disappointed hopes on beets, turnips and peas, $15.

"P. S.—Dear Cy: Get this bill through Congress, as I know you can. The seeds you sent didn't come up."

OVER THE SEA.

Ten years ago the Rev. Thomas Smith, vicar of Greenhill, Harrow, Eng., resolved not to wear a hat until the debt on his church was paid off. He is now wearing his hat again.

George Paish, who was recently knighted by King George of England, is editor of the London Statist, and is well known among economists all over the world for his estimates of national wealth, the foreign investments of the great European nations and of kindred topics. He is a recognized English authority on American railroads, and has written a number of important works dealing with railroads in England and in this country. He is a Fellow and Member of the Council of the Royal Statistical Society.

Raphael Gianella of Rome, 92 years old, who has known personally Popes Gregory, Pius IX, Leo XIII and Pius X, has arrived in the United States, accompanied by his wife and 19-year-old daughter. For the last twenty-five years he has been something of a globe trotter, and will visit several sections of this country.

Rev. S. Baring-Gould, author of the hymn "Onward Christian Soldiers," recently celebrated his seventy-eighth birthday at his home in North Devon, England. For fifty years he has been a prolific writer, handling with amazing ease theological studies, historical researches, romances, novels and sermons. In all that time his clerical work has not suffered.

One of the men to be honored on the birthday of King George of England was Sir Francis Allston Channing, who was created a baron. The new baron was born in the United States and married Miss Elizabeth Bryant of Boston. He prides himself on the fact that his mother's ancestors were united empire loyalists, and on his father's side he is a descendant of one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. His father, Rev. W. H. Channing, served as chaplain in the House of Representatives under Lincoln. He became a naturalized English subject while attending Oxford University.

Lieut. Schroeder-Strang, who is to command the vessel on which a German expedition to the Arctic will explore the Northwest passage, has been trying out the sledges and kyaks on the Hovel at Potsdam. One of the principal objects of the expedition is to sail around Cape Tschletguskin, in order to ascertain whether Tainyr is a peninsula, or whether there is a navigable strait separating it from the Siberian mainland.

EDUCATORS, SCIENTISTS.

Prof. C. L. Norton of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology has perfected a substitute for wood that is practically incombustible and harder than natural wood, and is expected to find considerable use in the manufacture of automobile bodies.

Henry G. Bryant, president of the Philadelphia Geographical Society, has gone to Labrador to explore and map the St. Augustine River, and will traverse a country never traversed by white men. Russel W. Porter, an experienced Arctic explorer, accompanied Mr. Bryant as photographer. Mr. Bryant is familiar with Labrador work, having been the first white man to measure and photograph the Grand Falls and Hamilton River many years ago.

Rev. Dr. Stephen M. Newman, the prexy-elect of Howard University, is a Washington (D. C.) Congregational minister, who has public men like Senator Crane in his pews, and who has declined two elections to college presidencies within five years. He was graduated at Bowdoin in 1867—the year Howard University (named for another Bowdoin man) was founded.

Dr. Edward A. Spitzka, who recently created discussion in the East by his stand that operations on defective children, to the end that they might have a normal chance to compete with the rest of mankind, should be made compulsory by legislative enactment, is one of America's prominent brain specialists. He is a native of New York, and since 1906 has been professor of general anatomy of Jefferson University. He performed the autopsy on and examined the brain of Czolgosz, the assassin of President McKinley. His articles on anatomy have been widely published.

W. T. Vernon, a negro lawyer and educator of Kansas City, has received notice of his appointment as president of Campbell College of Jackson. Miss Vernon was registrar of the United States treasury under the Roosevelt administration.

MEN AND WOMEN.

A romance of four years which began when, while watching a parade, he fell from a billboard into the arms of Miss Viola Mendenhall, led to the marriage of Arthur Sherrer, a wholesale drug goods company salesman in St. Louis, Mo.

Mrs. Florence R. Jacklitsch of Denver, Colo., has been granted a divorce from Stephen Jacklitsch, her husband, because he tore down and trampled under his feet a little American flag which she had hung at half-mast in front of their home on Memorial Day.

George James found on his farm, two miles from McLeansboro, Ill., a letter which, it is believed, was blown from Bush, Ill., forty miles distant, by a tornado which almost destroyed the town last April. The letter is postmarked Pittsburgh, Pa., and bears the return card of a savings bank. The contents consisted of a letter and four drafts for an aggregate amount of $131.10, Italian stamps worth $2.35, and United States stamps worth 12 cents.

William T. Madden of Louisville, Ky., recently nabbed a hard hit fly ball while traveling at the rate of fifty miles an hour in the cab of a Louisville and Nashville engine. Though he threw the ball back as soon as possible the fielder was obliged to race a block to recover the sphere.

Arthur Smith of Denver, has a government draft for 1 cent, which was issued to him May 25, 1903, in payment of his salary as postmaster at Vanes, Colo. Until he saw in a newspaper recently a statement that the late President Cleveland had also received a similar voucher he believed it was the only one in existence.

THE LIBRARIAN'S LOVE AFFAIR.

How a Man's Work Helped His Wooing.

By DORA FOWLER MARTIN, in Pearson's Weekly.

FIVE o'clock had struck and the head librarian was alone. The two girls who assisted him had gone away for tea, for it was the quietest hour of the day in the library and the place was quite deserted. Then the swinging door was pushed open and a girl came in. She was a pretty, blue-eyed, sunny-haired girl, and she carried a music case in her hand.

"Wednesday afternoon, and she is here again," reflected the librarian as she consulted the catalogue. "She must always call to change her book on her way home from her music lesson."

"B1200," said the girl at the counter, and he asked her to repeat the number he had heard plainly enough, for the simple pleasure of hearing her clear voice again.

He would have liked to have talked to her, but there was no necessity, and her quiet dignity forbade it. Then the door swung to, and she was gone. "M. Hatherway, 10 Carlton Road," the librarian read from her ticket as he placed it in the rack, and he sighed.

"I don't suppose that I shall ever know anything about her, except what books she reads," he thought, and turned to his work.

Half an hour later a schoolboy came to the counter and asked for him.

"I've brought this book," said the child. "I saw a lady drop it as she was running for a tram, and I couldn't catch her up in time to give it to her, so I brought it here."

The librarian glanced at it, then his pale face flushed, and he handed the boy a tip which was evidently satisfactory. He took the book with him to his little office and sat gazing at it.

"I daresay we shall have Miss Hatherway back directly to inquire if she left her book," he thought, "or perhaps—"

He sat thinking for a few minutes, then laughed quietly to himself, and taking up a pen and the library catalouge he set steadily to work. With many interruptions he managed to finish the task he had set himself, then wrote out a final copy, then slipped the little paper in the book which Miss Hatherway had lost, not forgetting the precautinary measure of fixing one corner with a spot of gum, so that it should not drop out.

"However much she skips, she is bound to open the book here," he thought complacently, "for it is placed at the very climax of the plot."

Then he put the book in his pocket and finished the day's work as usual. An hour later he was standing in Carlton Road. He pulled his hat over his eyes, turned up his coat collar, and mounted the steps of No. 10.

"It will do no practical good," he thought, "for she won't know I wrote it. But even if it only rouses her interest in the library, it's worth doing."

He thrust a book into the hands of the maid who came to the door, with the words, "For Miss Hatherway," then turned and fled.

"I can't imagine who sent it," said Muriel Hatherway as she took up her book next afternoon. It was a pouring wet day, and Muriel and her little sister Nell had decided to enjoy an hour of luxury together over the fire.

"Someone must have seen you drop it," said Nell practically. "Don't interrupt me, Muriel! I'm so interested," and she turned over another page of her own book. But the next minute she dropped it to ask her sister eagerly:

"What's the matter? What have you found?"

"How very strange!" Muriel repeated. "It's a note in this book. It's quite absolute nonsense—yet it seems to be written to me."

Nell snatched it from her, and read it aloud very slowly.

"Someone B492 watching B2911 saw this book fall, and herewith returns it. If you would pay B1455 find out B1101."

"What can it mean?" cried Muriel.

"It's evidently about you and your book," said Nell.

"The note was just stuck in here," continued her sister.

"It must mean something!"

"Sheer nonsense! Yet it's queer, for I did drop the book and someone did return it."

Nell thoughtfully read it over once more, then she suddenly shouted, "I've got it!"

"Got what?"

"Solved the mystery—it is a library book, and these are library numbers. Oh, I feel so Sherlock Holmesy! Get me the catalogue, Muriel!"

"You may be right, but even if you are I am not going to waste my time finding what library numbers stand for. Besides, I must go and practice."

And she left the room, but she left her little sister the note.

Twenty minutes later Nell came running excitedly to her.

"What do you think of this, Muriel?" she cried, waving a paper above her head, then she stood still and read dramatically:

"Someone 'In Male Attire' watching 'The Career of a Beauty' saw this book fall, and herewith returns it. If you would pay your 'Debts of Honor,' find out 'The Secret Way.'"

"There!" finished the girl excitedly; "ain't that clear? Some man who knows you saw you drop it—you are the beauty—I never thought of it before, but you are really not bad looking, Muriel—and then he returned it."

"I wonder who he is?" said Muriel, who had been examining Nell's copy.

"And 'Find Out the Secret Way'—what can that mean?"

"It's the name of a book," said Nell.

"Suppose I get it out?" suggested Muriel.

Nell agreed heartily.

They discussed it till Muriel declared herself tired of the subject, and then they did not mention it till the following Wednesday afternoon.

"Shall you get out 'The Secret Way?'" asked Nell, rather nervously, as she watched her sister pack up her music.

"Of course not!" said Muriel, crossly.

"It's rather rude not to," suggested Nell, "when he came all this way to return your book."

"Do you really think so?" asked her sister, dubiously. "Of course, I don't want to be rude," she added more decidedly.

And at 5 o'clock she was asking the librarian for B1101.

The librarian ventured to remark on the weather as he handed Muriel her book. She agreed politely and mechanically, and he noticed that she flushed as she glanced at the title of her book and turned away.

"Two hundred pounds a year!" sighed the librarian. "It's not so bad for a young fellow. She has found out my little conundrum easily enough. There is only one hope, all women—even the nicest—are curious. I wish I could get a proper introduction."

Nell met her sister at the door.

"What book did you get?" she asked eagerly.

"B1101," Muriel replied curtly, and her young sister seized it from her hands.

"It looks very ordinary," she said disappointedly, dipping into it, then she gasped.

"Muriel," she cried, "here's another note just like the last. May I read it?"

"Yes, of course—it's not mine. But come up to our room first."

They shut the door against intruders, then Nell read aloud: "I have changed B210. Don't be angry. B2744 pity him, and strive for B39."

"It will take a bit of time for me to decipher," said Nell, taking down the catalogue. "So please go away for a few minutes. I don't want disturbing."

"I'm going in a minute, Nell. You know, I didn't like asking for this book, but the librarian is such a nice man."

"Oh, don't bother about librarians when there is a real live romance at hand."

"I don't bother about librarians," retorted Muriel indignantly. "Only he has a kind smile and nice gray eyes. I feel a bit sorry for him, he looks sad."

"I've written it out," said Nell, when she rejoined her sister. "It's rather nice this time, and I think he means you to get out B1373 next." Muriel read the paper aloud.

"I have changed 'From Jest to Earnest.' Don't be angry. 'When a Man's Single,' pity him and strive for 'A Woman's Patience.'"

"Poor fellow, he is much to be pitied," said Nell wisely. She was the age when girls can scent a romance anywhere.

"Nonsense," said Muriel sharply. "It's only a joke. I should never have got out the book only—only whoever it is will never be able to find out whether I did so or not. I shall not get out 'A Woman's Patience,' and if I did there would be nothing in it."

"Muriel Hatherway, if you don't get it out next week, well, I'll borrow father's ticket and get it myself—and I'll tell him why."

So Muriel was overruled by Nell, and not very unwillingly either.

The next week the librarian was quite friendly. Muriel found herself thinking more often of him, as she traveled home in the car, than she did of the note which she found awaiting her in her book.

When Nell had deciphered the message this week she was highly delighted with it, but Muriel was worried and uncomfortable.

"This is 'A Serious Wooing,'" it read. "'Friendship' is not enough for me. You are my 'Well Beloved,' yet I dare sign 'No Name.'"

"Nell, we must stop," she said. "We have had enough of this nonsense—what would father say? I shall most certainly not get 'No Name' next Wednesday, and I will not hear another word about it."

Poor Nell was crushed, for she saw that her sister was in earnest.

It was a wet dreary afternoon when Muriel called as usual at the library. The place was deserted save for herself and the librarian. They said "Good afternoon" in a friendly way, for lately in some unaccountable manner Muriel had realized that the librarian was a man, and a nice one too, and not a mere machine. Then she went to the indicator to see if the book she had selected were in. It was, as she knew it would be, for she had decided on a course of history, and had bravely selected "The Dutch Republic" for a start.

"E 190, please," she said, handing in her novel.

The librarian stayed for a moment deploring the weather, making a playful comment on the book she returned—most obviously trying to make a minute's business lengthen out as long as he could.

Muriel Hatherway felt rather flattered. He was a handsome man, and certainly a gentleman. Then he brought back her book, and she turned away, and glanced involuntarily at its title as she did so.

It was not "The Dutch Republic."

It was "No Name."

"Why this is not the book I asked for," she said.

The librarian flushed guiltily.

"I'm sorry," he answered confusedly. "I'm afraid I wasn't listening. I did not hear your number."

"Then why did you give me this?"

His confusion convinced the girl of what she had never before suspected. The librarian was her unknown admirer.

She opened the book she held, and searched rapidly through its pages, and there hidden as before she found a note.

She tore it into fragments and threw it down, while the unhappy man looked on in silence.

"When you do not hear it is wisest not to take too much for granted," she remarked icily. "Now change this book please for my number."

But he did not heed her request.

"Miss Hatherway, you must hear me," he said. "I never meant you to guess who wrote to you. I have always wanted to know you, but I didn't know how to do it. I thought some day, a long time off, when you had got used to the idea of an unknown admirer—well, then I might tell you somehow. I had no definite plan in my mind, but it made me so happy to write to you. I never meant to offend you—you believe that, don't you?"

He waited for an answer, and reluctantly she answered, "Yes."

"I don't deserve forgiving," he said, "and yet I'm going to ask you to forgive me."

And just at that moment the two girl assistants came back from tea. Their curious glances at Muriel and the librarian made both realize that they must be looking self-conscious.

The librarian remarked in his most professional tone:

"That book is out; will you look up another, please?"

Muriel turned away. She was a long time consulting the catalogue. Then she came back and asked the man who was still waiting for B 2022.

"B 2022—Forgiven," he read, as he handed it to her.

Muriel blushed. The librarian looked a happy man.

The librarian and his wife are now say on B 1887, which Nell, the chief bridesmaid, will be able to tell you means, "A Honeymoon in Paris."

The West and the East.

The East delights in memory; the West in prophecy.

The East says: This thing is rather unpleasant and inconvenient for us, but it served our fathers well; therefore we will keep it. The West says: This thing will be a nuisance for us, brought up in other customs, but it will serve our children well; therefore we will adopt it.

The East, though moving slowly forward, looks backward; the West, though sometimes moving backward, yet looks forward.

ART AND ARTISTS.

have a big sale and a terrible street car accident on one and the same day, but this is exactly what happened to Fannie E. Duvall. Last Thursday she sold one of her largest and most important canvases, "The Chrysanthemum Garden," to a well-known picture-lover and collector of Los Angeles, and last Thursday she was also so badly bruised and shaken up in a street car collision that she had to be taken to a hospital. However, she did not remain there for long. She is now at home, almost recovered, though decidedly scratched and marred.

George Henry Melchers, who paints landscapes and raises chickens in Topanga Canyon, was in Los Angeles the other day. He has been doing some vigorous work with the brush, and in the fall he will hold an exhibition of about twenty large canvases in the Kanst gallery. His wife, Bertha Corbett Melcher, of "Sunbonnet Baby" fame, is doing color work for the Ladies' Home Journal and other eastern journals. Her very own sunbonnet baby now poses for her.

Pictures by the following artists are now to be seen in the Royar gallery, No. 744 South Hill street: Clifton Alvard Paron, C. A. Rogers, Benjamin Chambers Brown, Hanson Puthuff, Jean Mannheim, Frederick Roland Miner, C. A. Fries, Helen Balfour and Franz Bischoff.

The Salon of the South, Blanchard Hall, has been closed for the past few weeks. It will open again on August 1. In the meantime, the pictures may be seen by special appointment with William Swift Daniell.

Gardner Symons, who has been spending the summer in Europe, will sail from England in August. He will probably reach Los Angeles in September, and will occupy his studio at Arch Beach, which is directly south of Laguna Beach. For the past year Mr. Symons has been the most conspicuous figure in American art. His summer in Europe was devoted to gathering pictures from the important current galleries for the forthcoming Carnegie exhibition.

Julia Bracken Wendt has just finished a beautiful bas-relief portrait of the late Samuel Kline, who was father-in-law to Martin J. Jackson, the painter. It will be cast in bronze, and is to be erected over the tomb of Mr. Kline in Denver. The work has been done with Mrs. Wendt's usual sympathy and insight, and is a fine and dignified performance.

The Los Angeles Keramic Club gave a reception last Monday, from 3 to 5 in the afternoon, at the Touraine. Old members and many others interested were present. The club will continue its meetings during the summer, studying design under a prominent teacher from the East.

BITS OF VERSE.

I Shall Not Pass Again This Way.

The bread that bringeth strength I want to give,
The water pure that bids the thirsty live;
I want to help the fainting day by day,
I'm sure I'll not pass again this way.

I want to give the oil of joy for tears,
The faith to conquer crowding doubts and fears.
Beauty for ashes may I give alway;
I'm sure I shall not pass again this way.

I want to give good measure running o'er,
And into angry hearts I want to pour
The answer soft that turneth wrath away;
I'm sure I shall not pass again this way.

I want to give others hope and faith;
I want to do all that the Master saith;
I want to live aright from day to day;
I'm sure I shall not pass again this way.

—[Heart Throbs.

Elegy.

Oh, to be with you, again to be with you,
Awake, asleep, even as love may will,
Drinking the waters of life anew, lost one,
Or hushed in earth's clasp with never a thrill.
Only that we might be again together,
Voiceful, silent, alike it would be sweet—
Treading the meadows of some Elysium,
Or deaf to the sound of merriest feet.

Anywhere unto us would it be gladness,
Resurgently singing o'er triumphs won;
Or hidden, dumb, 'neath wild tangled grasses,
From blossom of garden and light of sun.

If I May Have Thee Near.

If I may have thee near,
When morning comes to wake the earth,
With messengers of light,
And stir from sleep old sorrow and young mirth,
Then shall I set my face toward the hills,
And mount the paths of day
With fear of naught that life can bring
To turn my upward way.
If I may have thee near,
When evening finds my goal still far
Up steeps of pathless night,
For whose dark labyrinths no guides there are
Then though the shining hills I never reach,
My heart from grief is free;
Though I may never see the dawn—
I still have thee!

Memories.

The rose within the room makes sweet the air
With perfume wrought by mystic alchemy
Of sun and dew, and every heart may share
The wild-wood beauty God ordained free.

And though one bear it fading from the room
Still in the morning air its breathing sweet
Brings dreams of garden aisles and vanished bloom,
And charms that made the summer's joy complete.

So when from out our narrow round of days
A loved one's soul ere all its beauty dies
Is borne afar down still and soundless ways,
About us still a healing comfort lies.

Each common thing love touched is sanctified,
And soothes the quick because of one asleep;
By memories our thoughts are glorified;
Our hearts remembering remembrance keep.

The perfume lingers when the rose is dead,
And lures the heart to dreams with its sweet breath;
The love of love is ours when life has fled,
And links our souls across the deeps of death.

Kitchen Comfort.

There's kitchen comfort in plenty,
If the room's only tidy and bright,
And wife, in her clean gingham apron,
Cooks the ham and potatoes just right.

An oilcloth cover's no hardship,
If a bowl of hot drink holds it down,
And stoneware's as pretty as china,
If the corn cake's the right shade of brown.

The cat, stretching there in the corner,
And the young ones all eager for food,
And the clock marking time on the mantel—
I tell you it looks pretty good.

It doesn't trouble me, not a minute,
Because the folks over the way
Have a motor car and keep helpers
And use their front door every day.

No sign, 'cause he isn't doing my way,
My neighbor's a fool or a dunce;
There are lots of good ways to be happy,
But we can't do 'em all, all at once.

And if I should ever try his way,
(No knowing what people may do,)
I'd certainly miss the old kitchen—
And I'd miss it mighty bad, too.

An Ohio man who attended the dedication of a monument recalls Artemus Ward's account of one of these ceremonies: "It was a fine parade, a very fine parade. The marching column was fully a mile and three-quarters long—as was the prayer of Dr. Chaplain, the chaplain."

It is stated that since the beginning of 1909—that is, during a period of three years—the passengers on no fewer than twenty-two shipwrecked vessels have owed their lives to the fact that the ships were equipped with a wireless telegraph system and were consequently able to send out messages for assistance.

The porous lead of Prof. H. J. Hanover of the Danish Polytechnic High School of Copenhagen, is said to be the result of many years of study of the problem of accumulator efficiency. The lead is filled with cavities so small as to be visible only through a powerful microscope, but they diminish weight, and they add so much to the surface that it is said that storage batteries have their capacity increased five times without addition to their size or weight.

The Paris Medical publishes some observations which throw an important light on the cases of plague which occurred in Russia some time ago. As far back as 1907 Dr. Klodnitzihy noticed in the Cazarel Island, in the Caspian Sea, a slight outbreak of plague. Three women were attacked, and he was able to establish, after inquiry, that they had all three been engaged in handling the carcass of a camel which had died from some unknown cause. Later, in April, 1911, plague appeared in a little place in the district of Kamysch-Samara. Six persons were attacked with plague, and all had eaten of a camel that had died.

AN IRISH BEAUTY.

Wife of the Congressman from the Tenth Massachusetts District is a Handsome, Clever Young Woman Who Has Become Very Popular During Her Short Residence in Washington.

BY MARGARET B. DOWNING.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—One of the genuinely useful organizations which sprang into existence during the past season was the welfare department, an adjunct of the Congressional Club. Through the active interest taken in the movement by such practical philanthropists as Mrs. Champ Clark, Mrs. John Hays Hammond, Mrs. Richard Wainwright, Mrs. Henry C. Rainey and a number of others, the subdivision of the Congressional Club at once became a large and prosperous organization, held several meetings and elected an able and energetic corps of officers. The idea of this welfare department seemed to have been entirely misconstrued.

Mrs. James M. Curley.

It was not organized to aid charity work in Washington. This field has been ably and amply covered for the past ten years. It was intended for women who have worked along national lines in every community to assist less experienced sisters and give them the benefit of their experience. The work is altogether advisory and planned with a view of application in the home communities.

Among those who joined this welfare department in the early stages of its existence was Mrs. James M. Curley, a handsome young matron from South Boston, wife of the member from Roxbury. She proved an invaluable acquisition for she has obtained much valuable experience in the field of philanthropy since her marriage to one of the well known public benefactors of South Boston.

"Aiding the unfortunate is part of our daily lives as it must be in a city where the resources are so heavily taxed and the population so much in excess of its ability to provide a living for all," said Mrs. Curley. "All the great centers of population, New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, have the same problem and a number of men and women to whom it furnishes a life duty. Here in Washington, life seems to flow by in pleasant ways. To me it seems a city where all are prosperous, well employed and happy. With us it is so different. There seem endless poor families, poor children, needing milk and ice and everything which is indispensable for good health in summer. In winter, coal, food and warm clothing. Labor with what zeal you will, the work seems never done and cases multiply with discouraging rapidity. Just to go about among the poor is enough to incline one towards socialism, if it were not for the splendid endeavors which the nation and the state as well as charitably inclined people are doing to remedy affairs. But such conditions must exist where cities are overcrowded and when I feel particuarly cast down, tales which I hear from London, Paris, the great cities of Italy and the Levant, show how much more hopeful is the outlook for the American poor than for those across the water.

"Many wise philanthropists have made it clear that the time is past when one can discharge debts to suffering humanity by money alone. The time has arrived when we must give money, yes, but ourselves as well, our time, our energy, some of our own optimism and vital force to encourage the listless and helpless. I think our little Christmas celebrations in South Boston are among the really pleasant themes I can touch in discussing such a sad subject. It is unique because it is the work of an entire political ward, and its bounty is extended to all within its geographical dimensions regardless of political or religious creed, of color, race or anything except that food and good cheer are given on the greatest of Christmas days, the birth of the Savior. There are great societies like the Salvation Army which feeds a city-full and there are church clubs which provide a Christmas dinner for those circumscribed by poverty and unable to get a good Christmas dinner. But for the young men of a political ward to band together and see that every man, every old man and woman, every person unable to care for himself or his family has some portions of the good things in Christian homes on December 25, is something unique in our entire State.

"The idea originated in some young men, my husband among the number, seeing a long procession of poor people waiting at the Salvation headquarters for buckets of soup and some bread. It was a hard winter some ten years ago and all that could be provided was just enough to keep off starvation. It made an instant appeal and though it was too late to provide a Christmas dinner that year, collections were taken up at once and some necessities provided. The next Christmas all the poor children in the ward were invited to a big turkey dinner at a hotel in South Boston. It was as fine a feast as the hostelry could provide, turkey and canberry sauce, every sort of vegetable, relish, and the usual dessert of plum pudding and mince pie. It was a glorious sight and many of the wives of those who formed the committee waited on the tables and had gotten together candies, toys and woolen mittens which were presented after the banquet. But we found that to this dinner was just giving our money and not ourselves, our wits, as it were, and our judgment. For many children came who did not need food, who wasted it and threw it under the table. Many just waited for the sweet things and for the toys and did not even conceal their lack of interest in the substantials.

"The next year, we organized perfectly and made a quiet house-to-house canvass of the district, got information from the police officials, from Sunday schools and public school teachers, from pastors whose churches are located in the ward and we did much better. We also made provision against waste and foolish luxury and adopted the plan long followed by older and wiser laborers in this field. That is, we sent baskets to every home where a good Chrismas dinner would not be possible without our aid, to artisans to whom the winter brings slack work, to those out of employment, no matter for what reason, their own fault or not, we did not consider on the gentle feast which means love of one's neighbor. We send now such a pile of baskets that should I give numbers it would sound like boasting. A committee of women in the ward, mainly those whose husbands provide the sinews of war for the feast pack the baskets. We got all our information personally and we know the needs of each family to whom a basket is sent. If cough syrup is needed, we send that or woolen mittens or good thick hose and such like things which tide a family over until the weather moderates. Every child gets a toy, some candy and fruit, warm caps and mittens, in addition to a basket, which means not only a Christmas dinner, but good food for days, potatoes, canned tomatoes and stuffs for soup, a general round of beef, apples, celery and sometimes a half bushel of turnips, several big heads of cabbage. We have found that this basket does more good than a turkey which of course is excellent eating, and we wish we could give one to every family in Boston. But it is a luxury beyond the means of many making good wages and a large piece of beef is the more practical investment."

Mrs. Curley was frequently called on to explain this Christmas feast for the poor of South Boston and it is a safe prediction that many other women who did not understand exact- how to accomplish anything so extensive and complicated have received most valuable and practical information. Possibly there will be many imitators of this excellent method of giving aid and joy on the day in which tradition demands that all should remember those less fortunate. Throughout the year, Mrs. Curley and many other public-spirited women of Boston keep a vigilant eye on suitable articles for the Christmas stocking and this shopping and planning reaches from one December to another and joins the year in a chain of good deeds for humanity.

Mrs. Curley is exceptionally handsome and cordial and has been among the most popular of the newly arrived Congressional hostesses. Mr. and Mrs. Curley have a pretty home on Massachusetts avenue, near Twenty-second street, every leisure moment of the winter Mrs. Curley spent in making and purchasing things for its adornment. They did not dismantle their home in Roxbury, but gathered together some unique and handsome furnishings during their stay here. There are three interesting children, James M. Curley, Jr., who is 5, a pretty little maid of 3 and a half called Mary and a baby girl, Dorothea. These and her homekeeping would keep any woman well employed without taking on the work of philanthropic societies, but Mrs. Curley manages to perform many different kinds of labor in the course of a day. She is a native of Boston and was before her marriage, Miss Mary Herliley, daughter of Dennis Herliley, formerly of Dublin, Ireland. Mr. Herliley was a well-known school teacher in his native land and he followed the same profession for many years in Boston, where his memory is greatly revered. Mrs. Herliley died some ten years ago and her demise was followed rapidly by that of an elder sister, so the care of the father and of the home early fell upon Mrs. Curley. But from her parents she learned those accomplishments so useful in a successful mental career.

"My mother," said Mrs. Curley, "belonged to a family whose name is written large in the sad history of Ireland, the McCarthy's from about Kerry, the founder of which had the wonderful stronghold at Blarney Cormac McCarthy. She was skilled in all the gentle arts of the Irish lady and made the most exquisite lace. She was an expert in lace making, never having been very robust and unable to aid in more active pursuits. From her, I inherited a love for dainty laces and she also trained my eye to detect errors in the apparently perfect work which would escape the superficial observer. Irish lace is so beautiful and there are many kinds of which Americans are ignorant. The bebee and crochet has obtained the popularity which it deserves, but some of the finer kinds taught in the convents and made by the more delicate of the peasant girls in their homes are seldom placed on American markets. Yet some of it is softer and finer and shows more intricate pattern than the more famous lace of Brussels, Venice and France. I have some exquisite old pieces, some done by mother, others by her teachers, the nuns in the Presentation Convent and they are simply priceless not only because of their association for me, but because, they show such skill and such delicacy in the working. Lace making is very ancient in Ireland, as was the illuminating of manuscripts. A visit to the Dublin museum is usually a perfect revelation to those who know little of Irish history. I was glad during a recent visit to the splendid Metropolitan Museum in New York to find many excellent specimens of early Irish lace as well as much evidence of the activity which is manifest now. I hope to see our local museum as well supplied with the handiwork of present and past artists from the Emerald Isle."

DOMESTIC EDUCATION FOR FOREIGN BORN.

Education in American standards of living is being given to the immigrants of Buffalo by a group of fifteen women, working under the Buffalo Committee of the North American Civic League for Immigrants. The manner in which these lessons in living are imparted to the foreign born, as well as the results obtained, are described in a bulletin just issued for free distribution by the United States Bureau of Education. Says the bulletin:

"The 'domestic educators' go directly into the homes of such families as are willing to receive them. There they show the housewife how to keep her home clean, how to cook, how to vary the diet, how to get the most for her money, how to prevent sickness, how to sew, how to take care of the children; in fact, all or nearly all phases of home making are taken up and thoroughly demonstrated.

"It has been found that the teaching given to the mother of a family is passed along to her neighbors and relatives, especially the teaching of food principles.

"Cereals are now used in fifty homes where a month ago they were unknown. The use of coffee in all the homes the educators are visiting is on the decrease, and cocoa is used in its stead, while fresh milk has been substituted for canned milk. Stews and nourishing soups have taken the place of boiled cabbage and fried pork. Women are baking their own bread and cookies, instead of buying a most inferior quality at the nearest bakeshop. Some families who were left as hopeless by several other philanthropic agencies have been induced to clean up their homes under the educators' instructions. There are numberless children now receiving proper hygienic care who before the educators' visits were strangers to soap and water. Prospective mothers have benefited greatly by the instruction given. Several babes born this month have found carefully-prepared clothing awaiting them, whereas their elder brothers and sisters found only an old shirt.

"Lessons in sewing have proved very attractive to a large number of women. The children are going to school with buttons on their dresses, whereas before the garments were pinned; the stockings are getting attention both as to mending and washing, whereas previously there was only neglect.

"Through co-operation with the Charity Organization Society twenty women are taught how to buy economically."

As to the importance of the work the bulletin says:

"Amelioration of the home and living conditions of immigrant families is at the center of the problem of assimilation. Better homes mean better citizens. More serious than the present overcrowding, bad air, poor food, sickness and the rest is the underlying hygienic and domestic ignorance. Hitherto no adequate steps have been taken to replace this ignorance by intelligence. To be reached effectively for this purpose these immigrants must be reached in their homes."

ACTIVE WOMEN.

Mrs. Honora McPherson, who has just been elected superintendent of schools at Denver, was, for a number of years a teacher in the public schools, then served for seven years as the secretary of the superintendent of schools, and recently has been engaged in club and philanthropic work.

Miss Anne Evans of St. Louis, a Vassar graduate and social service worker, will lead a fight on unscrupulous lawyers and employers in that city. She has just been appointed assistant secretary of the Legal Aid Bureau of the Bar Association of St. Louis and will do the investigating.

The Socialist State ticket of Massachusetts includes Miss Ellen Hayes of Wellesley College as the candidate for Secretary of State. She is professor of astronomy and applied mathematics at Wellesley and has been an ardent Socialist for many years.

Mrs. Clara Lee Brown, a wealthy Kansas City widow, wrote the Mayors of Boston and New York, asking them to help find her a husband. She wanted a man who was not "cornfed," in other words, an easterner. After perusing 1500 letters that came to her as a result of her appeal, she has announced her loss of faith, and could not be induced to wed one of the number who wrote her.

Miss Della Authes, a school teacher of Sutton, Neb., is walking to San Francisco as a summer vacation. During the first twenty-seven days she averaged thirty-three miles a day. She carries a gun and a tooth brush, and sends her other luggage ahead.

Mrs. Hetty Green, who is in her 78th year, was recently baptized into the Episcopal Church in Jersey City. The service was not advertised, and her son, Col. E. H. Green, acted as witness.

Miss Anna A. Malley, Socialist lecturer and writer of Everett, and formerly of New York, will head the Socialist State ticket in Washington, the count of the referendum vote giving her the nomination for Governor over Richard Winsor of Seattle, by a majority of 800.

To What End?

Ouf of these dreams of good and evil, dense
With hopes grown half despairs,
despairs that trace
Furrows for hope, I wake sometimes and face
The darkness of our final nescience:
Then all earth's dancing pageants fall away—
Her flowers and forests and assuaging streams;
All man's philosophies and golden dreams—
The veils he wraps about the face of clay—
Dissolve. And there remains eternal lack
Of any comfort; for those questionings,
Whose stubborn challenge still unchallenged rings,—
Nor man nor god gives ever answer back,—
Set like stark monoliths as terminals
To Life's long alley, close Death's windy halls.

NATURE STORIES.

Duck and Trout Fight.

[Baltimore American:] As a Virginian was fishing below a milldam near a village in his State he accidentally threw his line across a duck, which suddenly turned around, twisted the gut about its neck, and fixed the dropper fly in its breast.

Thus entangled and hooked, the duck soon broke off the gut above the dropper and sailed down the stream with the other fly trailing behind it. It had not gone far before a trout about a pound and a half in weight took the fly.

Then began an extraordinary contest. While the trout struggled the terror of the duck was very evident; it fluttered its wings and dragged the fish. When the trout grew more quiet the duck gave way and suffered itself to be drawn under some bushes at the edge of the stream. When the struggle was renewed the duck's head was frequently drawn under the water.

By chance the gut got across a branch that hung downward in the water, when the duck, taking advantage of the purchase that this circumstance gave it, dragged the fish from its hole and obliged it to show its head above water. Then it became a contest of life and death. The trout was in last agonies and the duck in a very weak state when the gut broke and suffered each to go his own way.

Mice in Japan Waltz.

[Harpers' Weekly:] Perhaps the most curious of all the strange pets the Japanese affect is a species of mouse that waltzes through the greater part of the waking hours of its life. It is said never to tire.

The Japanese waltzing mouse is black and white and has pink eyes. Just about the time when other species of mice are beginning to learn to walk this curious rodent commences to waltz.

If several of the dancing mice are put into a cage they will sometimes waltz in couples and sometimes more than two will join in a mad whirl. So rapid, it is said, are their gyrations that it is frequently impossible to tell their heads from their tails. When the floor of the cage is not smooth, so it is averred, the mice actually wear out their feet.

Japanese declare that waltzing is as necessary to the welfare of the dancing mouse as midair somersaults are to the tumbling pigeon. There is provided an upright peg, which forms a convenient pivot around which the mice can whirl. Without such a guide the mice would not cover an area larger than a dinner plate in several minutes. They easily spin under a large drinking glass.

The true cause of the waltzing is a defective condition of the inner ear, which governs the equilibrium. It is associated with albinism—hence the "pink eyes."

Ants Love Green Bugs.

[New York World:] City Forester W. F. Gale of Springfield, Mass., offers cumulative evidence concerning the proverbial wisdom of the ant. Owners of gardens have been troubled by armies of green bugs that suck the juice from pea vines. In the wake of these green bugs comes thousands of black ants, which tap the bugs and extract the sweet juice which the bugs have drawn from the plants.

The operation is apparently harmless to the bugs, which, disheartened by such highway methods, depart from the gardens, invariably followed by the persistent ants. Forester Gale says that he has seen a bug fall from a pea vine, only to be seized by some vigilant ant and carried back to its perch again to get more juice for the ant.

A Dog that Knew.

[Our Dumb Animals:] Dogs are very good judges of the feelings we entertain for them. I saw a dog prove his ability to choose a friend from a group of people not long since.

He came limping along by a park where a number of men and boys were seated. He passed on until he came to one whom his instinct told him loved and understood dogs. He was limping badly. He quietly walked up and lifted the wounded foot up to this man as much as to say, "Please help me." The man, a perfect stranger to the dog, took the foot and examined it. He found a large splinter which he pulled out, and then petted the dog a moment. The animal was exceedingly grateful for the assistance and showed it in every way a dog can. He then went on his way rejoicing.

THE UNCHLOROFORMED.

Paul Mauser, inventor of the rifle of that name, who has just entered his seventy-fourth year, began work as an unsalaried apprentice sixty years ago in a small German arms and ammunition factory. He is now president and chief proprietor of the plant in which he started his career, and has the degree of doctor of engineering from a dozen colleges, and universities, in addition to possessing the coveted German title of Privy Councillor of Commerce. In honor of the sixtieth anniversary of his entering the factory, ten government arsenal workmen erected a monument in the factory yard bearing in bronze relief his portrait. He was present at the unveiling.

Miss Amanda Crandall, 91 years old, one of the oldest residents of Lebanon, O., died after an illness of over a year. She boasted all her life of never having been kissed by a man, and is said to have never had a beau.

Josiah Stouffer, 81 years old, without assistance, plowed, harrowed and planted seven acres in corn near Bridgeport, east of Hagerstown, Md., this week. Jacob Eckstein, 71 years old, of Halfway, harvested his entire crop of wheat, doing all the work himself, including the shocking of the sheaves.

Alphus Wood, aged 91 years, a prominent farmer, and his daughter, Mrs. John Elliott, residing near Marysville, O., have just taken their first ride on a passenger train.

THE NEW BOOKS and the BOOK NEWS

By Willard Huntington Wright

MASTERPIECE OF STRATEGY.

THE DAY OF THE SAXON. By Gen. Homer Lea. Harper & Bros., New York.

THE sudden and un-looked for appearance of Gen. Homer Lea on the dialetic mat of militarism two years ago was a bomb which sent a shudder through the camps, both of the strategic experts and of the theorists of disarmament. Above the babel of contending factions of militarists, Hobsonites, advocates of universal peace, separatists, international tribunalists, arbitrationists, universalists, and the hundred and one varieties of fantastic military fowl, rose the voice of Gen. Lea, at once a warning and an inspiration.

In "The Valor of Ignorance" he set forth the weakness of American naval conditions, and pricked the bubble of our self-complacent security from invasion. At first, America, self-deceived by a spurious national valor, gave the book short shrift. But when the greater strategists and military experts of England discovered significant data and theories in this treatise, America decided to look into the book again— a thing which she did, both to her dismay and anger.

Now comes Gen. Lea with a book entitled, "The Day of the Saxon"—by far the most significant and stimulating addendum to the literature of military science and to the great problem of arbitration which has yet been issued. Here is a book which establishes such astonishing premises, develops along the line of such rigid and inevitable syllogisms and arrives at such staggering conclusions that the efforts of other writers on military science, international peace, and the like, pale by comparison.

In such a book as this of Gen Lea's it is not at all necessary to accept his premise, nor yet to acquiesce to his conclusions in order to find food for consideration. Scoffers and scorners of war, and even the most pious advocates of disarmament, will find material here to make them ponder. It is not necessary to consider the book in the concrete. As an abstract illumination on one of the most stupendous and intricate of all human problems, "The Day of the Saxon" is a work of importance and significance. There is no superficiality here, no repetition of mere platitudes, no attempt to do away with the inevitability of war—or its negative condition, peace by force—by the application of ethical or theological standards. Facts and not ideals, conditions and not formulae, logic and not speculation, psychology and not morals, lie at the bottom of this work.

The book is weighted down with a ponderance of argument. It is not the mere argument of a theorist. Gen. Lea points specific instances to prove his contentions. He ransacks history for polemic examples. And he has not confined himself to any one field of thought. Here we find the tenets of philosophy, of economy, of military and naval strategy—a welding of the great basic principles of government and individualism, of social integration and disintegration. Evolutionary tendencies and the laws of convergence and divergence are factors in the analysis of his subject.

"The Day of the Saxon" is, in fine, an exhortation to the British Empire —a call to arms, a trumpet warning of danger. Great Britain has developed beyond her power. She is top-heavy from a preponderance of territory. And unless a radical change in the military policies of that empire is effected, her overthrow is imminent. The British Empire, says Gen. Lea, will be destroyed through the causes which the Saxon now refuses to contemplate. This evasion of conditions has brought about a decay of the defenses of the empire and the time of its dissolution is drawing near. Every day augments the dangers which threaten "the thin red Saxon line" encircling the world. Today, at the zenith of its power, the British Empire, repeating the history of all great world powers in the past, has entered upon a policy of neglect —neglect bred of over-security, of self-delusion, of ignorance.

The scorn of war, says Gen. Lea, is merely the hate of hateful realities. The British Empire, temporarily self-deceived, has denied the fundamental principles of wars, namely, the necessity for variable yet specific preparedness to meet the constant readjustment of international relationships that is determined by external conditions. Unless the Saxons rouse themselves to the fundamental laws governing wars, somewhere along the line of British possession will come a reverse, and that reverse will imperil the whole empire.

In brief, Gen. Lea's argument is this:

(1.) The Saxon empire cannot endure unless her military development increases in proportion to her political and economic territorial development. And this military development must likewise be proportionate to the expansion of other nations, both singly and in coalition.

(2.) Great Britain consists of one-fourth of the land surface of the world, holds the suzerainty of the five seas, has dominion over seventeen-twentieths of the world's surface, and the British possessions are so distributed that they form a complete circle around the entire globe.

(3.) Due to the vastness of British possessions and the distribution of British territory, there can be no political or territorial expansion of any of the great powers of the world without a corresponding subtraction from British dominion.

(4.) When the resources of a nation stand in inverse ratio to its military power, and the military capacity of its competitors is proportionate to the needs of its race, then war will ensue when the military decadence of one and the economic necessities of the other reach a known point. And furthermore, the outbreak of decisive hostilities is also inevitable when the exploitation of the natural resources of a nation militarily weak is prohibitive to nations militarily strong. No matter what the external manifestations of the precipitating causes of war, the source may be traced to these two fundamental causes of national adjustment.

(5.) Great Britain, like all other nations of the past, has come to view herself as impregnable because of her preeminence among other States; and as an inevitable consequence, has begun to sanction the degeneration of the military support.

(6.) Therefore, unless there comes an immediate revival of militancy in the British Empire, a strengthening of their military and naval powers according to the laws of proportion above laid down, the inevitable wars which are about to fall upon Great Britain will destroy her sovereignty.

This is merely the framework of a book which goes into every phase and principle of militarism. As I have said, it is not a book of mere theory. Each chapter is devoted to a specific territorial problem. For instance, in India Gen. Lea sees the weakest of all points of dominion reverse. It is here that British prestige and not British arms is in control—a power which is false and unenduring. Russia already has her eyes on India, via Persia, and is moving forward, inevitably and glacier-like. Germany covets Denmark, Holland and the Netherlands as outlets to the sea. The day will come when the other powers of the world, proportionately stronger than Great Britain, will be so governed by internal and external conditions that their expansion must culminate in war—"one war if the empire is destroyed; a series if it is victorious."

Just as in the beginning the battle for existence was between individuals, and later between nations, so the great conflict of the immediate future is between races. Already the efficiency of the white race is weakening, and the power of the other races is increasing. They can only expand by encroaching upon the white man's boundaries. And if the white race is unprepared, the white race is doomed. No amount of security on the part of the Saxon can be derived from his past predominance, or retain for him his supremacy. Gen. Lea, with the subtle and far-seeing vision of a strategist, indicates those points of weakness where the inevitable invasion of the other races will commence.

Perhaps the greatest service which this book will perform will be in its explanation of the causes of war. Those complacent individuals who, skimming the surface of things with superficial eyes, regard international conflicts as avoidable accidents due to specific and varying economic and political conditions, will find themselves disqualified by the searching analyses of fundamental causes as set forth in Gen. Lea's remarkable exposition.

"The Day of the Saxon" is no mere journeyman's book, no hotheaded precipitation of unauthentic ideas, but a careful, scholarly and profound treatise dealing with causes and not effects, with principles and not beliefs. As no other book I have read on the subject, it goes beneath the surface of things. It proves beyond all preadventure of the sophistry of the sentimental that national exertion for defense must be made in proportion to the probabilities of war.

Nor is "The Day of the Saxon" a mere bit of destructive criticism, a mere acute analysis of military conditions. It urges a scientific, but plastic armament for the Saxon race, and, though starting from a wholly different premise, coincides on one great fundamental and important point with the views of Gen. Harrison Gray Otis as recently set forth, in regard to the method of retaining Saxon supremacy, namely, naval and military unification of the great world powers, and the complete separation of the military and naval systems from the civil government.

SHAKESPEARE AGAIN.

SHAKESPEARE: A STUDY. By Darrell Figgis. Mitchell Kennerley. New York.

AT THE outset let us give Mr. Figgis credit for a task which would seem almost like a piece of literary bravado. For a young man in this year of our Lord, 1912—with libraries, already overstocked with critical volumes on the Bard of Avon —to deliberately sit down and write a treatise on Shakespeare, is no mean feat. His excuse for this, no doubt, as we infer from his text, is his frankness. He intimates that there has been but little frankness in the past on the part of reviewers when dealing with the plays of Shakespeare. To a large extent he is right. In nearly every writer on this subject one may find an attitude which amounts almost to classical superstition. The professors of literature have made of Shakespeare a figure which stands today as almost superhuman—a dramatist of transmundane abilities; a demigod of the pen.

This professorial attitude Mr. Figgis has commendably attempted to overcome. His desire, however, far outruns his execution. As a matter of fact, he has, in his present book, given us little that is new and little that is entertaining. His attempt in dealing with Shakespeare has taken the form of self-intrusion, and there are passages so loosely argued and so cock-sure in conclusion that not only Baconian bile will be raised, but the staunchest members of the Shakespeare camp will hardly be pleased.

One portion of the book, which endeavors to show an inter-relation between the man Shakespeare and his characters—that is, the autobiographical aspect of the personages of the plays—brings to mind Mr. Frank Harris's specious and diverting sophistry. Had Mr. Figgis been less punditic in his manner of writing, and more definite in his appeal, the book might stimulate students. But in its present form there is scarcely enough novelty to make the book one to be seriously recommended.

SELECTING PARENTS.

HEREDITY IN RELATION TO EUGENICS. By C. B. Davenport. Henry Holt & Co., New York.

AFTER an influx of such maudlin tracts on eugenics as Percy MacKaye's "Tomorrow," a book like C. B. Davenport's "Heredity in Relation to Eugenics" comes as a welcome and needed relief.

No more scholarly and important book on this important subject has yet been issued. Dr. Davenport is the foremost eugenist in America, and his research and study at the Carnegie Institution Station for Experimental Revolution at Cold Spring Harbor, Long Island, has resulted in many discoveries of the utmost importance to the subject.

In the present book heredity, as the chief factor of eugenics, is given principal consideration. Nearly every phase of this branch of eugenics is gone into, with a discussion of the laws governing nearly all classes of disease. Numerous data and charts augment the text. For anyone interested in the subject, the book is invaluable, and the popular way in which the subject is handled throughout, makes the argument understandable to the unscientific.

AN ANTIQUARIAN'S PARIS.

BYWAYS OF PARIS. By M. Georges Cain Duffield & Co., New York.

AMONG the many books on Paris which come to the reviewer, one rarely finds a work which catches the true atmosphere of the American heaven. This is, no doubt, largely due to the fact that few writers who endeavor to interpret or describe this city, go beneath the bare surface. M. Georges Cain is not of this type, however. His "Byways of Paris" gives us that intimacy of Paris lacking in other books. M. Cain knows not only the surface of Paris, but its history, its antiquarianism and its temperament. His work is scholarly, yet vivid.

PROBLEM NOVEL.

THE DECISIONS. By M. Leon de Tinseau. G. W. Dillingham, New York.

IN M. Leon de Tinseau's novel, "The Decision," the old problem of whether one is justified in putting an uncurable sufferer out of his agony is again presented with romantic appurtenances. The hero of the present book gives an over-dose of a narcotic to a man, at the man's request, and proceeds to fall in love with his friend's widow. Straightway his conscience begins to trouble him, and while in this perturbed mental state, he does all he can to get light upon the subject by consulting numerous types of individuals for different points of view. M. Tinseau is discreet enough not to suggest an answer to this important query, and so leaves the reader, in the end, to his own conclusions.

The book is entertaining as mere romance, and contains considerable merit in its statement of his problem.

BOOK NEWS.

What promises to be one of the most interesting volumes in Messrs. Henry Holt & Company's series of "Leading Americans" (edited by Prof. W. P. Trent,) will be Mr. George Iles's "Leading American Inventors," which may be expected about November 1. The author—an authority on his subject—will, as the authors of the other volumes in the series have done, confine himself to men who have passed away, and whose work has been therefore finished. His subjects include Fulton, the inventor of the steamboat; Ericson, of the "Monitor;" Whitney, of the cotton gin; McCormick, of the reaper; Howe, of the sewing machine; Morse, of the telegraph; Sholes, who built a typewriter, and others.

Among the Stokes' novels announced for publication in the fall is "Out of the Wreck I Rise," by Beatrice Harraden, the story of a swindler, a good woman, and a splendid sulky Jewess. "Miss Wealthy, Deputy Sheriff," by Elizabeth Neff, author of "Altars to Mammon," is the tale of lovable country folk. Flora Annie Steel, in "King-Errant," will relate the adventurous rise of the young King of a small State in India. Harold Bindloss will have another story of the virile West in "The Long Portage."

Johann Wolfgang Goethe is possibly one of the most romantic figures among the great modern writers. He still treads the stage of the world in the character of Faust, and all of his works are suffused with personal feeling and reflect every stage of the impassioned drama of his career. Every chapter in his life wos a romantic love story. Mr. Joseph McCabe, in his "Goethe: The Man and His Character," just published by the Lippincotts, has endeavored to show the effect on Goethe's work of every passionate period of his life. The material for compiling a biography of this kind is incalculably rich, and has been collected and sifted by three generations of ardent students. The method employed by Mr. McCabe enables the reader to follow intelligently the broad development of Goethe's artistic genius.

All lovers of literature will share the deep regret of A. F. Davidson's many personal friends that his "Victor Hugo: His life and Work," just issued by the J. B. Lippincott company, is a posthumous work. French literary history was always his hobby and the successful publication of his "of Dumas" several years ago, encouraged him to write the present volume on Victor Hugo. He did not actually begin it until he was in the grip of his last long illness. Although he was, fortunately, able to complete it, yet he did not live to read and edit the proofs. This was done by Francis Gribble, who writes that it was his aim to revise the proofs as Davidson would himself have revised them, nowhere tampering with any expression of opinion, but carefully correcting obvious slips of the pen, and making the few necessary but inconsiderable additions.

Beethoven's love affair with the Countess Giucciardi has been made the center of a noval which has already run into several editions in Sweden, the land of its origin. The book is called in English, "The Moonlight Sonata," after Beethoven's "Quasi, Una Fantasia," and the author is Johan Nordling. English, French, Italian, Dutch and Russian editions are in preparation. Here the book will appear under the Sturgis & Walton Company imprint. The book's success is attributed to the intensity of the love story, to the pictures of the life and times of Beethoven.

Although first issued thirteen years ago, Messrs. Henry Holt & Company are just having to send Lavignac's "Music and Musicians" to press for the ninth time. Since its appearance this book has been several times revised and enlarged, and it contains valuable matter on contemporary composers, etc., by our noted American critic, Henry E. Krehbiel, which doesn't appear in the original French edition.

Jack London's new story of adventure in the Klondike takes its name from the hero, "Smoke Bellew." It is on the Century company's fall list.

Maurice Hewlett's new novel is "Mrs. Lancelot," the story of a fascinating woman of the London social world and her three lovers. The Century company will issue the book in the fall.

Beryl Symons's new historical romance has been issued in America under the title of "The Roses of Crein." In England the story is called "Prince and Priest." It has met with marked favor in Europe, and D. Appleton & Company have issued it in America as one of their leading novels of the early summer.

Dr. Frederick A. Cleveland, whose new book on "Railway Finance" will shortly be issued by the Appletons in their railway series, has just been informed that an earlier work of his "Funds and Their Uses" is to be embossed for the use of blind readers by the Pennsylvania Institution for the Blind.

WITH THE AUTHORS.

Leroy Scott, author of "The Counsel for the Defense," has returned with his family to his summer home at Caritas Island, in Long Island Sound, off Stanford, Ct. Mr. Scott spent the winter in his Washington Square apartment. In the interesting little community of writers and social workers who live on Carites Island are J. G. Phelps-Stokes and his wife, Rose Pastor Stokes.

Theodore Dreiser, author of "Sister Carrie" and "Jennie Gerhardt," has returned from a trip abroad, where he has been gathering material for a new novel. Mr. Dreiser spent most of his time in England and Italy, and it is quite probable that a story with the scenes laid in those countries will be forthcoming in the near future.

Owen Johnson, the author of "Stover at Yale," who was taken dangerously ill with typhoid fever in the midst of the tense discussion of his criticisms of college, is now rapidly recovering, and will soon be taken to his summer home at Stockbridge. He had expected to leave in mid-June for nearly a year in Europe, but this trip is now indefinitely postponed.

George Middleton, the dramatist, and author of plays produced by Julia Marlowe, Margaret Anglin and others, is spending the summer at Senator La Follette's farm in Madison, Wis., putting the finishing touches on a new volume of plays which will deal mainly with phases of the social and economic problems of the day. Plays from his other volume, "Embers," published by Holt & Co., have been produced by the Toy Theater, and many other special organizations all over the country, and productions are arranged for next year by the Marple Society in England. Mrs. Middleton, Fola La Follette, is busy campaigning Wisconsin in the interest of woman suffrage.

Mrs. Carroll Watson Rankin, the author of "Dandelion Cottage," "The Castaways of Pete's Patch," and other books for girls, has returned to her home at Marquette, Mich. When she was recently in Buffalo at the Child's Welfare Exhibition she was delighted to find her "Dandelion Cottage" exhibited in a bookcase labelled "Best 100 Books for Children."

A recent report from Rome says, that Robert Hichens spent the whole of last season there, but kept his presence dark, because he wanted to learn the effect of "The Fruitful Cine" on his numerous acquaintances in Roman high society. The book deals rather severely with many important personages.

Mr. Hichens declares that he enjoyed his recent visit in America immensely, and wants to return.

Miss Mary Johnston, the novelist, is spending the summer at Hot Springs, Va., where she is overseeing the building of her new house, and is at the same time at work upon the final chapters of her novel, "Cease Firing," which Houghton Mifflin Co. will publish in the autumn.

Miss Augusta Kortrecht, the author of "A Dixie Rose," one of the leading juveniles issued last fall, is spending her summer at Clarkson, Ontario, Can. She has just finished revising the proofs of her new story, "A Dixie Rose in Bloom," which are the further adventures of that delightful southern girl, and which will be issued by the J. B. Lippincott Company in the fall.

LITERARY GOSSIP.

Brewer Corcoran, the author of "The Bantam," which has just been published by the Harpers, was at one time a student at St. Paul's School in Concord, N. H. It is generally understood that many of the incidents related in "The Bantam" occurred at that noted school, and that some of the youthful characters described are now men well known in public life.

Zeta Psi, George Borup's fraternity in Yale, is raising funds through its graduate members for a scholarship which shall be a continued memorial to George Borup, the young Arctic explorer and author of "A Tenderfoot with Peary," who was recently drowned.

Brander Matthews, in his book, "Vistas of New York," recently published by the Harpers, gives a most interesting description of the "bob-tailed car" which flourished in certain sections of New York before the Civil War. This variety of the horse car was a short, stubby vehicle, running back and forth on a single track, and manned only by a driver. There was no conductor to collect the fares, but just inside the door was a box which, as a sign informed the public, was the proper receptacle for the fare. It would seem, therefore, that the pay-as-you-enter cars, instead of being an innovation, are really but a resurrection of an old idea. In "Vistas of New York," as in his other books, "Vignettes of Manhattan" and "Outlines in Local Color," Mr. Matthews shows in a series of fictional snapshots many of the swift and varied scenes that make up the brilliant kaleidescopic life of the metropolis.

It is understood that "M. P. Revere," the name given out as the author of "The Bride's Hero," which will be one of the most important of the Stokes fall novels, is merely the nom de plume of a well-known author who is publishing under the pen name as an experiment. Who this author is has not been given out.

Miss Carolyn Wells is one of our leading feminine humorists. One of the funniest stories told about her is that by one of her numerous publishers, who asked her, "Why do you always send your book manuscripts in a five-pound candy box?" To which she replied: "When I feel that I am going to write a book I always buy a five-pound box of candy and a pint of ink, and then I begin to write and when the candy is all gone and the ink all used up I know that the book is long enough."

There are few people in the United States who have not at some time chuckled over the phrase, "The smile than won't come off." It is not generally known that Miss Carolyn Wells is the author of this phrase and was paid $100 for it, and if she has any grievance in life it is the fact that she has never been given the credit for this sentence, which she considers one of the funniest she ever wrote.

James Francis Dwyer, author of the South Sea novel, "The White Waterfall," just published, thinks that the gentle heathen has a remarkable lot of common sense. Mr. Dwyer tells of a Samoan chief who received a box of clothes from the agent of a Boston missionary association. "In the bundle," said Mr. Dwyer, "was a pair of corsets—the Lord only knows why corsets were sent to Samoa—but the chief knew that his special tin god was watching over his interests. He decreed that any of his own wives or the wives of his followers who misbehaved themselves should be laced up in the corsets for a certain period, and the moral effect upon the village was wonderful. The spectacle of a buxom wife squealing loudly as the corsets were drawn around her had such a good effect upon scolds and lazy housewives that headmen from other villages sent special envoys asking for the loan of the wonderful apparatus to punish their own confirmed shrews."

Among the royal and distinguished personages whom Madame Steinheil counted among her friends or acquaintances was King Edward VII. In her recently published "My Memoirs" this beautiful, accomplished and unfortunate woman records the following conversation with the late King of England:

I met King Edward VII, then Prince of Wales, several times.

He asked me one day, quite unexpectedly, what I thought of his French. "Your Highness," I replied, "speaks our language unusually well—

"For one who is not French!"

"For one who is not always in France. But, perhaps, your Highness speaks it too grammatically."

"I see," said the Prince cheerfully, "my French is too perfect to be —perfect."

He had a charming fine sense of humor, and I remember his saying: "In France, I enjoy myself, look around and talk; in Germany, I observe and let others talk; in England—I shan't tell you what I do in England. I should be divulging state secrets."

Like "Carmen Sylva," the poet-queen of Roumania, Queen Margherita of Italy likes to get very close to her people. One of her favorite friends is Dr. Maria Montessori, the great educator of children, and author of "The Montessori Method." The Queen is often to be seen visiting one of the Montessori schools, even in the poorest quarters of Rome, attended only by a couple of carbiniers. She enters like the simplest visitor, and quietly watches the children happily at work.

Once when she was first visiting a school the teacher asked one of the children to spell out "Welcome to Her Majesty" with the wooden letters mounted on blocks by which the children learn reading and writing. The child nodded, but while the Queen waited, went on putting her letters back into the compartments provided for them.

"My dear," remonstrated the teacher, "don't you know that this is the Queen, waiting for you to spell out her name?"

"Yes," said the child placidly, "but even the Queen knows that I can't spell a new sentence till I have put the letters back in order in the box."

George Pattullo has started for Europe for the summer via Mexico and Central America. His new book, "The Sheriff of Bagdar," may rob the misinformed of some prejudices concerning the western cowboy, who, Mr. Pattullo explains, does not shoot up a town habitually every morning before breakfast. There is plenty of romance and excitement in this author's picture of ranch life, in spite of his defense of the cowboy as a law-abiding citizen.

"SONNETS AND BALLATE."

Ezra Pound's Translation as Reviewed by a Writer in "The Poetry Review."

SONNETS AND BALLATE OF GUIDO CAVALCANTI. Translated by Ezra Pound. Small, Maynard & Co., Boston.

IT IS difficult to justify the appearance of this new translation of Guido Cavalcanti's lyrics. A work of love, as it evidently is, arising out of a desire to express and to "embody in English some trace of that power which implies the man" should, one would think, at least be free from sloveniiness and inaccuracy. Accuracy and care has never been harmful to true art, and Mr. Pound himself knows it quite well.

The original idea of "printing only the poems and an unrhymed gloze," while obviating much pedestrian verse and bad translation, would scarcely have proved an adequate or reliable comment. Either Mr. Pound knows very little about the Italian language, or he is totally lacking in that critical judgment necessary to the translator.

The text used, to which, by the way, he never refers, is not only obsolete and untrustworthy, but also betrays ignorance of some of the commonest rules of syntax, grammar and metrics. I do not mean by this that Mr. Pound should have followed given edition, but to justify a departure from the generally-accepted ones, he should have taken care that his text was more correct and nearer to the spirit of the original. Not only does he omit to quote even the most important variants, but he continually disproves the judiciousness of his choice. Taking as an instance Sonnet No. XVIII, let us compare it with the text of Ercole or Arnone, the two readings in each case immediately following the one on the other:

Belta di donna, e di saccente core,
E cavalieri armati, che sian genti,
Cantar d'augellia, a ragionar d'amore,
Adorni legn' in mar, forti e correnti;
(Verse one, lines 1 to 4.)
Belta di donna, e di piagente core,
E cavalier armati molto genti,
Cantar d'augelli e ragionar d'amore,
Adorni legni in mar forte [illegible]
Cio che puo la beltade e la [illegible]
De la mia Donna in suo [illegible]
gio,
Par, che rassembre vila a chi [illegible]
guarda;
(Verse three, lines 1 to 4.)
Passa la gran beltate e la [illegible]
De la mia donna e il suo [illegible]
gio,
Si cherassembra vile a chi [illegible]
(Verse four, line 1.)
E tanto ha piu d'ogni altra [illegible]
(Verse four, line 1.)
E tant'e pui d'ogn' altra [illegible]

The difference between the two is, at least, startling, and as far as I can perceive, none of the [illegible] introduced by the translator has any sound critical or poetic basis.

Mr. Pound announces in the introduction some of his theories of rhythm and the poetic [illegible] between word and emotion; [illegible] not entirely underived from [illegible] theorists on the subject. It is [illegible] possible to discuss here, the [illegible] of such words as gentile, [illegible] valore, nor yet his interpretation of the episode of Oderisi in the [illegible] torio and Calvacante in the [illegible] Referring to the passage [illegible] I can see no reason for [illegible] the one as modifying the other [illegible] still less for admitting that [illegible] meant to place his poetry [illegible] of his great friend. In the [illegible] Dante's answer to Cavalcante

Venerable Czar Nicholas Writes Passionate Love Poem—Sudermann to Write Opera-Libretto—Plan to Cure People of Reading Poor Books.

BY BERNARD ASTON.

BERLIN July 14.—Czar Nicholas of Montenegro, who usually writes only about war and slaughter, has got sentimental in his old age; and has written a longish poem, called "The Power of Love." It was translated at his request by the German Minister at Cettinje; and appears in the Berlin Vossische Zeitung. The poem begins by referring to Czar Nicholas's gray hairs, and goes on to refer to his last successes in the fields of love, with many references to kisses, sighs, tears, trembles, whispers, despairs and consolations. Czar Nicholas, however, cannot altogether avoid his favorite subject, war; even in the arms of Venus he is thinking of Mars.

Amidst the flash of the swords
And the thunder of the cannon,
My eye, full of rapture follows
Your look, goddess of love.

Another verse says that "In palaces, poorest cabins, love seeks rest in her world-pilgrimages; she brings life, pleasure, and need; and the greatest delight and the love-death." Yet another verse says "Love is indispensable." Nicholas ought to know. He is said to be preparing a full edition of his works in the Servian tongue.

Hermann Sudermann has been talking about his literary plans. At present he is in Italy, paying visits to Rome, Milan, and Ravenna. His first plan is the libretto of an opera for the young Italian composer, Ezio Camussi. The libretto will be based upon Sudermann's play, "Johannisfeuer." To Ravenna Sudermann went in connection with his second plan. This is to write a drama entitled "Der letzte Dichter"—"The Last Poet." The last poet is to be Claudius Claudianus, the fourth century Latin bard. "A five-act play under the Emperor Honorius, dealing with something that never happended but might have happened" is Sudermann's description.

Sudermann denies the reports that he has abandoned altogether the modern drama. He has just finished a play of manners which he calls "Der Gute Ruf"—"The Good Name." "The Good Name" will be produced next winter in Berlin. Sudermann says that "It concerns a married woman who, for the sake of her good name, sacrifices herself and her great love to another, a rich and egotistical woman. It is a drama in which a heart-conflict among the aristocracy of money plays the main part. Through four acts passions and greeds are in conflict; but the catastrophe leads to the moral which I have had in mind in all my writings."

Germany's society against bad literature has a new way to win the public to reading good books and getting rid of bad. It offers to give out a new good book for every old bad one sent in. Thousands of books of the category "Schundliteratur," i. e., blood-thirsty or vicious, are delivered up; and nice, new, edifying works are given in exchange.

A special appeal is made to children to stop reading "Nick Carter literature." "Nick Carter" is the German idea of the lowest literary infamy. Many Nick Carters' are given up; and some other books. A small boy appeared with a Latin grammar, and said, "Give me a good book for this. Father says that you give nice books for nasty books, and this is the nastiest book, I know."

The Vossische Zeitung appeals to rich Germans to imitate Andrew Carnegie and do something for the empire's libraries, which are in a bad state. So far the biggest [illegible] recorded came from the publisher Heimann. The amount is $120,000. The German Poets' Memorial Institute has given 500,000 books to small libraries.

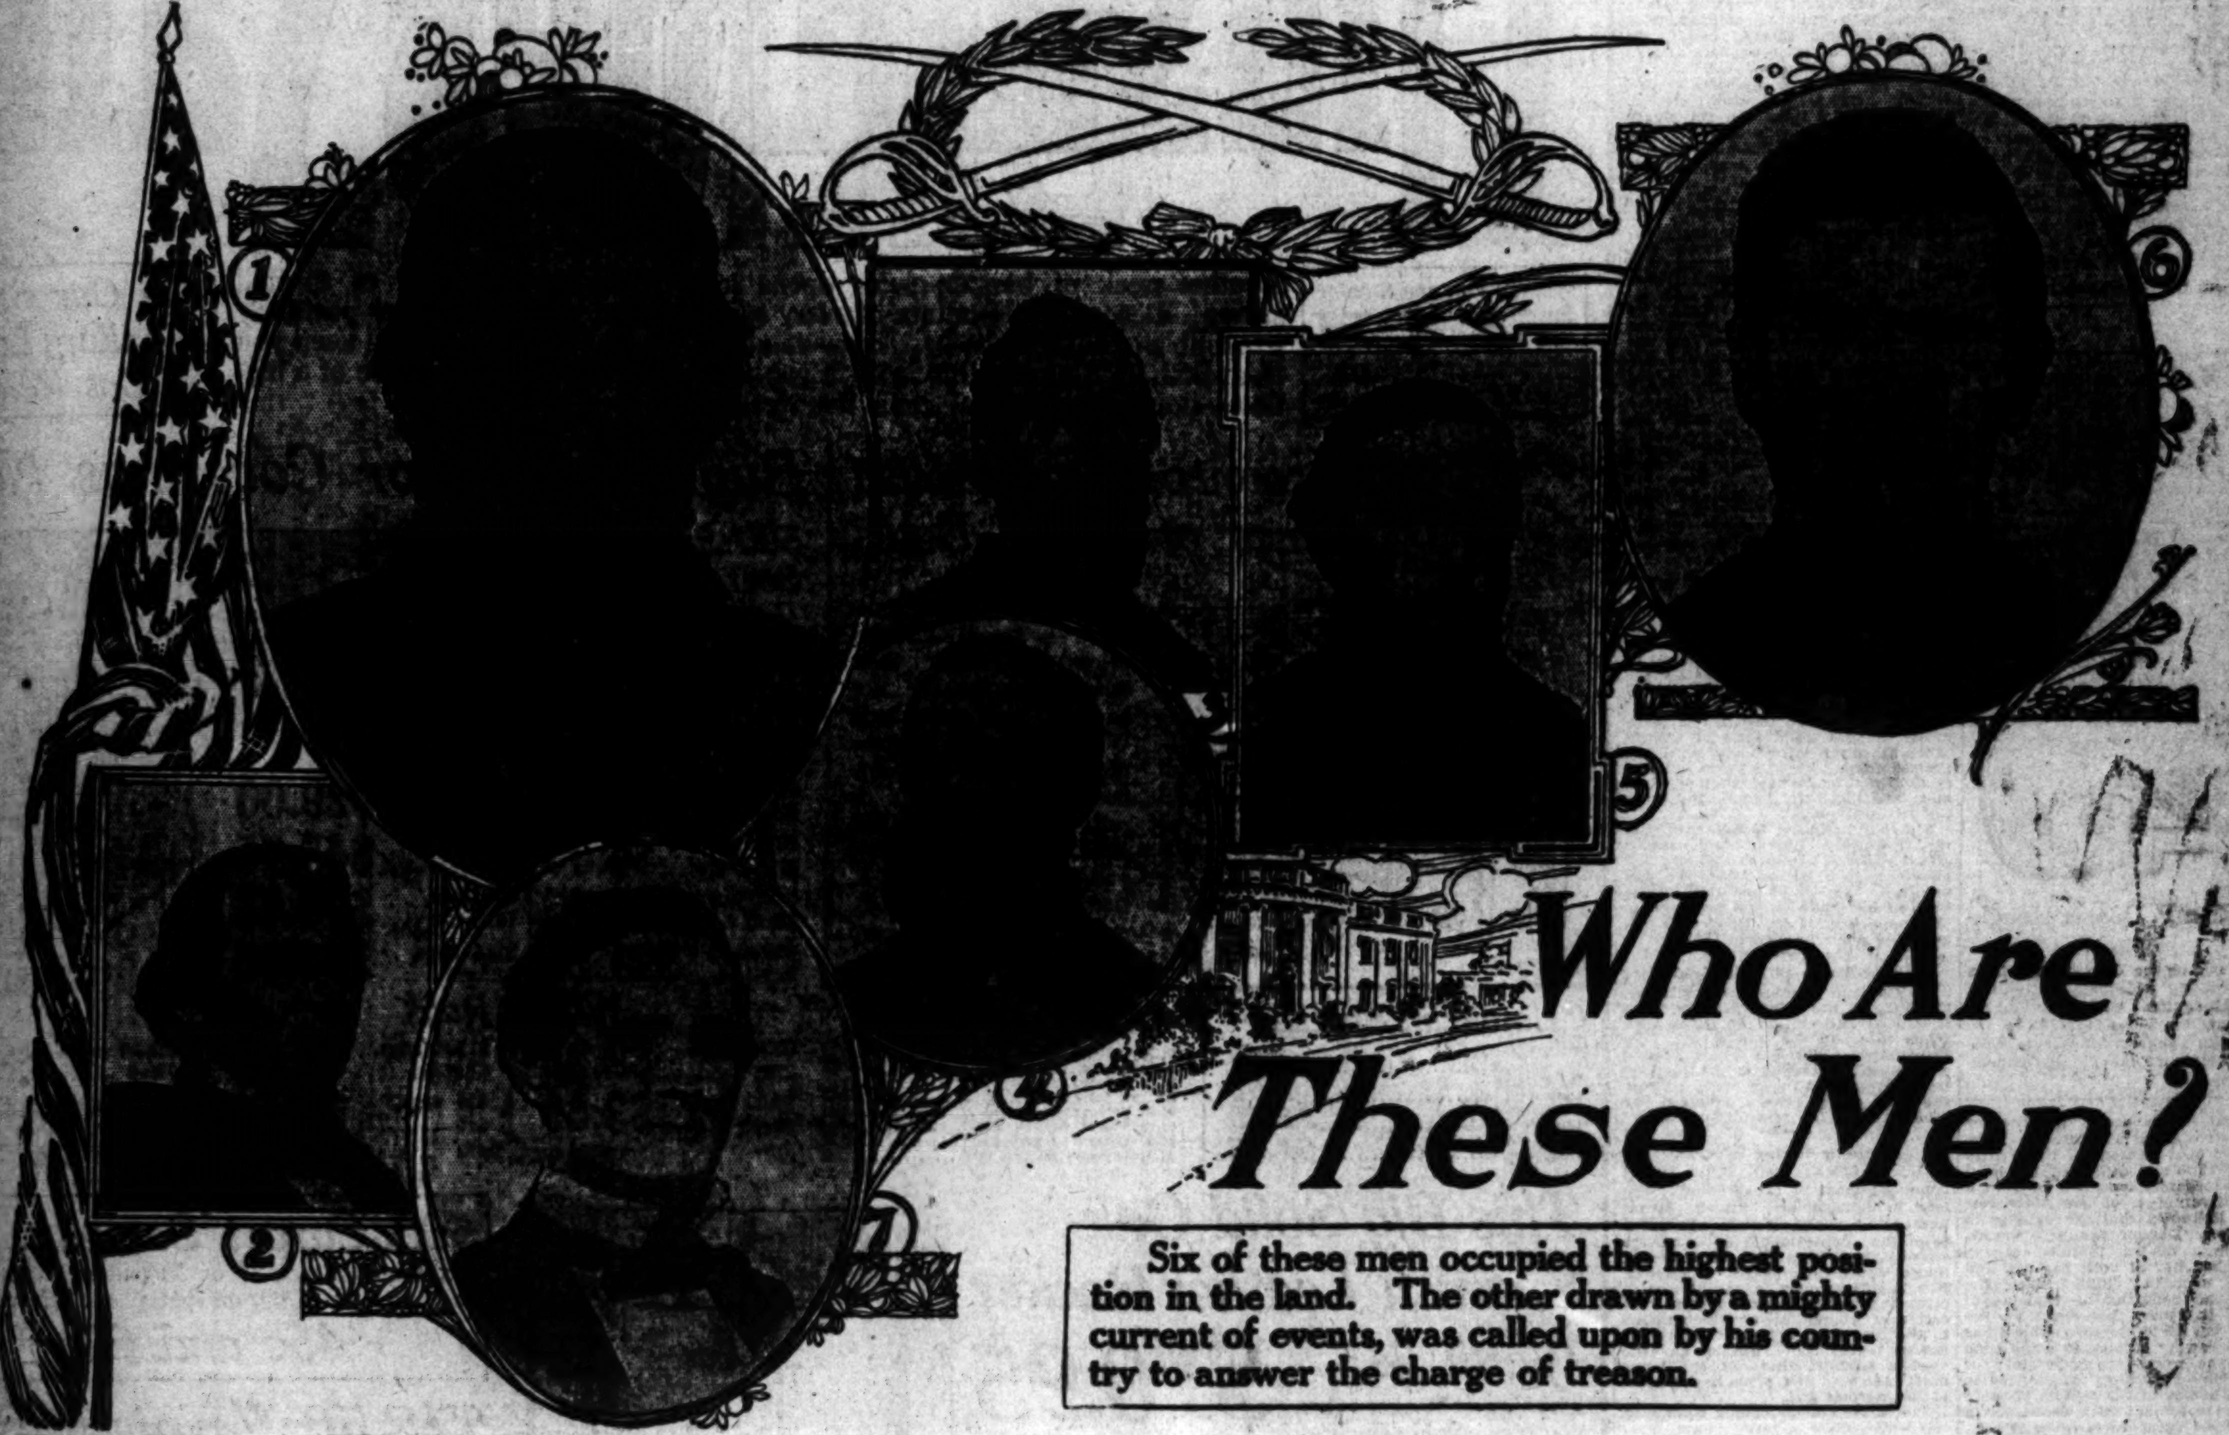
Maxim Gorki continues to send out from Capri fulminating attacks upon modern Russian literature. He says that the living Russian writers are mostly hooligans and rascals of the pens. Gorki here falls foul of his best friend, Leonid Andreyeff. The debasement of Russian literature, he says, is best shown by the fact that a certain writer exalts Judas [illegible] as "A misunderstood brother," and calls Judas's suicide "An imperial sunset." The author of the play, "Judas Iscariot," in which the great betrayer appears as "a misunderstood brother," is none other than Andreyeff.

Frans Wedekind is using the [illegible] and the stage to fight his private quarrels. He is appearing at Reinhardt's Deutsches Theater in his new piece, "The Satire of Satires." In it he lets himself go at the weekly Simplicissimus, the famous comic journal which represents so fiercely and brutally the discontent of progressive Germans. In this piece appear the staff of Simplicissimus in unmistakable guise. The publisher is represented as a bloodsucker and [illegible] and the contributors as half [illegible] or rascals. There is only one respectable character, a certain [illegible] weck, who is intended for Wedekind himself. The first two acts, with their sulphurous humor, had success, but the general effect was flat.

Tolstoy's name continues to dominate Russia's literary chronicle. The dispute about the Tolstoy manuscripts in the Moscow Historical Museum goes on. Tolstoy's daughter, Countess Alexandra, applied to Count [illegible] off, the museum curator, asking him to hand out the papers, but [illegible] off declared that the question of ownership must first be judicially [illegible] Minister of Cults Casso upheld [illegible] batoff's decision. Countess Alexandra thereupon appealed to Czar Nicholas through Baron Budberg, chief of the Chancellory of Petitions. She received the reply if no agreement was come to between the Countess Alexandra and her mother, the question must be settled by the ordinary courts. The daughter agrees to arbitration, but the mother refused. Such a lawsuit, says the Retch, will be a public scandal.

Germany and Russia are at last about to conclude a general copyright convention for literature and art. It will have important results for both sides. Haiti, Tunis, Japan and China have all joined the [illegible] copyright convention, but Russia has so far kept out. Once—for twenty-five years—she had a copyright convention with France; but when it expired she refused to renew it. In 1904, when Russia concluded commercial treaties with France and Germany, she undertook to enter into negotiations. The proposed convention is being drafted by the Assistant Minister of Justice Verevkin.

There is much feeling about it in Russia. As a whole Russia stands to lose. At present only two or three of her authors are translated into foreign languages, and these get no payment. But every year thousands of novels, and scientific and technical works are translated into Russian and are sold cheaply because no royalties have been paid to the author. Russian publishers and translators, as well as the reading public, benefit. The copyright convention will put an end to that.



Who Are These Men?

Six of these men occupied the highest position in the land. The other drawn by a mighty current of events, was called upon by his country to answer the charge of treason.

THESE pictures turn backward life's pages fifty years. Here you can see Gen. U. S. Grant, as he looked before the first of his great victories. Five others were also Civil War Soldiers who later became U. S. Presidents. The seventh is Jefferson Davis, as he appeared on the eve of Antietam, eighteen months after being unanimously elected chief executive of the Confederate States of America. These interesting war-time portraits of famous men are among the Long-Lost Brady Photographs brought to this city by this newspaper. They appear throughout the sixteen sections which complete the series, each photograph being further vitalized by a descriptive history of the persons represented and their deeds at critical moments.

From Army To White House

GRANT—(1)

Grant's early career is a pathetic story known to all—how he seemed destined to become one of life's failures, how his offers of assistance in '61 were treated at Springfield, Ill., how finally he demonstrated his efficiency in the humble position of drillmaster and won a colonelcy in June, 1861. Then came promotion to brigadier-general in August, with the command of the Military District of Cairo. Here he lost no time in proceeding against the Confederates in Kentucky. His plans culminated in the brilliant capture of Fort Donelson in February, 1862, for which he was made Major-General of volunteers.

His next great exploit was the Vicksburg campaign, May-July, 1863. He emerged a major-general in the regular army. The following October he replaced Rosecrans at Chattanooga and his strategic efforts resulted in the sweeping of Bragg and his army from that important point by the end of November.

Grant was now recognized as the most able leader of the Union forces. On the 2nd of March, 1864, he was appointed lieutenant general and placed at the head of all the Federal armies. He was President of the United States 1869-1877.

JOHNSON—(2)

Andrew Johnson began his struggle to preserve the Union before a drop of blood was shed. He labored with intense ardor in the Senate to save his state of Tennessee to the Union. For this he was driven into exile by his fellow-citizens.

President Lincoln gave him a commission of brigadier-general of volunteers on March 4, 1862, and made him Military Governor of Tennessee. Although the glory of the battle was never for him, during his tenure of office he was constantly in as much personal danger as if he were leading his troops against the Confederate lines. After two years of most difficult and trying work, he succeeded in electing state and local officers for the seceded commonwealth—a bloodless conquest, but one that had great influence in quelling the mighty struggle in the west. He was President of the United States 1865-1869.

HAYES—(3)

Rutherford B. Hayes rose to be major in the Twenty-third Ohio Volunteer Infantry in June, 1861. His conspicuous bravery was noted at once. He received the first of four wounds at the Battle of South Mountain in September, 1862. The following month he was Colonel of his regiment. His most remarkable deeds of valor were performed during the West Virginia campaign in the autumn of 1864. At Fisher's Hill and Cedar Creek, he fairly amazed his superior officers. After the latter battle General Crook impetuously addressed him, "Colonel, from this day you will be a brigadier-general"—and true enough, for when the commission shortly reached the gallant soldier it bore the historic date of Oct. 19, 1864. He was President of the United States 1877-1881.

GARFIELD—(4)

James A. Garfield's generalship commissions likewise fix his most conspicuous military services in the great conflict. He had risen to be Colonel of the Forty-second Ohio Volunteer Infantry in November, 1861. On January 10, 1862, he defeated General Humphrey Marshall at Middle Creek and put an end to the Confederate uprising in Eastern Kentucky. This had a material effect in preserving the state to the Union. The brigadier-generalship which followed was most deservedly won. The following year Rosecrans made him chief of his staff.

In the hasty retreat to Chattanooga, Rosecrans sent Garfield to Rossville, and thence the chief of staff sent word to the commanding general that Thomas was holding the left. Garfield now followed Granger to the front, riding in constant danger from Confederate bullets. But he knew his duty was to keep Rosecrans informed of the progress of the fight. It was a most brave and meritorious deed and it brought him the commission of major-general of volunteers. The young soldier never had a chance to command in his new rank. Fifteen months before he had been elected a member of Congress, and President Lincoln, knowing his talents as a legislator, earnestly requested that he now take his seat, to which plea he yielded, and left the inspiring scenes of action for the routine of legislative affairs at Washington. His brief term of office as President began in March 1881, and ended with his assassination in September.

HARRISON—(5)

Benjamin Harrison entered the Federal Army as Second Lieutenant of the Seventieth Indiana Volunteer Infantry on July 14, 1862. By the month of August he had risen to a colonelcy. In this position he continued until the war was drawing to a close, but his merits and talents in the Atlantic campaign did not pass unobserved. He was made brigadier-general of volunteers on Jan. 23, 1863, for his ability and energy while in command of a brigade. Just twenty-six years later he became President.

McKINLEY—(6)

William McKinley was just over eighteen when he enlisted in the Twenty-third Ohio Volunteer Infantry. This was in 1861. His conduct at Antietam brought the boy the proud distinction of a second lieutenancy. After Kernstown, July 25, 1864, he was promoted to be Captain of Company G in his regiment of which one of his predecessors-to-be in the presidential chair, Rutherford B. Hayes, was colonel. The title of Major, by which McKinley is best remembered by the American people, was one of brevet, conferred on March 14, 1865. When mustered out of the service the following July, this capable young soldier was acting assistant adjutant-general on General S.S. Carroll's staff.

Forty-two years later McKinley became the twenty-sixth American President. Four years later, the assassin's bullet found the mark the ball of lead at Antietam had missed.

THIS paper has entered into a great National publishing alliance, whose object is to place in every American home the best possible memento of the Civil War—as an education in patriotism and also in order to celebrate fittingly the semi-centennial of that momentous period.

We have secured the rights in this city for the distribution of the Long-Lost and we will supply every reader of this paper with one of the complete sections of this monumental work for only ten cents and the coupon.

A thousand books could not tell you as much about the Civil War, or the price that was paid, or the type of men who paid the price, as do these photographs.

In Brady's photographs you not only see the portraits of those famous men who later became our Presidents, but you see the portraits of the great Civil War detectives, the Secret Service agents, the intrepid scouts, the daring spies, the brave generals and the soldiers in their command.

You can see the picture of one woman after another who voluntarily risked ignominious death, time and again. You can see faces alight with youth and beauty—and yet you read that these girls in quest of the information that their general so desperately needed, risked detection, and the instant, nameless execution which would follow it, by entering into the enemy's lines.

These pictures of Brady's tell the intimate story of the war. They tell of the drummer boys and water boys and the many boys who got into the army by swearing they were of age. They tell many a pathetic story of the death of these boys.

You can see the postoffice in the fields, how the men sent their letters, how they received them, of welcome news from home.

The pictures speak of the affection of Grant, Lee, Sherman and McClellan for their men—and the daring heroism of officers and privates in uniforms of blue and gray.

The photographs that Brady took bring you back to the days of '61. You see the volunteers, just enlisted standing erect and proud beneath their flag. You see the hopeful Southern recruits drilling in homespun and "jeans"; the Corinth battlements; the wide-trampled fields of Gettysburg. They take you in the huddled Petersburg trenches—show you everything from Sumter to Appomattox.

These thrilling pictures tell more clearly than a whole library of statistical works, the dangers and uncertainties from which our nation was saved by the fight to a finish in '65—and you owe it to yourself and to your children to secure every one of the 16 Sections of "The Civil War Through the Camera."

We are proud of this opportunity to distribute this priceless collection of Civil War Photographs and delighted to present them to everyone—who applies promptly. Ten cents, to cover necessary expenses, and the coupon brings you any one section. There are no other conditions whatever.

These long-lost photographs of Brady's, complete with the war-time photographs of our presidents, illustrating Elson's History of the Civil War, belong in every home.

They are the only real records of a real war. Brady, a pupil of Daguerre and one of the first American photographers, conceived the idea of photographing the Civil War from the first scenes to its sorrowful close.

Hardly had the echoes of the fight at Sumter died away than he secured permission from the Government to carry his camera into the lines. With a corps of able assistants, he hurried to all points of activity and not only caught with his wonderful lens the very engagements themselves, but he photographed as well every Commander, focused his camera upon the armies in action, brought it into the hospitals, the prisons, trained it upon the gunboats, the forts. He was everywhere. He saw everything.

No history can tell you one-tenth as much, for no historian witnessed what Brady's camera saw, no combatant could be everywhere.

Lost for fifty years these magic plates have been discovered in perfect condition and now the world at last knows the real truth of war—the real truth of the greatest of all wars.

WOMEN'S WORK, WOMEN'S CLUBS

BY SYDNEY FORD.

THAT a survivor of the ill-fated Donner party, which crossed the continent to California in 1846 is now a resident of Los Angeles, may be a surprise to many citizens. That she has just published a thrilling account of that famous expedition in the shape of a book that leading reviewers have pronounced a human document of the greatest importance to western history is of further interest, and that she is the daughter of George Donner, leader of the expedition, stamps the story with an authenticity that is undeniable and furnishes a climax to the interesting chain of biography of this remarkable woman, Mrs. Eliza Donner Houghton, wife of the well-known pioneer, S. O. Houghton.

Mrs. Eliza P. Donner Houghton,

Whose book on the Donner Expedition is attracting widespread attention. Mrs. Houghton, who is a pioneer resident of Los Angeles, is the surviving daughter of George Donner, captain of the ill-fated expedition.

For years the Houghtons have been prominent in the social and literary life of Southern California. Mrs. Houghton is a member of the Friday Morning Club and other leading local women's organizations, but only to a comparatively few of the older settlers is it known that she belongs to the famous Donner family. A reticence, born of the terrible tragedy that robbed her of both parents, and stamped upon her childish mind the horror and suffering of that awful journey, has made her silent on the subject, but all these years there has been a growing resolve to some time tell to the world the true story of that colony of pioneers who left comfortable homes in the Middle West to cross the continent with ox teams in an overland caravan—a train of canvas-covered wagons crawling across prairies and desert, fording streams and scaling the mountains.

"Out of the sunshine and shadows of sixty-eight years," says Mrs. Houghton, "come these personal recollections of California—of that period when American civilization first crossed its mountain heights and entered its overland gateways. I seem now to hear the tread of many feet, the lowing of many herds; and I know they are the re-echoing sounds of the sturdy pioneer homeseekers. Travel-stained and weary, yet triumphant and happy, most of them reach their various destinations, and their trying experiences and valorous deeds are quietly interwoven with the general history of the State. Not so, however, the Donner party, of which my father was captain. Like fated trains of other epochs whose privations, sufferings and self-sacrifices have added renown to colonization movements and served as danger signals to later wayfarers, that party began its journey with a song of hope, and within the first milestone of the promised land ended it with a prayer for help—help for the helpless in the storms of the Sierra Nevada Mountains."

"I, a child then, scarcely 4 years of age, was too young to do more than watch and suffer with other children the lesser privations of our snow-beleaguered camp, and with them survive, because the parents hungered and died that the children might live. Scenes of loving care and tenderness were emblazoned on my mind. Scenes of anguish, pain and dire distress were branded on my brain during days, weeks and months of famine—famine which reduced the party of eighty-one souls to forty-five survivors—before the heroic relief men from the settlements could accomplish their mission of humanity. Who can wonder that tenderest recollections and keenest heartaches silenced the quivering lips of the survivors for many years?"

Now, blessed in the sunshine of peace and happiness, this little girl, after a life of the most romantic and remarkable experiences, in her sunset years, fulfills the resolve made in childhood and gives to the world the story as a mark of filial love and duty to the members of the party. All through the years she has been collecting valuable data and accumulating material which, added to her personal recollections, combine to make a volume of the most absorbing interest written in a fascinating style of simple narration of facts depicting life in California settlements during the period from 1846 to 1861, which covers the gold excitement of '49, the arrival of the first steamship through the Golden Gate, and the inauguration of the famous pony express, the coming of the first rider being graphically described.

The book is bound to awaken the deepest interest, not only among California pioneers, but those of the present generation on account of its vivid human portrayal of those days of romance which form so interesting a period in the history of our State. It is profusely illustrated and covers some 400 pages of as fascinating history of the Golden State as has ever been given to the public.

Where They Can Whoop.

At the instance of a woman physician, the New York health department is now on a still hunt for a discarded ferryboat. This woman, Dr. Josephine Baker, who is the head of the child hygiene bureau of New York, has evolved an original and sane idea for the treatment of whooping cough where the little victims can be segregated and at the same time have plenty of fresh air, pure milk and fun. She suggested to the health department of Gotham the simple expedient of utilizing a discarded ferryboat, tying it up at a pier along the city water front and dedicating it as a floating "whoopers' retreat," where mothers, instead of journeying to the beaches with children afflicted with the malady and thereby coming in contact with other passengers and so spreading the disease, can anchor themselves and their offspring at this floating hospital and milk station, where the little folks can get plenty of oxygen and "whoop it out." The New York health department has fifty-five milk stations on land, but this will be the first one afloat.

A Magnificent Memorial.

The women of Colorado are planning to erect a memorial to the late Mrs. Sarah Platt Decker in the form of a woman's building at the State University. The movement had already been started by the alumnae of the university of which Mrs. Decker was a member, and she was very enthusiastic about it. The building will be for the use of needy women students at the university. Mrs. Dewey C. Bailey, president of the Denver Woman's Club, and Mrs. James D. Whitmore, past president, are active in forwarding the memorial movement, of which Mrs. Whitmore says: "I know that its erection to the memory and in honor of the life and work of Sarah Platt Decker would be the most fitting and beautiful tribute within the power of the womanhood of Colorado to bestow."

Mother First—Poet After.

The death, on July 8, at Asolo, Italy, of the son of Robert and Elizabeth Barrett Browning, recalls what his mother, the gifted poet, wrote to Leigh Hunt when her boy was 8 years old, in response to a letter of appreciation of her "Aurora." She said:

"You are aware that I am more proud of that child than of twenty 'Auroras'—even after Leigh Hunt has praised them. He is 8 years old, but reads English, Italian, French, German, and plays the piano—and he is the sweetest child."

The boy, Robert Wiedmann Barrett Browning, did not inherit his gifted parents' genius for poetry, but he did have a genius for music and painting. He was 63 years old at the time of his death, which occurred in the home his father was planning to complete when he died in 1887.

Should These Be "Oslerized?"

A Michigan woman has just graduated from the Grand Rapids High School at the age of 50. She now plans to study for a degree at the University of Chicago. Last year a woman of 77 attended one of the public night schools in Brooklyn and, at the close of the season, received her diploma with the rest of the class.

Domestic Science Popular.

It is significant that, at the recent commencement of the Woman's College in Jacksonville, Ill., a larger number of young women graduated from the department of domestic science than from that of fine arts, music, expression, letters, or science. Nor is this proportion exceptional in other institutions for the higher education of women, all of which points to the fact that, notwithstanding the larger outlook of women on the world's horizon, that of the home must ever hold first place in the heart of the normal girl.

The above college, which claims, by the way, quite a large number of graduates and former students in Los Angeles, is in the midst of a campaign for raising money for additional endowment, $55,000 of which has been subscribed.

That Carping Colorado Critic.

The defense of Miss Helen Gould anent the idiotic utterance of a Colorado preacher advocating the banishment to the waste places of the earth of all men and women who have refrained from committing matrimony, impelled me to just casually glance over a few—a very few—of the things Miss Gould has accomplished in spite of the fact that she hasn't a husband.

It would almost seem as if a woman who had contributed $125,000 in cold cash to the War Department of the United States, had built a $450,000 Sailors' Home; had established and maintains a cooking and sewing school for poor girls and women, 420 of whom received diplomas last year; has built and maintains a home for sick and crippled children, and of whom a certain United States admiral has said: "If the men on the American battleships had their way, there would be a statue of Helen Gould on every fighting craft that flies the Stars and Stripes"—I say, it almost seems as if such a woman had a right to live in a civilized community, doesn't it?

The beauty of Miss Gould's gifts and philanthropies is that each one carries her heart in it—the warm heart of a loving, womanly woman who was so moved by the knowledge that one of the chief troubles of the "jackies" was that when ashore they had no home but the saloon, that she put approximately half a million dollars into the finest sailors' clubhouse in the world. She has endowed cots in a children's home for "the most uninteresting babies;" she turned her Fifth-avenue mansion into an emergency hospital at the time of the terrible Windsor Hotel fire in her neighborhood. She loves humanity and her slogan is "I want to be of use in the world."

Then there is Jane Addams and scores of other noble unmarried women I might name, who are doing the world's work, largely because they have no domestic or marital ties. The pages of history are resplendent with such names as Mary Lyons, educator; Louisa M. Alcott, author; Ida Lewis, life-saver; Frances E. Willard and—but what's the use in filling this column with the names of the splendid women who have made glorious records, and concerning whom no one ever thinks of as married or unmarried, but simply that they have lived, and worked, and accomplished results that will tell for time and eternity.

Such carping critics as the Rev. Huffer might better be banished to "the waste places of the earth."

Content.

Sweet are the thoughts that savor of content—
The quiet mind is richer than a crown;
Sweet are the nights in careless slumber spent—
The poor estate scorns fortune's angry frown:
Such sweet content, such minds, such sleep, such bliss,
Beggars enjoy, when princes oft do miss.

The homely house that harbors quiet rest,
The cottage that affords no pride nor care,
The mean that 'grees with country music best,
The sweet consort of mirth and music's fare,
Obscured life sets down a type of bliss:
A mind content both crown and kingdom is.

PROF. C. IRVIN ALTHOUSE,

NOTED ASTROLOGER AND PALMIST OF NATIONAL FAME AND REPUTATION.

STUDIO PARLORS, 539½ S. BROADWAY.

A RESIDENT OF LOS ANGELES 25 YEARS.

PROF. ALTHOUSE is an experienced practitioner in the science of modern ASTROLOGY, by which he has made many REMARKABLE PREDICTIONS. The horoscope shows the powerful influence of the planets in all affairs of life. It shows diseases, deaths, love and marriage, financial affairs, talents, environments, about children, relatives, when and where to travel, what to seek or to avoid, when in danger of losses, troubles, etc., etc., also your good periods coming—giving dates of these events for the future.

PROF. ALTHOUSE read E. H. Sothern, Nat Goodwin, Mary Mannering, Gadski, Admiral Schley, David Starr Jordan, ex-Gov. Pardee, ex-Senator Clark, Gen. Chaffee, Edison, Sousa, Modjeska, Julia Marlowe, Anna Held, Jefferson, Capt. Hobson, Lillian Russell, Calve, Admiral Evans, H. E. Huntington, De Wolf Hopper, Maxine Elliott, etc.

PROF. ALTHOUSE'S SKILLED WORK with his trained judgment must in no wise be classed with that of other readers. Therefore do not waste your money on the idiotic advice and warning of HUMBUG astrologers, palmists, psychics—those doing dishonest work.

DR. J. A. LARSEN writes: "I want to say that your reading was the most satisfactory thing I have ever had in my life. I know a great deal about these sciences and I consider your work as the most THOROUGH and reliable of any reader in the United States."

A DISQUISITION ON SLANG.

The Etymology of Many "Americanisms," Hundreds of Which May Be Traced from un-American Sources.

BY MAJOR BEN C. TRUMAN.

[Second and final paper.]

"SHE is a daisy," as respectfully applied to a prepossessing young woman of pretty ways and unimpeachable freshness of blooming girlhood, or other young woman of petite compactness, and tidiness of maner and buoyancy of spirit and disposition; or "You are a daisy," as bestowed on some fellow who has elicited by his redolent personality this redundance of expression from an ardent admirer, has been considered polite American slang, and was first used in our country about 1870 by members of the dramatic profession in New York. No American nor European slang dictionary had presented the expression up to 1890, and Webster has not yet adopted it; but Maitland says, "Daisy; a young girl." Yet while going through Dickens's novels for the third time, for the express purpose of securing all the cant and slang words and phrases that seemed to me to be intended as such by their author, or that have been evolved into American slang, I discovered that "You are a daisy" is used by the distinguished novelist in "David Copperfield" in the sense of calling a person a daisy in the way to express admiration and at the time to laugh at one's credulity. For Steerforth says to young Copperfield: "David, my daisy, you are so innocent of the world. Let me call you my daisy, as it is so refreshing to find one in these corrupt days so innocent and so unsophisticated. My dear Copperfield, the daisies of the field are not fresher than you." "David Copperfield" was written in twenty different parts during 1849 and 1850, and first appeared as a novel in November, 1850.

"That's too thin," became current as American slang in 1870, and has generally been credited to Alexander H. Stephens of Georgia, who in a speech in Congress, in 1870, said: "Mr. Speaker, the gentleman's remarks are gratuitous assertions made up of whole cloth; and cloth, sir, so gauzy and so thin that it will not hold water. It is entirely too thin, sir." By the way, it will be noticed that the little Georgian, in a sentence of thirty-three words, made use of two other slang phrases—"made up of whole cloth" and "will not hold water." But the term "too thin" made current by Mr. Stephens did not originate with him, and may be traced back to Sakespeare, who says, in the fifth act of "Henry VIII," "You were ever good at sudden commendations, Bishop of Winchester. But know I come not to hear such flattery now, and in my presence. They are too thin, and bare to hide offenses." Later (in 1751) the phrase appeared in Smollet's novel of "Peregrine Pickle," when the hero suddenly informs Amelia that he is going abroad, and when the tears gushed into her eyes and she was at great pains to conceal her grief by observing that the tea was so scalding hot as to make her eyes water. "This pretext," says Smollet, in all seriousness, "was too thin to impose upon her lover or deceive the observations of Sophy." Later still (1820,) "Christopher North," in "Noctes Ambroisanae," makes one of his characters say, in answer to some far-fetched prevarication: "Oh, that's too thin." No European slang dictionaries note these fact; but Bartlett and Maitland, the American slang lexicographers, credit Shakespeare as the origin, and state that the Bard used it, as we do today, as much as to say: "You cannot deceive me," or "That's too transparent."

The term "To roast" is out-and-out American slang, and came into general use as signifying a scathing criticism in 1890, and first appeared in the New York Times, it is believed. Its use in general; and the term may be heard in club, on the curb, and elsewhere daily, and is a good instance of the vitality of an expressive term as well as of the fact that often what we call slang is really very ancient language. In press and literary circles, in particular, we have heard a great deal about "roasting." But if you pick up Caroline Fox's "Memories of Old Friends," a book published lately in England, but written all the way from 1835 to 1871, you will find this expression, in a note made of a visit to Mrs. Carlyle which elsewhere bears internal evidence of being written not later than 1850: "I don't think she roasted a single soul—or even body—she talked in a rather melancholy way of herself and of life in general, professing that it was only the faith that all things are well put together that prevents our sending to the nearest chemist's for six-penny worth of arsenic, but now one just endures it while it lasts, and that is all we can do." "To roast," at that time, seems to have meant oftener to ridicule or poke broad fun than it did to "scathe." But it is apparent that Caroline Fox used the word exactly as it is current slang today among literary and theatrical people throughout the United States. The London slang dictionary, published in 1867, says to roast or to "expose a person to a running fire of jokes at his expense from a whole company, while quizzing is done by a single person only." Maitland defines roast "to quizz, to cod, or josh, by keeping up newspaper slang, an exposure or una succession of satirical jokes; in ster nor Worcester, has yet recogfavorable criticism." Neither Webnized its adoption.

"I don't think," is one of the newest and one of the most catchable slang phrases out, although it can never become of polite use. It is heard more from department-store men and women, telephone and waiter girls, candy-shop cashiers and second-rate stenographers, and others of mediocre faculties, whom it enables to pose, by its "fly" use, as quite cunning and worldly-wise. Only a few days ago, while a mother of two little crying children was chastising them corporeally and making them howl more vociferously, a shop girl on the opposite side of a Maple-avenue car removed her chewing gum from one side of her mouth to the other and remarked to her frizzled chum: "All the comforts of a home—I don't think." As strange as it may seem to many who have heard this expression only a few years, I am enabled to trace it back to "Tom Brown," that famous English schoolboy, who remarked to his friend, "Scud" East, that a certain "fag," who swore tremendously, under the forcible detention by Brown and East, was "a nice, well-brought-up boy—I don't think." "Tom Brown at Oxford" was written in 1823.

"Dude," an American slang word which came into use about 1880, and passed away almost entirely before 1900, and meant to define an over-dressed and underbrained young man, has been credited by Brewer's Phrase Book to Hermann Oelrichs, a former New York and San Francisco clubman, who married Tessie Fair and a dozen or more of "Slippery Jim's" millions some twenty or more years ago. Oelrichs, himself, once informed Ed Townsend and other members of the Bohemian Club of San Francisco that he and another member of the Union Club of New York were one day looking from a window and saw an over-dressed mincing little fellow passing and they together hummed an accompaniment to the youth's walk, thus: "Du-da-de, du-du-du-de," and that then he remarked: "Good enough; dude is the proper name for it." I have been informed, however, that the word as slang first appeared in Putnam's Magazine in February, 1876. It undoubtedly came from the old English word "duds," in earlier times spelled "dudes." Shakespeare, in the "Merry Wives of Windsor," writes of a "bucket of dudes," meaning a basketful of clothes ready for washing. Thackeray writes of one of his characters: "Her dresses were wonderful, her bonnets marvelous. Few women could boast such dudes." It is obvious that the latter-day slang word has to do with clothes, and yet Oelrichs's story need not be disbelieved; although, of course, it may have been made up to fit, which it does, cleverly. Shortly after the use of the word "dude," "dudine" appeared as a term of contempt or ridicule for a little overdressed young woman. But the word was infelicitous and far-fetched, and "died a-bornin'." It may be observed that the passing of the word dude was consequent upon the passing of the thing called dude. Apropos, there were many stories current during the days of this character, one of which was as follows: "Pa!" exclaimed a little chap, to his father; "does God make the dudes?" "Yes, my son," was the reply. "Well, God likes to have a little fun, Himself, once in a while, don't he?" added the child, laughing.

There were few American soldiers or sailors in the "good old days" when "grog" was provided as a ration that had ever been informed of or cared regarding the etymology of the word; and few others were aware that the word grog was an abbreviation of the name of a kind of cloth worn at one time by an admiral of the British navy—the interesting story of which runs about as follows: Until the time of Admiral Vernon, the British sailors had been served with a daily allowance of brandy or rum not mixed with water; but after a while this plan was found to be attended with inconvenience and the admiral commanded that the spirits be mixed with water before being passed among the men, which innovation gave great offense to many of the hardy ones who preferred their liquors raw; the result being that Vernon became exceedingly unpopular. To add to this the admiral, when taciturn or gloomy, often paced the decks covered with an immense grogery coat, and this resulted in the sailors nicknaming him, "Old Grog," and, thus, the name of grog at last became the slang term applied to any drink which contained liquor, and is in constant use at present.

The phrase, "Rule the roost," (or "Ruled the roost,") which is defined as an Americanism by a number of authors, may be traced back to "New Books on Spirituall Physik," published in 1555, thus: "Steune Gardener, an under cooke, and allowed by Kynge Henry the Eyght to be a master cooke for a longe tyme, 'ruled the rooste' as boldly and as saucely as hys master dyd before hym." "Doun on the nail" is old English slang, and was used, as in our country, for a cash payment; and, according to Notes and Queries, was first used in a parliamentary deed of King Robert the Bruce, dated July 15, 1326.

The slang word "lobster" came into American use about thirty years ago, and, according to the latest edition of Webster's Dictionary, one meaning of the word is "a gullible, [illegible] or undesirable fellow." But the word is not an Americanism, as it was a favorite term of abuse among English men of Queen Elizabeth's day, and old English actors denounced the call boy or prompter who failed to attend to his duties as a lobster. Some writers have thought that the word was first applied to Englishmen with their red faces. It was also applied to soldiers under Cromwell. Lord Clarendon, in his history of the civil war in England, explains that the word lobster was bestowed on the Roundhead cuirassiers "because of the bright iron shells with which they were covered." Afterward British soldiers in their red uniforms were often called lobsters, and sometimes "boiled lobsters," in contradistinction to the London policemen in blue uniforms, who were frequently referred to as "raw lobsters." often claiming either authorship or first parentage, as may have seemed the happier plan. Beaumont and Fletcher gave us "Diamond cut diamond;" Sheridan, "The soft impeachment;" Goldsmith, "The very pink of perfection;" Spencer, "A bold, bad man;" Tusser, "It is an ill wind turns none to good," now rendered "It is an ill wind that blows no one any good;" Mackintosh, in 1791, but generally attributed to Randolph, "Wise and masterly inactivity;" Goldsmith, "Ask me no questions and I'll tell you no fibs"—not lies; Butler, "Look before you ere you leap," now "Look before you leap"—an improvement; Nathaniel Lee, "When Greeks joined Greeks then was the tug-of-war," now "When Greek meets Greek then comes the tug-of-war"—much more euphonious; Washington Irving, "The almighty dollar;" Charles C. Pinckney, "Millions for defense, but not one cent for tribute;" Patrick Henry, "Gentlemen may cry peace! peace! but there is no peace!" paragraphed from Jeremiah, VIII, 2, "Peace, peace, when there is no peace." It was Thomson who originated "Teaching the young idea how to shoot," and Byron who wrote:

"Strange all this difference should be
'Twixt Tweedledum and Tweedledee."

"Holy" George Herbert was the author or compiler of many choice sayings, not a few of which have found their way into American and other slang dictionaries; among which are: "The wearer knows where the shoe pinches," "Little pitchers have wide ears," "It is poor sport that is not worth the candle," "God's mills grind slow, but sure," "Half the world knows not how the other half lives," "His bark is worse than his bite," "The burnt child dreads the fire," "The mill cannot grind with water that is past," "Whose house is of glass must not throw stones at another," "God comes to see without a bell," and "To a close-shorn sheep God gives wind without measure." The latter is probably the origin of the proverb "God tempers the wind to the shorn lamb," which has been often quoted as from the Bible, but occurs in Sterne's "Sentimental Journey," in the touching episode of "Poor Maria and her goat." Herbert also says "Man proposes; God disposes," but this was first said by Thomas a'Kempis.

A reporter on a local paper in New Jersey was talking with an employee of a meat-packing and tallow-rendering establishment that maintained an isolated plant on the meadows. The employee remarked that there was a portion of the plant from which the public and most of the employees were excluded. The newspaper man's curiosity was aroused and he visited the establishment and attempted, without success, to get into the prohibited portion of it. He reported his experience to one of the Federal pure-food men. This man was likewise denied access. He was, however, determined to obtain by stealth information that he was unable to get directly.

He called for another inspector and received a young Harvard graduate who was Irish and something of a mixer. This second inspector dressed like a pugugly and became a part of the life of the community. He found the employees of the packing-house to be as merry a gang of [illegible] as might be imagined. He spent his evenings with them in the cheap saloons and eventually got a job with them of driving the dead-horse wagon for the establishment.

This establishment purported to gather up the meat scraps from restaurants, free lunch establishments and whatever other places from which material furnishing tallow might be secured. Dead dogs, cats or horses, regardless of the complaints from which they died, were valuable material for this purpose. This material, in part at least, went into tallow which was exported and used in making candles. This sort of business is entirely legitimate.

As a side issue the establishment bought maimed and spavined horses and converted these into [illegible] horse, which was exported to [illegible], where horse meat is regarded as perfectly good food. This business might have been entirely legitimate, too, had only healthy animals been used. The inspectors suspected that other than healthy creatures found their way into these consignments of meat and this was the matter the proof of which they wanted to establish.

"Letting the cat out of the bag" has been claimed by many lexicographers as an Americanism, but it can be found in any old English slang dictionary, and is not an Americanism at all. "Going the whole hog" is pronounced by Bartlett as originating in New England, but it was a London shop expression in London at least 200 years before our revolutionary war, and pertained to the purchase of part or whole of the animal. "Pluck" was once a London butcher's slang expression for the united heart and lungs of a carcass (sometimes called "lights,") and was not recognized 200 years ago as the equivalent of courage, as determined by Walter Scott, who made an entry in his journal that [illegible] the word pluck had not lost its [illegible] character; but adds, on page [illegible] volume 2, "Want of that article [illegible] (blackguardedly called pluck [illegible] age) [illegible]

"In it," is common slang of many years from the London of [illegible]. Few days pass in any American [illegible] that the expression of "He's in it," or "He's not in it," may not be heard. Industrially speaking we constantly hear of the man "in it"—with both feet—or the [illegible] successful aspirant for some political appointment who "is not in it," [illegible] ing to those who are [illegible] same place, at least. Dickens used the term metaphorically or as [illegible] eral times in a number of [illegible]. Thus, in chapter XIX of "Oliver Twist," I find the following: "[illegible] old lady has had [illegible] year, and if you [illegible] 500 pound, they [illegible]" In "Bleak House," [illegible] is once or twice used, [illegible] however. But that [illegible] fallen back on for the [illegible] find this paragraph [illegible] ter XIV: "Though [illegible] Noah, Daniel and Job [illegible] they should deliver but their own souls by their [illegible]" This antedates Dickens at least [illegible] came to the attention Fact and Comment man a few which reveals one way in individuals might actively participate in a campaign to make the presentable. An owner in district, disgusted to find was the only man in a whole who had obeyed the clean up his vacant property, set about ascertaining the of every piece of weed- real estate in his block. Then down to the police station demanded that the department busy and make good its to enforce the order. result was, that a half-dozen vacant lot owners were to immediately clear their of weeds or have the city do charge the expense against the Five of the owners in question took heed, with the that the block in which the resides is at this moment most presentable in the district. it would be a good plan for public spirited citizen in the constitute himself a committee report on those of his neighbors who are falling to comply with the law. If everyone could get the results obtained by the tattler mentioned, this would soon be a much more presentable city than it now is.

Still Kicking.

Some excitement has been occasioned in the assessment district outlined by the Park Board for the proposed Silver Lake Parkway on account of the circulation of the report that the assessment for this highly-desirable improvement would amount to from $150 to $200 a lot. The short-sighted opponents of the parkway have even succeeded in securing a few signatures to protests against the project on the strength of these representations, or mis-representations, as they may more properly be called.

Now the Park Board itself is responsible for the statement that the assessments for the enterprise will average from $6.50 to $13 a lot, according to the region assessed. Many lots near the edge of the parkway will feel the expense to the tune of $25 a lot and in few instances will the assessment be higher than this. Owners of lots at the outer edge of the district will be required to pay over about $2 a lot. Many of the original protestants against the undertaking are beginning to realize the truth and are withdrawing their objections. It strikes the writer that what is most needed in the Silver Lake district is a campaign of enlightenment.

The kickers who feel that the creation of Silver Lake Parkway would be so much money wasted need only to study the situation a little to comprehend what it will mean to the city. Several new tracts, all of them prospering, have already been laid out in the northwest section in anticipation of the proposed improvement. Notable among these subdivisions may be mentioned Mabery Heights, Walbrook Park and Forest Park, all three tracts of considerable promise. Every dollar invested by the owners of these properties means dollars in value to every neighboring holding. It is as plain as elemental arthmetic.

The proposed creation of the Silver Lake Parkway is not the faddish idea of some city planner or the scheme of a realty crowd. The so-called Bimini slough winds its unsightly way from Silver Lake on the north past Sunset boulevard, on through the entire northwest portion of Los Angeles, to the very edge of Sunset Park and on along a beautiful portion of Sixth street to and beyond Vermont avenue. It is a disgrace to Los Angeles and has hampered and is today hampering the development of a vast area which should be one of the finest residential districts in the city.

The Park Commission declares that the conversion of this ugly slough into a positive city asset is the simplest thing in the world. "Condemn the whole slough, from Sixth street to Silver Lake for park purposes," says the commissioners; "plant a few thousand trees and shrubs, lay out parks and drives, drain the boggy places and construct a boulevard at the bottom of the ravine and, behold—Bimini slough will have been transformed into one of the most beautiful parkways in the United States."

And yet there are those who kick against the project, absolutely blind to the possibilities of the enterprise and to their own interests. It is time some of the property owners of the northwest were acquiring the spirit which is so characteristic of the wide awake dwellers in southwest Los Angeles.

BANKER BUYS ON MAIN.

Redlands Capitalist Exchanges Orange Groves for Downtown Holding in This City.

H. H. Ford, a Redlands capitalist and president of the Redlands National Bank, has just completed the purchase of a fifty-foot frontage at Nos 734-738 South Main street, in this city, at a given price of $140,000. The deal was handled through the agency of the Dunn-Albright-Ames Company, a new firm, which has offices both in Los Angeles and Redlands.

The property, which is improved with a one-story brick building, was sold by George E. Hart, who took as part payment two orange groves in the frostless district of Redlands, one of thirty acres and one of four acres. The thirty-acre grove is a full-bearing navel and valencia ranch and was taken in at a valuation of $75,000. The four-acre grove, which lies in the heart of the best residential section of Redlands, was priced at $9000 in the transaction.

NEW RECORD IN SIGHT.

July Now Certain to Be Greatest Month in History for Los Angeles Building Activities.

The record-breaking building valuation total of June will, it is now certain, be completely eclipsed by figures for the present month which bids fair to hold the construction laurels for some time time to come. From July 1 to July 26, inclusive, the chief inspector of buildings issued 1212 permits for new structures, the aggregate cost of which will be $2,630,625. To this total will be added the $700,000 outlay for the hotel building under way for E. P. Clark on the east side of Hill street, between Fourth and Fifth streets, the permit for which will probably be taken out by the architect, Harrison Albright, tomorrow.

The aggregate valuation for the month is certain to be in excess of $3,500,000, as compared with the $3,460,000 total of June. The record for the number of permits issued in a single month is also seriously threatened.

To date for the month 500 permits, representing a valuation of $1,095,479, have been issued for new private dwellings of one, one and a half and two stories. Following is the classified report for the month from July 1 to July 26, inclusively:

TRACT TO BE MARKETED.

Eighty-Acre Portion of Estate, Lands Adjoining Tropico, to Be Subdivided by Pasadena Capitalist.

An eighty-acre tract on Brand boulevard, lying just inside the city limits of Los Angeles and adjoining Tropico, has been purchased by Col. Frederick W. Paramore of Pasadena for a reported consideration of $150,000. The deal was handled by the firm of Franklin & Ridenbaugh, who will also have the sales agency for the property, which is to be immediately subdivided and improved for the market.

The tract is a part of the Richardson estate, being a portion of lands acquired by W. C. B. Richardson in 1864 and held intact until his death. The contract for the street work of the property has already been let and water and gas mains will be immediately laid. The subdivision will be known as the Atwater tract.

FINE APARTMENTS LEASED.

Up-to-Date, Fireproof Improvement at Seventeenth and Grand Secured by Tacoma Man for Long Term.

The leasing of the recently-completed Young apartments at the northwest corner of Seventeenth street and Grand avenue to R. L. Chapin, an experienced hotel man from Tacoma, Wash., is reported by E. M. Whilton, hotel broker, who had entire charge of the negotiations. The term of the lease is ten years, and the total rental is given at $175,000. Chapin is now installing the last of the furnishings, a portion of the building having already been occupied.

The Young apartment-house is the property of W. F. Young, and is one of the finest and most substantial structures of its kind on the Pacific Coast. It was planned by R. B. Young & Son and is of absolutely fireproof construction, being of the reinforced concrete type. The frontages are faced with pressed brick and the trim is of handsomely-moulded terra cotta. The building is five stories high over a full basement, and fronts 141 feet on Seventeenth street by sixty-one feet on Grand avenue.

The building contains 170 rooms, divided into two, three and four-room apartments, each with bath, dressing-room, disappearing bed and modernly-appointed kitchen. The finish throughout is in hard woods. The lobby is finished in marble, tile and mahogany. The fixtures throughout are of special make.

The basement contains the largest apartment-house ballroom in Los Angeles, together with billiard and pool rooms, all richly finished in mahogany. A large sum is being expended in the furnishings for the place.

OUTS HIS VACATION SHORT.

Well-to-Do Porterville Young Man Is Arrested Here for Grand Larceny—Taken by Surprise.

Lawrence J. White, a well-to-do young man of Porterville, who came to Los Angeles a few days ago with his wife to enjoy a vacation with his brothers, C. E. and E. F. White, proprietors of the Model Vulcanizing Works, No. 1160 South Olive street, was arrested yesterday by Detectives McKenzie and King on a telegraphic warrant. It was sent from Visalia by Sheriff W. W. Collins. White is wanted on a grand larceny charge, according to the telegram.

White professed to be much surprised when the detectives found him in his brothers' establishment and told him he was under arrest.

"I haven't the faintest idea in the world what they want me for," he said. "I have not stolen anything. When I get back home some one will suffer for this."

The brothers said that Lawrence is worth at least $20,000, and are also at a loss to understand why he should be arrested. Although the young man said he is able and willing to give bail, the detectives told him they had no alternative but to lock him up. He was taken to the Central Station and Sheriff Collins notified of his arrest. White's brothers have wired to Porterville to ascertain the facts.

HOME TO FOLLOW FRENCH TYPES.

NEW WEST ADAMS MANSION TO BE SHOW PLACE.

Dwelling Will Be of Brick, With Plastered Exterior and Stone Trim—Iron Balconies and Paved Terraces Attractive Features of Architectural Design.

Contracts will bet let during the coming week for the construction of a beautiful mansion of the French renaissance type for Mrs. Louisa A. Denker in the fashionable West Adams Heights district. Plans for the house, which will be one of the show places of West Adams street, have just been completed by Architect B. Cooper Corbett.

The dwelling will be of substantial construction, the walls being of brick, with plastered exterior. The trim will be entirely of stone. Ornamental iron balconies will constitute a charming feature, as will also large paved terraces at the front and rear. The roof will be of red tile.

The entrance hallway will contain a handsome circular stairway of wrought iron and mahogany. The living-room will be to the right of the hall and will be 20x32 feet in size, and richly finished in mahogany. The dining-room will be in oak, the ceiling and cornices being of plaster, moulded. The drawing-room will be built on an octagonal plan and will be finished after the period of Louis XVI. The ceiling will be vaulted. The main rooms will contain large stone fireplaces.

Every bedroom will contain a small fireplace and will have its own dressing-room and bath. There will be two sleeping porches. The windows will open into shallow iron balconies.

Probably the most attractive feature of the house will be the main entrance, which will be supported by two large stone columns, each two stories in height. The doors throughout the house will be of the French type. At the rear an enclosed porch, 15x40 feet in size, will open onto a terrace looking directly upon a garden. The grounds, which are large and sightly, will be elaborately landscaped under the direction of the architect.

CONVENTION POSTPONED.

Announcement is made that the eighth annual convention of the California State Realty Federation, scheduled for August 15-17 in Los Angeles, has been postponed to October 10, 11 and 12. This is the result of numerous requests from affiliated organizations, and prominent members, because so many real estate men, especially from the interior valley points, are away on prolonged vacations. Mabry McMahan of San Francisco, president of the State federation, and James G. Stafford, of Los Angeles, secretary and treasurer, will for the next two months carry on an extensive publicity campaign among the realty fraternity of the State, and hope to induce a large attendance at the gathering in Los Angeles this fall. Special meetings with the realty boards of Santa Barbara, San Diego, Riverside, Redlands, Pomona, Santa Ana, Pasadena, and other towns in Southern California, have been arranged for, and similar meetings will be held with the affiliated organization of Central and Northern California in the next sixty days.

POLICE THINK HE'S CRAZY.

Man Declared of Sound Mind by Lunacy Commission and Ordered Released Is Locked Up.

The refusal of the Lunacy Commission to commit George Benz, 24 years old, a leatherworker, to an asylum, resulted yesterday in the police locking the man up to get him off the street. He will be arraigned before Police Judge Frederickson tomorrow on a vagrancy charge.

Benz has been living in a rooming-house at Sixth and San Pedro streets, where nothing is known of his past. On the 24th inst., Benz walked into the Receiving Hospital and complained of being followed. He was put to bed. Later he attempted to set fire to the bedclothes. When arraigned before the Lunacy Commission he was declared of sound mind, and ordered released.

Benz called on Capt. Murray yesterday at the Central Police Station and told a long and rambling story about persons conspiring to ruin his business, and following him on the streets. When the captain learned that the Lunacy Commission had refused to cimmit Benz to an asylum he ordered him locked up.

OUR idea of a home is one both PRACTICAL and ARTISTIC. By careful thought we manage to instill certain INDIVIDUALITY in each home.

It quite frequently happens that the PROSPECTIVE BUILDER'S IDEAS and PURSE do not correspond. In such cases our PRACTICAL knowledge comes to the rescue, and often where others have hopelessly FAILED, WE SUCCEED.

We build homes from the modern five-room cottage, at $900, to the most elaborate dwelling. It rests with the INDIVIDUAL, entirely, what his home will cost. By concentrating our PURCHASING POWER, combined with our PRACTICAL knowledge, and being in a position to DISCOUNT our BILLS, we can, for a given quality of work, discount our competitors' prices.

We build either by contracts on a fixed fee of 10 per cent. of estimated cost of work, or on our own lots in Los Angeles, Redondo and San Pedro, on easy terms.

We make no additional charges for our Architectural services, if we build, or if we fail to satisfy you both as to price and design.

Our REFERENCES are PEOPLE for whom we HAVE BUILT, who FREELY indorse us.

We make liberal building loans.

at 716 Harvard boulevard.
For Sale, $11,550.
Just completed.
You can buy direct from owner.

This beautiful nine-room bungalow is a triumph of modern architecture—one of the most masterful examples of the Japanese type ever attempted in America. It is situated in the heart of Los Angeles's most aristocratic residence section, ideally located just off Wilshire boulevard. Surrounded by homes costing $25,000 to $40,000.

This bungalow contains nine rooms—with every modern appointment, convenience and many striking new features. The interior finish is in genuine Juana Costa mahogany with real piano finish. Artistic hand frescoed wall decorations throughout. Two massive fireplaces. Unusual built-in effects. Artistic buffet and breakfast room. Servant's room with separate toilet and bath. Special dressing enclosure with ladies' built-in dresser in one of the beautiful bedrooms.

A commodious uniquely decorated billiard-room upstairs. Two upstairs sleeping balconies. Cellar with modern furnace and automatic Humphreys heater, wide cement driveway and garage in harmony with the architecture of the bungalow. Broad rambling front porch. Specially designed electric fixtures.

A unique feature of this home is the enclosed patio and Japanese garden, in the center of which is a pool of water. Beautiful lawn already in.

The large rooms, the striking beamed ceiling effects—the character of the built-in work—the quaint windows, the mural decorations, fixtures, plumbing, etc., will immediately appeal to the most critical.

Take Ninth street car and get off at Wilshire boulevard. House No. 716. Owner can be seen at 1102 TITLE INSURANCE AND TRUST BLDG. F2287, Main 983.

Houses.

FOR SALE—THE PRETTIEST, NEWEST and most up-to-date bungalow in Eagle Rock, built on lines of a Swiss chalet, and attractive enough on the exterior to make you wish to see inside. Large rooms, windows to your heart's content, and closets; if you have enough clothes to fill them, you're going some; to say nothing of the linen closet containing twenty-eight drawers and two large cupboards, with deep shelves. Pine floors, scraped and waxed throughout: with the exception of oak floors in the living and dining-rooms, and linoleum on the back porch, kitchen and bath. You can have the linoleum, too.

If you're particular about kitchens, come out and see this: Cupboards made especially for all your home preserved fruits; also for canned goods, without mentioning ones for cooking utensils, dishes, etc. If you want to eat in this kitchen, there is plenty of room, yet off to one side is the tastiest breakfast-room you ever saw. My wife uses it for a sewing room because of the lovely windows. She believes in "light" housekeeping; that's why one side of our bedroom is all windows.

Would like to tell you about the French windows opening from the dining-room into a lovely court, with cement floor; also about a few other nice things, but this printer's ink is dog-gone expensive. I'll leave it to you.

Take Eagle Rock car on Spring st., and get off at Sycamore; look to the right one-half block, and you've got it. Lot 60x135; on fine street; a five-cent car fare by book. Everything to make you happy and this delight of six rooms is a rare bargain at $3500.

FOR SALE—

A SIX-ROOM BUNGALOW,

ON VERMONT AVENUE.

PRICE $3800.

That price may seem high for a six-room bungalow, but when you consider that we are giving you a big 50 ft. lot on Vermont avenue, which is paved, and which has sewer, car line and every city improvement, and putting this lot in at actual cost, plus the actual cost of the house, making the price $3800.

We don't want any profit on the house and don't want any profit on the lot. What we want to do is to get it on interest.

These lots alone in a few years will be worth $4000 apiece. The reason why is because they are good business lots. If you want an investment, if you want us to build you a house on a lot that some years from now will be worth three times the cost of the house and lot, come in and see us.

This property is located on the east side of Vermont avenue, between 54th and 55th streets. We are putting in these lots at $1750 each. Ask anybody of their value, convince yourself and come and talk with us.

I SELL THE EARTH.

R. S. BASSETT,

TWO GOOD HOUSE BARGAINS.

ONE IS LOCATED ON A CORNER. Only one block from a good car line. The lot is 45x150, and there is a 5-room house, renting for $16.50 per month, while on the rear of the lot is another house of 4 rooms and attic that will rent for $15 per month. The owner pays the water, which is $1.50 per month, leaving the income $30 per month. Price is $2000, mortgage $1000. Cash $500, balance $35 per month, interest 7 per cent.; payable semi-annually. A purchaser could live in one house and rent the other, thus having a good home and getting an income at the same time.

The other is within 12 minutes' ride from business at Second and Broadway, and is a modern neat cottage of 5 rooms and the lot is 32-45x103. There is a lawn, some fruit trees, etc. This house rents at $18 per month, and has been held heretofore at $2300. But owner must have some cash and if it be sold at once it can be had for $1800. This is really an income proposition at this price.

I have many others, but these are best.

THE MAGIC NUMBER,

MITCHEL'S
EXPOSITION PARK SQUARE

Is truly fortunate with its SEVEN CAR LINES and 90-SECOND CAR SERVICE. No matter how attractive a homesite subdivision may be, if it is hard to get at, if the ride is long and tiresome, cars infrequent and car fare high, the wise business man refuses to consider it for himself.

He knows that he may work hard and fast, but there's a limit to the number of hours in the day, and there's a limit to his strength. To increase his strength and practically lengthen his day, he will give heed only to the region which is a short distance from the business center and which offers good car service with reasonable fare.

After this preliminary survey, he will be in a position to demand other things. For example:
HIGH CLASS SURROUNDINGS

MITCHEL'S EXPOSITION PARK SQUARE supplies this demand in full measure. This is a fashionable and popular residence section of the city. Wise building restrictions prevent undesirable additions and numerous handsome bungalows are the rule.

MITCHEL'S EXPOSITION PARK SQUARE is in the midst of beautiful parks and boulevards, grammar and high schools, colleges and libraries.

THE IMPROVEMENTS are first-class—paved streets, cement walks and curbs; gas, water, electricity. Attention has been given to arrangement and beautifying features—no unsightly views meet the eye.

VALUES here are constantly going higher as the supply of choice locations grows less. You will make no mistake by investing in this desirable tract.

SEVERAL CHOICE LOTS at $1500, on satisfactory terms. This is a most unusual price for such an offering, in such a locality, with such environments. Other desirable lots for less—some for more. It will not be hard for you to come to a decision.

IDENTIFY YOUR INTERESTS with those of the most rapidly growing city of the United States. Ally yourself with a prosperous neighborhood where your family will have a chance to develop properly and where the improvements, the environment, the view and the prospects for future growth and increase in value are all of the brightest.

TAKE A RIDE TO MITCHEL'S EXPOSITION PARK SQUARE TODAY.

Remember, it will require only 20 minutes, will cost only 5 cents, and you won't have to wait for a car longer than a minute and a half. It will be time well spent.

PROFIT
CAN BE MADE FROM THIS INDUSTRIAL ACREAGE.

We are forming a syndicate to purchase a large industrial tract at such a low price that at least 100 per cent. profit should result from its resale.

Every lot served by steam and electric railway tracks, fronts asphalt street, and is close to heart of city, west of Los Angeles River. Similar property is selling at 50c to $2.75 per square foot, we can sell at 30c a square foot, or $1800 for a lot 50x180 and make a profit of over 100 per cent. on the actual money invested by the syndicate. We are buying for half the asking price of adjoining unimproved property.

We now have applications from cash buyers who want to get into this district on account of its excellent facilities and we believe the entire tract can be sold out inside of three months.

Total amount of money necessary is $53,000 and over half is already promised.

Syndicate units are $1000 each. Subscription lists open for a few days. Payments must be completed by September 1. Merchants Bank & Trust Company escrow holders.

If you have $1000 or more to put into a piece of splendid industrial property that is increasing rapidly in price and is in great demand, come in and let us show you how each thousand dollars will return over $2000 in a few months. The personnel of this syndicate is gilt edged. See either

FOR SALE—
A FEW SPECIALS.

During the last 30 days I have sold exactly $65,000 worth of lots in this beautiful suburban tract among the wild woods, and near a cool, rippling brook.

These sales have been made almost entirely to the old-time residents of Los Angeles, Pasadena and Hollywood. Since this remarkable offering was opened, they immediately availed themselves of this unique opportunity. The following splendid home sites remaining unsold will be of unusual interest to the man of keen judgment:

$862.50—Large, level lots, 150x175; 900 feet elevation; only two blocks to a car line; good soil, plenty of water; $62.50 can handle this.

$2775.00—A fine corner lot, 150x170. The only corner lot available in this immediate vicinity, one block from car line; rapid improvements going on all around.

$3400.00—The show place in the whole valley. Note the size—190x300. On a beautiful winding drive. Small knoll on back of lot; splendid for a summer house.

If these sound at all interesting to you, you should investigate at once. The best locations will soon be gone. I can give you 10 per cent. discount for all cash, or terms as low as 5 per cent. down and easy monthly payments.

Don't let this unique opportunity for an ideal home site slip by you without thoroughly and immediately investigating. Free auto trips to the property almost every hour.

FOR SALE—

SAN PEDRO HARBOR.

A harbor of world-wide importance is being created at your very doors, and property in the vicinity of that harbor must grow in value at a rate which has probably never been equaled by land near any other harbor in the world. Because San Pedro harbor is an artificial construction. Its need has been felt so greatly that the government of the country, of the city and of the State have combined to produce there a deep-water harbor capable of handling the world's commerce which must come to Los Angeles through San Pedro upon the opening of the Panama Canal.

The most strategically situated property in the entire harbor district is

HARBOR CITY.

Here the effect of San Pedro's growth will be felt to its full extent. There you may have every convenience; you may have a 5-cent car fare to San Pedro; you may have direct car service to Los Angeles; you may have good roads to either Redondo or to Wilmington. And, furthermore, you may purchase there a capable of being subdivided, for as little as $[illegible]—ON TERMS OF LOW AS $[illegible] A MONTH.

HALF OR THREE-QUARTER ACRE PLOT

These lots are tillable and wonderfully fertile. There is plenty of water. They will yield a splendid income under cultivation, and there is always a market at San Pedro for any fruit, garden truck or poultry that you may raise.

SEE HARBOR CITY

at your first convenience, for present prices cannot last long. If you will call at our office we will be glad to give you full particulars regarding the property, and take you down there. If you prefer to go alone, take the San Pedro via Gardena car at the P. E. Station. It stops at Harbor City.

FOR SALE—APPLE LAND—

TEHACHAPI.

A Plain Talk About a Very Remarkable Opportunity.

It takes PEOPLE, MEN and WOMEN, and FARMERS to make a country.

There are a good many people here in Los Angeles and vicinity that wish they had come ten years ago—before the wonderful values of land here had been discovered.

We believe we have at TEHACHAPI a region which is going to become as FAMOUS and as PRODUCTIVE and as VALUABLE as any land i nSouthern California. It is not Orange land or Lemon land, but it is Apple and Pear and Currant land.

Some shrewd people tell us that currants alone are going to "take" the Tehachapi Valley, that in time the pears, profitable as they are; and apples, profitable as they are, will all go to make room for the currants. However, we are still advising people to plant all three.

The altitude of Tehachapi is 4000 feet and higher. We do not believe there is any really GOOD APPLE land lower than 4000 feet in this climate. It gets too HOT lower down.

It is ALWAYS COOL at Tehachapi. Rarely goes above ninety. Most summer days run from 80 to 85 degrees.

TEHACHAPI is directly on the line of the railroad; two railroads, in fact. Best kind of service.

TEHACHAPI SOIL simply couldn't be better, either in fertility or mellowness, or in being "sweet," with plenty of lime. There is plenty of water for irrigation.

WE WERE PIONEERS IN TEHACHAPI. Developed and sold the first land. We realize that what we want is more people. Ours is now by far the cheapest good land with water rights in the valley. We are still selling the cheapest, and at the easiest terms to get PEOPLE.

If you have a little capital, and want to get something extraordinarily good, at moderate prices, find out about Tehachapi.

There will be a special low-rate excursion Wednesday evening, the 31st.

Some of the owners are not in position to put in enough money for developing. The company, a close corporation, has decided to sell property complete for $60,000, reasonable terms; this price is $20,000 under value, for particulars address OWNER, Y, box 303, TIMES OFFICE.

This is one of the best leases in the Midway field, and affords a magnificent opportunity for a capitalist or organized company to step into a bona fide and attractive proposition at a sacrifice. You get the whole thing. Quick action essential. Address R, box 176, TIMES OFFICE.

SAY, MR. HOTEL MAN, better get a move on you if you are considering the purchase of a hotel or apartment-house. In thirty days you will pay 25 per cent. more. We have some big bargains, but cannot tell how long they will be on the market.

$15,000—APARTMENT-HOUSE, 80 rooms, occupied less than a year, facing Westlake Park, 9 years' lease at $6 per room, furnishings the best that money can buy. $3000 cash, $4000 exchange, balance very easy.

$24,000—APARTMENT-HOUSE, 120 rooms, 7 years' lease at $6.25 per room; nothing better in the city as to location, furnishings and style of building. If you have some good city or Pasadena property up to $10,000 and $5000 in cash, you can move in and make money right from the start.

APARTMENT-HOUSE, 90 rooms, at $5 per room; good lease. This alone is worth the price asked. $1500 cash, balance very easy.

APARTMENT-HOUSE, 70 rooms, 4½ year lease at $3.25 per room, 1 block from Broadway. In the dull season, this house is making $200 per month. I will show you. Price $6500, one-half cash.

APARTMENT-HOUSE, 60 rooms, 4 years' lease at $5 per room; 5 blocks west from Broadway. Just think of it.

APARTMENT-HOUSE, 64 rooms, 5 years' lease at $5 per room, 4 blocks west of Broadway. This house is a winner and no mistake will be made in buying. $3000 cash, balance can be paid from income.

APARTMENT-HOUSE, in best residence section, 5 years' lease at $6 per room; 50 rooms, only been occupied 4 months; every room taken and a waiting list. $3000 cash will handle.

APARTMENT-HOUSE, brick, 24 rooms, 5 years' lease at $8 per room, very close-in. This is one of the nicest small houses in the city; price $2800, $1600 cash, balance terms.

HOTEL, modern, brick, 58 rooms, 5 years' lease at $7 per room, close to business center. Don't overlook the length of this lease.

HOTEL, 70 rooms, 4 years' lease at $5 per room; located right in business section; hot and cold water; everything in No. 1 condition. This is surely a money-maker. $3000 cash, balance very easy.

FOR EXCHANGE—
VERY UNUSUAL OPPORTUNITY.
And in this instance the above commonplace expression is absolutely true.
If you are the owner of a piece of well located industrial property with switch track facilities, or a fine home in the Wilshire or Westlake districts, you can exchange the same for one of the most staple and established business propositions in Los Angeles, which is paying net at the present time over $1000 per month. Business requires no technical experience, simply intelligent business judgment. Present owners have made a handsome fortune, and ill health is the only reason for wishing to dispose. This requires quick action, as it is too attractive to last.

I NEED THE SERVICES OF A MAN WITH $5000 to take half interest and inside management of a manufacturing business, which has been established here for 12 years. There is no other factory like it in the United States therefore it's a monopoly. The profits have been $6000 yearly for the past eight years. Have just taken a $12,000 order, the profits on that order is 50 per cent. The business is such now that I can't handle it alone. This opportunity is not like most advertisements (without merit), will stand rigid investigation. I have concessions at both expositions (San Francisco and San Diego) which will clear us $725,000 in 1914-15. The work will not be hard. No experience necessary. Can draw $150 monthly salary until January 1, then more. If you haven't the amount on hand or if you you are only looking around don't answer for my time is valuable. You can walk the streets for months looking for a good legitimate business, but will never find a better opening than this. Address Z, box 137, TIMES OFFICE.

IF YOU ARE GOING INTO OIL BUY DOS PALOS OIL & MINING STOCK. FOUR DOLLARS PER 1000 SHARES.

FORTY DOLLARS TODAY will buy 10,000 shares, par value $10,000; when they strike oil your shares should be worth ten or twenty times what you paid for it. The company holds 40 acres of oil land under the laws of the United States in a reserve upon which no withdrawal order has been made; in the northeast quarter of section 10, township 4 north, range 20 west, San Bernardino base line meridian, on the west side of Sespe canyon, where a 100-barrel well is worth $100,000, and should earn $100 a day.

WE KNOW
That Ventura county has made good; we know that the company has a choice piece of ground in the proven oil belt; between producing wells. We know that when they strike oil it will be good oil of light gravity and high grade, which commands ready sale at high prices. It should not take long or much money to bring in their first well, when active work has been commenced, and pipe lines in the canyon are ready to take the oil.

THE DOS PALOS OIL
and Mining Company's stock offers you an opportunity—the kind that has made many men rich.

AN OIL MAN SAID:
"A well drilled 500 feet from the outcrop would give an elevation of 300 feet from the outcrop of shale. Then allow 200 feet for the dip of shale, and 100 feet for distance through shale to sand would make your well about 600 feet. But I would allow 100 feet more, as the shale may get a little steeper as it goes into the hill. Take it altogether. I do not think the depth would exceed 700 feet."

THERE IS NO QUESTION OF DOUBT
A well drilled at a point above the exposure of these oil-bearing shales should tap that underground reservoir of oil. The asphalt base of California oils is what makes them so valuable for fuel.; Three barrels being equal to one ton of coal, and consumption of crude oil is increasing steadily month by month.

We predict great activity in the Sespe oil district and now is the time of all time to buy for future profits. Call and see map and samples of oil-bearing shales, or send your order for the number of 1000 shares you desire.

No. 6 July 28, 1912 No. 6

Wait until you have all the answers to the pictures before sending them in. No partial lists will be considered.

Rules That Will Govern The Booklovers' Contest

All residents of California, south of Fresno; Arizona, New Mexico, Old Mexico and Nevada, are eligible, except TIMES employees and members of their families. Daily for 77 days will be published in THE TIMES the picture repreenting the title of a book. Beneath this picture will be a coupon to fill in with the name of the book and the author.

Cut out the picture and coupon, filling in the book title and author's name, writing your name and address neatly and plainly in the place provided.

No restrictions are placed on the manner in which answers to pictures are secured. Each picture represents the title of one book only. If you are not certain of your solution you may send in one to ten answers to the picture. NO MORE THAN TEN ANSWERS WILL BE ACCEPTED TO A PICTURE. Incorrect answers will not count against contestants if correct answer is also given. Only put one answer on each picture and coupon. Extra coupons must be secured and used for extra answers. All answers to each picture must be kept together in compiling your set.

Additional pictures and coupons may be obtained at The Times office, by mail or by person. Answers will not be accepted unless they are properly filled out on the coupons appearing beneath each picture. It is necessary that pictures be sent in with the answers in order that all answers may be uniform.

When you have all 77 answers, fasten them together and bring them or mail them in a neat flat package—not folded or rolled—to The Times office, addressed "BOOKLOVERS' CONTEST EDITOR." Prizes will be awarded contestants sending in the largest number of correct solutions. In the event of two or more persons having the same number of correct solutions, the person using the smallest number of extra coupons in his set of answers will be declared the winner. In the event of two or more persons having the same number of solutions correct and using the same number of coupons, awards will be made on the basis of neatness.

More than one prize will not be awarded to any one family at the same address, but each member of the family may enter the contest and submit a complete set.

Only one complete set (comprising not more than 10 answers to any one-picture) of answers may be submitted by a contestant. Awards will be made strictly according to the merit of each separate list. The names of more than one person must not be written on any one coupon.

All answers will be considered on their merits. The first set filed will have no preference over the last set filed; provided only that answers must be filed within the time specified after the last picture has appeared.

The awards will be made by the Contest Editor and three well-known citizens whose names will be announced later.

The correct answers to the series of pictures will be filed with a local trust company or bank a week previous to the close of the contest.

Entry to the contest may be made at any time.

All communications or letters of inquiry concerning the contest should be addressed to the Booklovers' Contest Editor, The Times.

A New Copyrighted Contest Catalogue Goes on Sale Monday, July 29

35 Pictures will be given FREE with this catalogue.

A catalogue of 4500 book titles, with the names of their authors, has been issued and fully copyrighted. Exclusively from this official catalogue the titles represented by the 77 pictures are selected. Therefore THE CORRECT TITLES CAN ALL BE FOUND IN THE BOOKLOVERS' CATALOGUE.

And listen! With each catalogue will be given, FREE, seven certificates good for the FIRST 35 pictures, with their coupons. In other words, The Times simply presents contestants with 35 pictures, worth many times the value of the catalogue itself! Each of the seven certificates is redeemable at any time during the contest for any five of the FIRST 35 pictures, with their coupons.

You may not need these extra pictures now, but you will need them before the contest is over to replace pictures lost, soiled or torn, or to make extra answers, etc. The Times admonishes contestants that it reserves the right to withdraw this remarkable free picture offer without notice.

Better get a catalogue, because the free picture offer may be withdrawn at any time. This remarkable offer is a new feature with the Booklovers' Contest, and it may prove to be too great an expense in printing, handling and redeeming the pictures. We will test the offer for a while. It may be continued throughout the contest or summarily withdrawn.

LABOR UNREST CAUSES DISMAY.

Industrial Troubles Demoralize Great Britain.

Strikes and Lockouts Weakening Nation's People.

Alarming Mental and Physical Decadence Appears.

[BY CABLE AND DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, July 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Bristons are approaching a condition very much like dismay in face of the increasing industrial unrest. Underlying all other causes of anxiety is the fact, now pressing with tremendous weight upon the conscience of the nation, that the masses are being weakened physically, mentally and morally by the long succession of strikes and lockouts.

It is not necessary, according to a sober analyst of the economic situation, from a national or international viewpoint, to look to Stockholm and other Olympic games for illustrations of "Our alarming decadence," for the ranks of British labor supply "ghastly testimony to the folly of a system of industry that is shockingly unjust and terribly dangerous."

NORTH SEA ECLIPSED.

Probably the thoughtful element is more uneasy on this score than over what Mr. Churchill calls the "menace in the North Sea." As an eminent ecclesiastic publicly put it, "dreadnoughts and superdreadnoughts are only so much scrapiron after a little if we cannot arrest the fearful draught made upon the vitality of our population through labor wars at home."

"What a waste of breath and time it is," says another, "to be calling upon the United States to repress slavery in the Amazon rubber district, when an abominable and wasting peonage exists at our own front door."

Dismissing as "pure theatricalism" Ben Tillett's prayer that heaven will strike Lord Devonport dead, a week-end review declares the threat of Joseph Havelock Wilson, just back from Australia, to organize a national strike of transport workers, points to "a wider area of starvation and decadence."

Mr. Lloyd George's new legislative plan for dealing with strikes promises well but, though hailed as "the Theodore Roosevelt of England," he finds, his supporters assert, that, "like Mr. Roosevelt, he is grossly misrepresented by the champions of privilege."

KITCHENER CAPITULATES.

Britain's Renowned Field Marshal Said to Have Surrendered to the Charms of an American Girl.

[By Atlantic Cable and by Wireless from Chicago to The Times.]

LONDON, July 27.—Lord Kitchener, the famous field marshal and sirdar of the Soudan, who broke the power of the Mahdi and the Khalifa and finished up the Boer war, turning a succession of chapters of defeat into brilliant victory; England's most celebrated bachelor knight, who has defied bright eyes as well as spears and bayonets, has at last surrendered to the charms of a young American girl scarcely out of her 'teens. The young lady, who is likely to be soon one of the most envied women in the British empire, left London recently with her mother to return to the United States in order to prepare for the wedding. The distinguished soldier will follow as soon as official duties now detaining him set him at liberty.

The romance began during Kitchener's visit to the United States. The chance acceptance of an invitation to dinner at the house of a wealthy western mining man introduced him to the one woman in whom he has ever shown an interest. They met again in the Mediterranean and in Egypt, where, it is understood, a formal proposal was made after a whirlwind wooing. British friends of Kitchener are greatly surprised and many London matrons are indignant that the autocrat of the army should pass by British beauty unscathed to be conquered by a western American belle who has seen very little of society.

DUKE FALLS TO DEATH.

French Nobleman Dies Following Accident on Stairway of London Home Where He Was Visiting.

[BY CABLE AND A. P. TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, July 27.—The Duc de Lorge, a French nobleman, last night fell down the elevator shaft in a home he was visiting, and died from his injuries a few hours later. The accident occurred at the home of Arthur James, a wel-known racing man and steward of the Jockey Club.

Teh duchess and the two sons of the duc have been summoned to London.

The duc was 51 years old. He married Henrietta de Cosse Brisac of the princely house of Robech.

LONDON DOCK STRIKE ENDS.

Trouble Which Has Kept Fifty Thousand Workers and Their Families Impoverished Is Closed.

[BY CABLE AND DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, July 27.—The strike committee declared ended today the strike at the London docks, which started in May and has caused about 50,000 dock workers and their families to live in semi-starvation for ten weeks. Work is to be resumed Monday.

The strike committee has issued a manifesto to the men, declaring that all agreements between the employees and the employers existing prior to the dispute must be maintained. The employers, heretofore, have refused.

The decision of the dockers' leaders to order the men to return to work is taken as a result of their failure to organize a general strike of the transport workers of the country in sympathy with the London men.

Although large funds have been raised for the relief of the men's families, the assistance afforded has been slight as compared with the extent of the distress. Some of the leaders, too, lost the sympathy of the public by uttering threats of violence.

Some of the employers who have, throughout the dispute, promised that the men's grievances would receive the most careful consideration after the resumption of work, are to meet on Monday to discuss the men's demands.

Democratic Women to Turn Cooks and Waitresses and Serve Those and Other Dishes at Remarkable Feast Thursday Night in Downtown Cafe—More Eating Than Voting Democrats, It Appears.

HEN the women from Dixie land who are members of the Los Angeles county branch of California Woman's Democratic gue proposed a southern dinner, be held at Coulter's on Thursday ing, August 1, they did not then w who would be the Democratic nee for President, but they took on faith. ost of them wanted Clark and n it was Wilson they forgot about ouri and learned the Princeton eady suggested, the Princeton l be the first course. It will by a grand parade of wait- and cooks. The table decora- ll be the Princeton colors of d white. The second course, s the first course that can be will consist of creole crab illet. This ought to be spelled tal letters with exclamation after each word. The gumbo the genuine article, for it is ade by Mrs. John W. Mitchell, t only agrees to provide twen- ns of this most delicious and ristocratic of all soups, but pledged to make 300 corn which is the corn bread par ce when it is made after the hion of the South.

Mitchell knows how they make in New Orleans and she knows y make it in Baltimore. Gum- her is the sort of substance r which is the essence and und of all the southern mem- d which at some time lures uthern wanderer's feet back from the uttermost parts of th.

a man has lived in other lands r gravies and less cuisine en- m he sometimes doubts his emory and wonders whether mbo of the South was really as he dreams, or whether it a fine-spun fancy. Then he ck South to find out and he that it was not only as good hought but, in the light of re- xperiences, it has become a deal better than he ever d it could be. When he goes ain, he carries a recipe for [illegible] his pocket and gives it to a woman in a strange land who can never learn exactly how it is done. It is that way with corn bread, with biscuits and with the real fried chicken and the genuine cream gravy. These delicacies are facts in the South and they are more or less theoretic everywhere else.

LOVE APPLES FOR BACHELORS.

Mrs. Norman Lackland will prepare the salad and the cream cheese. The salad will be nothing but sliced cucumbers and love apples. Even the bachelors' table can indulge in the love apples, as this is only the southern name for tomatoes. It was given to them in the days when tomatoes grew wild and nobody thought of eating them, although they were sometimes picked as ornaments.

Mrs. Ella Swickard is the manager of this dinner and chairman of the Ways and Means Committee of the county branch. She originated the idea of the dinner with the hope of raising funds with which to furnish the headquarters of the league in the Higgins building. Of course, the dinner will cost more than the $300 which the sale of 300 tickets will bring, but this is offset by the fact that the women are donating the food supply as well as the cooking. Mrs. Swickard is going to fry the seventy-five chickens in true southern style and she will make five gallons of cream gravy to go with the birds. It is suspected that Mrs. Albert Lee Stephens, Mrs. James Westphalings, Miss Musa Rawlings and Miss Mary Foy may forget their exalted positions as waitresses long enough to roll up their sleeves and go into the kitchen to help in this menial service, if cooking may be called menial when it is thus placed upon the footing of high art.

Mrs. Mary Aull will bake the yams and it is expected that this is as much of a bargain as any one person would care to look after. Even a sweet potato is supposed to imbibe the magic of southern atmosphere and treatment.

THAT'S ENOUGH.

Mrs. W. C. Tyler, president of the county branch, and Mrs. Charles P. Huey, its treasurer, will devote their composite cooking abilities to the baking of 1200 hot biscuits and the guests will please take notice that after they eat three biscuits and one corn pone they are not supposed to ask for any more bread. The dessert will be ripe red watermelon, which the darkies sometimes call boneless hams. Fifty large, luscious melons will be shipped that day on ice directly from the fields by the Imperial Valley Land Company, and even the southern women are willing to admit that the Imperial Valley fruit could not be improved upon had it come from Tennessee, Georgia or Florida.

The programme will be brief. Mrs. John W. Mitchell will be toastmistress and the four toasts will be snappy and short. These will be to our President, to our future President, to the ladies of the White House from Martha Washington down, and to the press.

Of course, the waitresses will be a stunning feature and if the bachelors' table does not get extraordinary attention that night, it ought to. Such a dinner, with such a service, is calculated to break up a bachelors' table and the bachelor habit for good and all.

Among the waitresses will be Misses Elizabeth Root, a niece of Elihu Root; Gertrude McLin, Miss Dorothy Merrill, Stella Kallmeyer, Annie Poyas, Graydon Williams, Harriet Partridge, Ione Thompson, Harriet Mall, Esther Rawlings, Ruby Allen, Edith Lander, Musa Rawlings, Lucile Hills, Lucretia Del Valle, Mary E. Foy and Mmes. J. W. McCance, Albert Lee Stephens, James Westphalings and Leona Barker.

The first special table seats twenty persons and the bachelors' table can accommodate as many. Special tables of from four to eight persons will be arranged throughout the room. A large crescent table has been engaged by the Jefferson Club.

ARIZONA GOSPEL SPREADER.

Phoenix Board of Trade Secretary on Coast With Several Good Words for His Desert Oasis.

Harry Welch, secretary of the Phoenix Board of Trade, has been called the "Frank Wiggins of Arizona," which he thinks about the highest form a compliment can take. He is passing his vacation in this city and Long Beach, but never loses a change to "plug in" for the Salt River Valley whenever the opportunity offers, and if Opportunity is not alive to the occasion he gives her a prod in the right direction.

"Yes, as we were saying," he begins, whether anybody was saying it or not, "the Salt River Valley produces the finest alfalfa, the best grain, the showiest ostriches, and the greatest opportunities in the West. It"—and so one as far as that foreign word—sounds like the name of a prize fighter—Ad Infinitum.

Welch can break into print with greater regularity than any publicity expert in Arizona, and he always provides a legitimate excuse for the break. When he notifies the news lads to step up to the captain's office and pull down a "story," the "story" is always ripe for the plucking, and lest anything be overlooked the astute secretary is perfectly willing to render such aid as within him lies.

Welch is the inventor of the "ostrich egg breakfast." Now, tell it not in Gath, but ostrich eggs do not make an ideal breakfast food, and there are those who profess dietetic qualms against assimilating the dish, but when Welch lands in any town at the head of a crowd of Arizona boosters, that ostrich-egg breakfast is always good for a front porch position in the local press.

He is an adept at arranging "functions," and when the great of the earth visit the new State capital it is usually Welch who greases the machinery that runs so smoothly and it is always Welch who sees that the "foreign correspondents" are not asleep at the switch.

He gets up boosting trips, he chaperons banquets, and he tells a good story with an English accent which belongs to him by rights. He can't make a speech and knows it, but he can and does make the other fellow talk; he writes copiously for the magazines and almost always of the wonders of Arizona; he edits a local and State monthly "bulletin of progress," and is responsible for many "write ups."

MR. STEFFENS AGAIN.

[The Argonaut:] Some recent proceedings at the Darrow trial in Los Angeles are of a nature to strike us with a sense of perplexity and even of dismay. That our law courts should forget their proper functions, that they should allow themselves to degenerate into a sort of public show like an athletic contest or a bullfight has, unfortunately, become a commonplace, and especially in criminal cases. But the Darrow trial furnishes us with a distinct novelty, thanks to Mr. Lincoln Steffens and the judicial complaisance that tolerated Mr. Lincoln Steffens. The trial is supposedly for the purpose of ascertaining whether Mr. Darrow did or did not attempt to bribe certain jurymen. It seems to have resolved into an elaborate inquiry into the social, political and religious opinions of Mr. Steffens.

That Mr. Steffens should be summoned as a witness was reasonable enough, seeing that he might have had certain information relevant to the case. If he had such information he carefully concealed it. But he did not conceal his views on the McNamara trial in general, on the functions of Christianity, and on the virtues of love and charity as they should be displayed toward two wholesale murderers. Of love and charity for their victims and for the wives and children of their victims there was no mention.

Our surprise that four hours of public time should be wasted in ascertaining the detestable opinions of Mr. Steffens upon matters quite foreign to the case is only equaled by our surprise at those opinions themselves and at the effrontery that expressed them. It appears that at the very time when Mr. Steffens was moving heaven and earth to secure the release of the McNamaras he knew that they were guilty. They had confessed their crime and Mr. Steffens knew that they had confessed it. They had admitted the murder of twenty people whom they, and he, knew to be innocent of all offense and belonging to those very ranks of labor whom they, and he, profess to be championing. They had committed that murder after taking every precaution for their own personal safety. And yet Mr. Steffens is not ashamed to stand up in a court of law and proudly admit that he did everything he could for their escape. There is only one extenuating circumstance that can be urged for Mr. Steffens. It seems merciful to assume that he was mentally diseased.

But Mr. Steffens went further than this. He proclaimed his conviction that the McNamaras ought not to have been punished at all for the confessed murder of twenty people and for the implication that naturally followed the commission of some eighty other dynamite outrages throughout the country. It seems hard to believe that a man of education should be so lost to the obligations of civilization, indeed of mere common decency, as to offer such a contention as this. But the fact is upon record. Mr. Steffens said this, according to the report, and the court heard him say it without protest. The crime of the McNamaras, says Mr. Steffens, was "a social crime." The conditions that caused it should have been treated, and presumably the murderers should have been respectfully notified that the points at issue would be immediately adjusted.

The further we go in the "evidence" of Mr. Steffens the more amazing does it become. If some I.W.W. orator had said half as much at San Diego it would be easy to understand that the tar bucket or the lunatic asylum would be the only alternatives. But no I. W. W. ever talked like Mr. Steffens. No. I. W. W. would dare. Not satisfied with this maudlin plea for two particularly cowardly murderers, Mr. Steffens went on to explain why, in his opinion, the prosecution of the McNamaras had been undertaken. That it was undertaken because a score of people had been brutally murdered and because there was every reason to believe that the McNamaras were the murderers had apparently never entered his head. No. The McNamaras were prosecuted because orders for two "victims" had been received from certain eastern interests. And this opinion, be it remembered, was voiced by Mr. Steffens a week ago and in face of the fact that the McNamaras confessed and are now in prison. In the eyes of Mr. Steffens these men are still "victims," the prey of insatiate corporation revenges, martyrs to the great cause of social justice.

There is only one way to describe the part played by Mr. Steffens from first to last in these proceedings. It stinks. It is an insult to good government and to the law. Mr. Steffens had no legal standing in the McNamara trials. He had no more right to interfere or to a hearing than any other private person in the country. And yet one might have supposed that he owned Los Angeles, owned the prisoners, owned the courts. His was the one voice externally audible. His admonitions, pieties, Scriptural tags, beseechings, and threatenings filled the air. He seems to have had a perpetual passport to the prison on one side and the judge's chamber on the others. And now we are informed, and in a court of justice, too, that all these hysterical hurryings and scurryings were undertaken on behalf of two men whom he knew to be murderers, that murder ceases to be a crime if undertaken for "social" ends, and that the McNamaras are being punished, not for killing twenty people, but because certain corporations had demanded two "victims." Is it any wonder that our courts should be losing the respect of the country when they allow hysteriacs like Mr. Steffens to use them as a convenient forum for anarchy?

BRAVE SOLDIER, GOOD CITIZEN.

GRANDNEPHEW OF PRESIDENT POLK DIES HERE.

Enlisted for Philippine Service at El Paso and Served With Distinction During War—Battle at Vigan and the Part He Played in It. Funeral Services Monday.

Julius K. Polk, aged 63 years, a grand nephew of President James K. Polk, and a veteran of the Philippine insurrection, died yesterday morning at 6:30 o'clock of heart trouble at his residence, No. 145 East Thirty-sixth street. He leaves a sister, Miss Virginia Polk, who made her home with him.

During the nine years of his residence in Los Angeles, Polk was an employee of the City Engineer's office. In this work he was popular because he was capable and obliging. He had been ailing for two years, but not until two weeks ago, was he obliged to give up his position.

Although a native of Memphis, Tenn., it was at El Paso that Polk enlisted for service in the Philippine campaign. Perhaps the most thrilling incident of his service with the Thirty-third Volunteer Infantry was while this regiment was stationed in Northern Luzon during the early part of 1900, engaged in the final chase of Aguinaldo.

The main hospital for this and other commands was at Vigan, there being nearly 300 sick and wounded in the hospital when the incident in which Polk figured conspicuously transpired On a dark night in February several thousand Filipinos, under command of Gregario del Pilar rushed the post. The garrison consisted of one company of the Thirty-third and of a few convalescents who could bear arms. After boloing two of the outposts, the main body of the enemy reached the plaza of the town and from shelter found in the small central park the natives proceeded to attack the hospital.

Then began a fight which will forever reflect glory on American arms. In small detachments in the utter darkness of the night and against great odds, the little garrison sallied forth on the offensive. From house to house and street to street, the bitter battle surged until at dawn the United States forces, limited as they were, to a handful of brave soldiers, drove the Filipinos from the city. The cost was great. In half a dozen places lay little groups of the American dead, surrounded by piles of empty shells, while all about them lay the dead, surrounded by piles of empty hard were the insurrectos hit by their losses in this engagement that their commanders were never afterward able to muster them for a single attack and Vigan remained unmolested. In this engagement Private Polk bore his part as a brave soldier and won the commendation of his superiors both on and off the field.

Funeral services will be conducted at the family residence Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock, under the auspices of the Spanish War Veterans. J. D. Habbick, pastor of the Church of the Redeemer, will officiate.

OLD MAN DISAPPEARS.

SAN PEDRO, July 27.—Search is being made of the Palos Verdes hills and along the water front for Oscar Moyer, a feeble old man nearly 80 years of age, who disappeared from his home at 135 North Mesa street on Tuesday afternoon. The old man resided with D. J. Devendorf, a distant relative, and was last seen on Barton Hill on Wednesday morning, when he inquired how he could reach Oneida, N. Y., his former home. He is weak and feeble-minded and had only a few dollars at the time of his disappearance. It is feared he wandered off into the hills and was too weak to return. Moyer is about five feet six inches in height, weight 160 pounds and wore a long, bushy beard and mustache. He was dressed in a brown-striped coat, dark trousers, light-colored felt hat and lace shoes, wore glasses and carried an old-fashioned silver watch.

STOCK LETTER.

NEW YORK, July 27.—Trading was extremely dull and sluggish in stocks today and there seemed to be an absence of outside orders at anywhere near quotations. Traders were not disposed to make any efforts to force prices on either long or short side. About the only feature was the decline in tobacco which seemed to be some scattered liquidation. There is a friendly tendency to the Granger stocks, especially the Hill issues, as the buying seems to be emanating from a good source. The crystallization of political opinions over Sunday is apt to be reflected by a more active stock market coming week.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKET.

Flour has been on the decline within the past two days with all wheat products. The lower quotations show 20 cents cut from former figures all through the flour list and this is due to the reports of harvesting and big crops throughout the East and the arrival of much of the California wheat on the market at this time. The outlook for still further declines is indulged in by the millers and it is possible that this week will see another drop. Rolled barley and several other grain products were down fractionally. Scratch feed for chickens is the only product that showed a rise.

There were no changes on the produce market, the day being very quiet as far as trading is concerned and most of the wholesalers closed their stores at noon in concordance with the usage of the past three years. Receipts were light throughout the produce list. Declines in fruits have been the rule through the week and the week at hand will see much lower quotations on plums, peaches and melons.

LOS ANGELES STOCK EXCHANGE.

California Midway Slumps with Heavy Sales—Amalgamated Shows Better Feeling.

A big block of stock of California Midway was thrown into the local market yesterday morning with the result that the quotations dropped from 25 to 23 cents, at which figure the market held. Before the trading had finished, 14,000 shares sold at that price. Two thousand sold at 23⅝, 1000 at 23¼, at which figure the market closed, and 3000 at 23½ seller 30. These last sales indicate that the market has a firm undercurrent and there is no danger of the bottom falling out. Amalgamated Oil was up a point, forty shares selling in blocks of ten at $71, which makes the decline for the week only 4 points. Union Oil touched par for the first time in weeks, five shares selling at $100 at the opening. Another five shares sold at $99.50, and the closing five sold at $99.67½. Union Provident was also noticeable in sales, forty-four shares selling at $98.62½, practically the prevailing price of the week. Pennsylvania Midway, to the extent of 2000 shares, sold at 7¾, which concluded the activities of the day in the oil list.

There was but one small sale in the industrial list during the week, and mining, with the exception of two or three stocks, was quiet. Searchlight Parallel moved freely, 1000 shares selling at $8 and the same number selling a few moments later at $8.50. California Consolidated Mines sold freely, 5000 going at 4¼, 5000 at 4⅛ and 5000 at 4 even, the final sale touching the lowest figure.

MIDSUMMER PALL AFFECTS TRADE.

NEW YORK STOCK MARKET HAS A DULL INTERVAL.

Typical Week-end Sees Less Trading Than Usual—Trend of List Is Downward, but Changes Are Unimportant—London Reported Chary of American Securities.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, July 27.—The stock market today was typical of midsummer week-ends on the stock exchange except that trading was even duller than usual. There was less than the usual settlement of contracts entered into earlier in the week.

Such trend as the list manifested at odd intervals was in the direction of lower prices, but changes in the speculative issues were unimportant, while some of the specialties moved in contrary ways. American Tobacco was the weakest of this group, with heaviness in National Biscuit, Bethlehem and Steel common and preferred, and some less prominent stocks.

Among the standard railway shares Great Northern and Northern Pacific alone showed underlying strength. Union Pacific, Canadian Pacific and Reading reflected lack of demand, a similar condition applying to Steel, with some further uncertainty in General Electric.

News of the day was without marked influence on security values. Cables told of a more hopeful feeling in London, which, however, seemed chary of our securities.

Local money brokers reported an increasing demand and a resultant decrease of cash supply. The bank statement showed an actual increase of loans approximately $7,000,000, with a cash gain slightly under $3,000,000 and a nominal increase of the reserves, which, in the average table, increased over $3,000,000.

Bonds were steady. Total sales, par value, $454,000. United States government bonds were unchanged on the week.

THE COPPER INDUSTRY.

No London Metal Market Saturday.

The Boston News Bureau says: "The Calumet & Hecla properties, grouped as a whole, have either been unable or were indisposed to increase production during the first six months of this year in order to take advantage of the higher copper metal market.

"Contrasted with the first six months of the three preceding years, the Calumet & Hecla mine itself in the first six months of 1912 is found to have produced considerably under the record for each of the preceding periods.

"Ahmeek has made steady progress. Osceola on the other hand has been slipping back. In fact, the latter's production for the first half year of 1912 is over 4,500,000 pounds under that for 1909. Tamarack also has been falling behind, while Isle Royale has been slowly creeping forward, its output for the first six months of this year being the largest the mine has ever recorded. No noteworthy change has taken place in Allouez and Centennial, although, like Isle Royale, Superior has been making steady progress in quantity of output.

"The Lake Superior district as a whole has of late years been steadily falling to the rear in its percentage of the total copper production of the country. Back in 1880 Michigan produced 83 per cent. of the United States output; in 1889, it contributed 36 per cent. of the total. In 1883 the percentage was 51, which was also the ratio in 1898. This was the last year, however, that Michigan produced over one-half of the country's output, there having been a steady slump to 29 per cent. in 1897 and to 21 per cent. in 1909. With the advent of the new porphyry mines, it is hardly probable that Lake Superior, which for 30 years controlled the great bulk of the copper output of the United States, represents as much as 15 per cent. of that production today.

"The decline in Butte & Superior shares from the recent high of 51X, was merely the inevitable slump which follows an over-bought market. The decline was not due to the liquidation of large "inside" blocks of stock, but rather to the selling of marginal holdings purchased all the way from $40 to above $50 per share.

"The last 10 point rise in the stock to 51⅞ did not have the encouragement of the bankers connected with the property; in fact, they were advising their people to take profits from $45 up, but the buying craze was on; it could not be stopped, and a big top-heavy speculative structure was built up.

"There is no telling to what price the shares would have been carried had there not been announcement of a pending legal controversy with Senator William A. Clark, the owner of an adjoining claim. The news of possible legal proceedings found the market very vulnerable, and stop orders were caught at every point decline under $50 per share.

"The shaking-out process which has taken place finds the technical position of the stock greatly improved, and those who have previously sold their stock are advised from good sources to get it back around $40.

"Even should the unexpected happen, and Senator Clark's Elm Orlu claim should be found to possess the outcrop of the ore body now being opened by the Butte & Superior, it would not be a matter of great consequence, as at this point but a relatively small portion of Butte & Superior's output could be contributed.

"Nevertheless, from a stock market standpoint, the rumors emanating from Butte of a pending legal controversy, made it possible to execute a very pretty stock market coup.

"Amalgamated Copper Company dividend is payable August 26, to stock of record July 27.

"The company's dividend record is as follows:

NERVOUSNESS IN THE WHEAT PIT.

DANGER FROM RUST IN NORTHWEST IS THE CAUSE.

Market in Chicago Is Unsettled and Prices Variable—Corn and Oats Close Lower After Fluctuating During Day—Provisions Rise With Firm Hog Market.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, July 27.—Indecision as to the chance of rust damage in the Northwest had an unsettling effect today in wheat. The market closed nervous at prices varying from 1-8@1-4 off to 1-4 advance as compared with twenty-four hours before.

September wheat swung between 93 3-8 and 94 3-8, closing at 93 5-8@3-4, a loss of 1-8@1-4 net.

September corn ranged from 64 5-8@3-4 to 65 1-4@3-8, with the close steady, 1-8@1-4 net lower at 65 1-4@3-8. No. 2 yellow 74 to 74½.

Outside limits for September oats were 32 7-8 and 33 1-8 with last sales 33, decline of 1-4 from last night.

Provisions rose on account of good commission buying, due to early firmness in the hog market. Packers, however, took the selling side. In the end the list averaged an advance of 2½ to 10 cents.

PERSONALS.

Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Baker are passing a few days at the Van Nuys. They arrived yesterday from San Francisco, where Baker is manager of the Redwood Manufacturers' Company. Oscar C. Snow, who has mining interests in New Mexico, is staying at the hotel and is registered from Mesilla Park in that State. A foreign tourist who is making his home at the hotel is Charles S. Hurd, who is touring the world and whose place of residence is London.

W. P. Land, a wealthy Philadelphia manufacturer, is staying at the Angelus after passing two weeks at Catalina. He was one of the very successful anglers and made some of the best catches of the season, according to his friends. Dr. H. Bodenheim, at the head of a manufacturing chemical company of New York; Dr. W. H. Harrison, a practicing physician of San Francisco,, and wife, and S. A. Moran, an Ann Arbor tourist, are among the guests at the same hotel.

Dr. R. Glaze, one of the pioneer engineers of Arizona, is registered at the Hollenbeck from Phoenix. William Baird, sales manager on the Pacific Coast for the Baird & Daniels Distilling Company of Philadelphia; Albert Bishop, an authority on the production of the Arabian horse in America and owner of a cattle ranch on which he breeds only thoroughbred stock, which is located at Las Vegas, are at the same hotel.

Dr. Carl Schmidt and Dr. Carl Auwiler are staying at the Westminster while in Los Angeles. They are young German jurists who are on a tour of the world and they are studying American laws and comparing them with German legislation. "Fundamental law principles are the same the world over," said Dr. Schmidt, "but there are many very peculiar laws in this country which do not exist in Germany and to these, particularly, are we paying attention."

A family party of southern tourists who are staying at the Alexandria while in Los Angeles, is made up of Mr. and Mrs. T. R. Sawtelle, Miss Laura and Messrs. Howard and Richard Sawtelle. Sawtelle, senior, is an attorney of Atlanta, Ga. Among the other guests at the hotel are W. A. Sykes, a London traveler, who is on his initial visit to Los Angeles; Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Ware and Mrs. J. C. Bauer form a party of San Francisco travelers who are here visiting friends.

Worth is an extensive cattle raiser who is staying at the hotel. H. H. McNeil arrived there yesterday from Phoenix, where he is in mercantile business, and E. W. Bennett came from the same place. Bennett is a mining man.

Dr. F. F. Gundrum is a practicing physician of Sacramento who is staying at the Lankershim. F. Hardin Chessmore, a railroad official of Burlington, accompanied by his wife, is at the hotel. A. H. Danforth is interested in real estate in San Antonio and is making the hotel his home while here.

Irving C. Ackerman, head of the law firm of Ackerman & Oppenheim of San Francisco, is at the Alexandria while here looking into the details of an estate settlement. W. Moran, president of the Moran Packing Company of San Francisco, accompanied by J. H. Johnson of Cedar Rapids, is staying at the same hotel.

POLITICAL TIPS.

The second term bug is said to have already bitten Gov. Wilson. He already feels so certain of his election in November that he is already planning for a second term. The plank in the Democratic national platform limiting the Presidential nominee to one term is therefore displeasing to him, and he may have something to say about it in his letter of acceptance.

The Democratic party in Tennessee is split on the prohibition question. A majority of the party is said to be in favor of local option. A portion of the party wants the prohibition laws repealed only as to the larger cities, and the third class is in favor of strengthening the laws so that they may be as strictly enforced in the larger places as they were in the smaller towns before the enactment of the State-wide prohibition laws. Two years ago the members of the radical temperance wing of the party, under the banner of Independent Democracy, supported Gov. Hooper, and many of them will do so again if the Democrats go back on the temperance question when they meet in State convention. The Republican platform this year not only sustains the prohibition statutes, but in a way declares that the Governor shall be vested with the power to remove officials who decline to carry out these laws. And it will be under this banner that the ultra Prohibition-Democrats will march, unless the August platform of the Democrats is made similar.

Who will succeed Senator Murray Crane of Massachusetts is still a question. Representative Gardiner of that State has announced in behalf of Curtis Guild, Ambassador to Russia, that Mr. Guild will, under no circumstances, be a candidate, nor will Mr. Gardiner permit his own name to be used as a candidate.

Congressman William Hughes, discussed as a logical man to be named by the Democrats as the successor to Woodrow Wilson as Governor of New Jersey, has been in Congress since 1903. He is a native of Ireland, 40 years of age. After finishing the public schools he took a business course. During the Spanish-American War he served with the Second New Jersey Volunteers. His home is at Paterson, where he has law offices, having been admitted to practice in 1900.

Senator Shelby M. Cullom, who was defeated in the advisory vote for United States Senator by Judge Lawrence Y. Sherman at the Republican primary election April 9, will be a candidate for election to fill the vacancy caused by the action of the United States Senate last Saturday in declaring the election of William Lorimer invalid. Senator Cullom, if elected, would be the senior Senator.

W. E. Whetstine, editor of the Columbus Junction (Iowa) Safeguard, has found himself in a ludicrous predicament. For years he has been a leading standpatter, but last week he went away on a vacation and left his paper in charge of Arthur Sprague, a school teacher of Washington, Iowa. Sprague is a strong Roosevelt man, and could not resist the opportunity, so he gave to the world his ideas about why he thought Roosevelt should be the next President, making a two-column splurge of it. When Editor Whetstine arrived home a delegation of indignant regular Republicans met him at the train. In his editorial of explanation he says: "We placed no strings on the temporary editor, and he went the limit."

In North Dakota the harvester trust has been injected into the State campaign, and a number of candidates for the Legislature have announced that their campaign will be against the harvester company. Candidates for both parties are promising to support laws ousting from the State harvester companies affiliated with the trust. In their appeal to agriculturists they declare that farm machinery sold be the Deering interests can now be purchased for much less in South Africa or in Australia than in North Dakota. George W. Perkins, chief financial backer of Third Term Roosevelt, is one of the leading lights in the harvester trust.

In some sections of Oklahoma an attempt has been made to disfranchise the negroes by refusing to register them as voters, under the so-called "grandfather clause law." Judge Isaac D. Taylor of Guthrie, United States District Attorney, has, however, rendered an opinion that the registration and election officers are not acting in good faith, as the Federal court has held the law to be in conflict with the Constitution and the laws of the United States.

The Dallas News has made a count and finds there are thirteen candidates for Governor in Missouri, and twenty-three candidates for Congressman-at-large in Texas, and opines that "even the office without any salary to it is no longer given time to seek the man," while the growing demend for more soft and lucrative places at the cost of the people really amounts to a general uprising.

More trouble for the primary election law scheme has bobbed up in Texas, and nobody seems to know certainly whether to put the names of the Presidential electors on the official ballot at the coming primaries, or whether to leave them off. There is a wide divergence of opinion in the Attorney-General's office regarding the matter. Assistant Attorney-General Lane says the names of the electors have no place on the ballot, while Assistant Attorney-General Meade says they must go on the ballot. Both have prepared opinions on the subject.

ST. LOUIS POETESS RECUPERATING ON A RANCH.

Social Obligations that Followed the Publication of Her Latest Book Too Much for the Daughter of a Postmaster, but the Balmy Air of the Southwest Restores Miss Akins.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ST. LOUIS (Mo.) July 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Miss Zoe Akins, poet, playwright, amateur actress and member of the Artist Guild, is in California recovering from a nervous breakdown, after the publication of her latest book of poems. According to her father, Postmaster T. J. Akins, she is doing nicely and will return to St. Louis in about a month. The breakdown was not due to much to the work spent on the book, says her parent, as to the numerous entertainments arranged by her friends in honor of her new book, "Interpretations," which was publishel by Grant, Richards and Company of London, in the holidays. After the appearance of the book of lyric verse, Miss Akins was kept so busy attending social affairs given in her honor that her health soon began to show effects of the strain.

On the arrival of Miss Julia Marlowe in St. Louis, the strain was not relaxed, as Miss Akins and Miss Marlowe are warm friends. Within a few days of Miss Marlowe's departure for Chicago, Miss Akins paid her a visit there. On the visit she contracted a severe cold in autoing. The cold settled on her lungs and a cough developed which alarmed her parents and friends. On the advice of her physician, Miss Akins returned to St. Louis and on June 10, left for San Diego, Cal.

Complete rest was prescribed for her in order that her shattered nervous system might be repaired. After a few days spent with friends in San Diego, she went to Agnew Sanataroum, where she passed two weeks recuperating. Miss Akins is the guest of Dr. and Mrs. Edward Dunbar on their ranch, about fifteen miles from San Diego, together with Dr. and Mrs. Edward Newman. Miss Akins is passing much of her time in the saddle, riding in the fresh air and enjoying outdoor life. According to a letter received by her father today, she is building up rapidly. Her cough has disappeared almost entirely and much of the nervousness that caused her parents and friends so much anxiety has vanished.

ARBITRATION HEARING ENDS.

Commission Concludes Taking of Testimony in Case Between Railroads and Their Engineers.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, July 27.—The Arbitration Commission which has been in session at Manhattan Beach for two weeks hearing testimony on both sides of the controversy between the locomotive engineers and the fifty-two railroads east of Chicago, finished its hearings today.

Warren S. Stone, grand chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, said that whatever award was made by the commission, it would be accepted and carried out in good faith by the brotherhood.

Mr. Strauss, chairman of the commission, announced that the general award of the board would be effective as of May 1, 1912, but the board reserves the right to make exception to this rule. Each side was given two weeks to file briefs.

ENORMOUS CROP INCREASE.

Imperial County Has Forty Thousand Acres More in Barley and Alfalfa Than Ever Before.

EL CENTRO, July 27.—An increase of about 20,000 acres in alfalfa and an equal amount in barley, over last year's total, is the surprising gain shown by the figures of County Assessor Wiley M. Weaver. The total alfalfa acreage in Imperial county is 85,000 acres, against 65,000 acres last year. The barley fields aggregate 116,000 acres, as compared with 106,000 acres twelve months ago.

Mr. Weaver's books do not show the gain in corn acreage this year, as the fields were seeded after his deputies collected their data. From the figures of the water companies, however, it is learned that there has been an increase of 40,000 acres in the amount of corn planted this summer over previous seasons.

The Assessor's rolls also show 5500 acres of cantaloupes, 3900 acres of cotton, 1750 acres of table grapes, 250 acres of raisin grapes, 300 acres of oranges, 150 acres of olives, 150 acres of apricots, 50 acres of dates and 50 acres of pears.

Early grapes from this valley are bringing satisfactory prices in the eastern markets, as shown by the returns just received by some of the shippers. W. S. Fawcett reports that one car of grapes shipped from his ranch southeast of El Centro brought $2200 in New York, another in Chicago brought $1550, and a third in the same city brought $1820. The latter were selected bunches.

J. W. Hale, another of the large shippers, has just received quotations on four cars. His first car of 100 crates of Malagas brought $1501.95, or $1.50 a crate. An express car from Thermal brought $1.30; an express car from Imperial Valley brought $1.40, and an express car of Thompson's seedless from this valley brought $1.60 a crate.

WILLIAMS WANTED.

John Williams, who is wanted by the Sheriff's office on a charge of obtaining money under false pretenses, has been located in Arizona, and will be brought back to El Centro, to stand trial. Six months or more ago, Williams was placed under arrest on the charge of having sold chattel property on which he had given a mortgage. He was released on bail, furnished by friends, and made his escape into Mexico, failing to appear on the date set for his trial.

Later, another charge was preferred against Williams, who, it is alleged, gave a mortgage on a mythical ranch in Texas, securing several hundred dollars thereby. District Attorney Swing brought the second charge against him, that of obtaining money under false pretenses, and it is this charge which he must face upon his return. For some time, Williams has been playing hide and seek with the Sheriff's office. He has been located and placed under arrest at Miamie, near Globe, Ariz., and Sheriff Mobley Meadows left last night to bring him back for trial.

NEWS BRIEFS.

Invitations have been issued for the wedding of Miss Helen Campbell and George E. Kennedy, which is to take place in this city Sunday afternoon, August 4, at 5 o'clock. The pretty bride-to-be is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Campbell, and for the past two years, she has been the teacher of history in the El Centro Union High School. Mr. Kennedy is local manager of the Wells-Fargo and Western Union offices here, and has large property interests.

The first cotton brought to the gin this year was raised by N. J. Bowdoin, and was grown on his ranch near Holtville, in Imperial Water District, No. 5. A number of cotton growers have commenced picking and within a short time the gins will begin their season's run.

John Norton, president of the Board of City Trustees, has appointed Allen Kelly and Fred W. Waite as members of the Library Board, in place of J. Stanley Brown and Phil D. Swing, whose terms have expired. The appointments were ratified at a special meeting of the City Board of Trustees.

VAGARIES OF LIGHTNING WITHOUT REASON.

Yet the United States Weather Bureau Is Able Now to Deduce Some Rules Protecting Public from Danger—Although It Causes Fewer Violent Deaths Than Any Other Foe of Americans, It Is Feared Most.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON (D. C.) July 18.—Terror of lightning is mostly morbid. If you are obsessed with such a fear, Uncle Sam's statisticians can comfort you with the assurance that the average citizen of the United States is ten times more likely to be murdered than to be killed by a thunderbolt; eleven times more likely to be shot dead, through malice or accident; twelve times more likely to die of heat or sunstroke, twenty-eight times more likely to die of burns or scalds, thirty-four times more likely to be drowned. Only about 276 people in our land are annually put to death by Jove's fiery darts. Of course, the death rate from this cause varies from year to year. It was above the average in 1909, and even heavier in 1906. Some astronomers believe that the severity of thunderstorms is increased by sun spots, others that it varies with the phases of the moon, but meteorologists generally deny these theories.

They agree that your danger from the celestial artillery depends principally upon the locality in which you live, and your shelter at the time of the storm. The weather bureau, by careful observation and tabulation, discovers our zone of greatest danger from lightning to include an irregular area of the east, covering all the Atlantic Coast States from Massachusetts to Virginia, inclusive, and biting inland until it takes in southern Vermont, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio, Kentucky, Indiana and eastern Illinois. Thunderstorms therein are more fatal though less frequent than in the Gulf States. If you wish to escape thunderstorms almost entirely, pitch your tent upon the Pacific Slope, where such storms are practically unknown. Or, if required to dwell within the danger zone, select for your castle a house in the midst of a city block with continuous tin roofs connected to well anchored waterspouts.

WISDOM OF KEEPING INDOORS.

The fact that lightning annually strikes four times as many people of outdoor occupations as people in general emphasizes the wisdom of keeping indoors during such disturbances. But if caught in the open bear in mind that you are far safer in the dense heart of a wood than at its outskirts, and that the shelter of a single tree is particularly treacherous, especially if near the edge of a body of water, even a ditch. But if you must be near a tree, seek the companionship of the beech, which is struck least often of all, and avoid particularly the oak, which attracts lightning more than any other.

The oak is hit fifty-seven, the fir thirty-nine and the pine five times as often as the beech. Avoid above all else a tree or other shelter whereunder a group of men or beasts are huddled together. While in the shadow of the thunderhead, monarch of all clouds, be exclusive. The Weather Bureau also warns you against doorways, particularly of barns and stables; also a house connected with a metallic clothes line.

While successful in tabulating the destructive and fatal effects of lightning and, by deduction, formulating such common-sense rules as the above, our Weather Bureau, in common with other great meteorological institutions, finds the force behind the fiery cannon balls and projectiles of Jupiter Pluvius too illusive and vagarious to be reduced to law. For years the bureau has been gleaning from all parts of the world reports describing the eccentricities of this awe-inspiring phenomenon of which Flammarion has said:

"It is like an elementary spirit, eccentric or rational, clever or silly, farseeing or blind, headstrong or indifferent, passing from one extreme to the other. It wriggles throught space, it moves among men with surprising agility, appearing and disappearing like lightning."

FREAKS OF BALL LIGHTNING.

Most puzzling to science of all these freaks of the subtle heavenly fluid are those of ball lightning. During a thunderstorm in Peoria, Ill., some time ago, one of these mysterious, luminous globes entered the open doorway of Robert Conkey's house, encircled the dining-room and passed out the door through which it had entered without damaging the house, although it rendered Mrs. Conkey unconscious for two hours and paralyzed her stepdaughter's left arm.

About the same time Miss Sadie Williams of New Fairfield, Ct., was sitting upon the veranda of her home, when her dog, alarmed by an approaching thunder-gust, ran to her for protection. She took her pet upon her lap and was trying to calm him when there came a flash of lightning and a ball of fire which traversed the veranda from end to end, and disappeared across the lawn. When she recovered from her surprise she found the dog dead, although unmarked by the electric projectile. She was unharmed.

SKIRT OPENED LIKE UMBRELLA.

Three of the most interesting freaks of this category have been reported from France. During a thunderstorm a globe of fire the size of a billiard ball was seen gliding along a field until it touched the bare toes of a peasant girl. Thence it rose, opening her skirts like an umbrella and came out the middle of her bodice, to bound into the air with great din. As the girl fell backward two witnesses ran to her assistance, but found her uninjured, save for a superficial erosion extending from one knee to the middle of her chest, where the ball had passed out at where her clothes had been cut through.

Another French girl who had such an experience was kneeling in her home in Marseilles while cringing in terror of the storm. A ball of lightning described as the size of a dinner plate entered the room, struck her feet, rebounded to the ceiling, struck her feet again, then the ceiling, and bounded thus three or four times with perfect regularity until, to the amazement of other occupants of the house, it escaped through the keyhole. The girl suffered a cramp in her legs which prevented her walking alone for two weeks, but otherwise was unhurt.

The third French case occurred at Secondigny. Two boys playing in the street saw a ball of lightning like an orange rolling toward them, and when one kicked it it exploded, killing him instantly. His playmate was felled to the ground but uninjured.

There is also the historic case of Prof. Richman of St. Petersburg. He had rigged up a tall iron rod to attract lightning into his laboratory for experimental purposes, but during a violet storm stood too near the apparatus. While he was explaining an electrometer connected to the conductor a ball of blue fire the size of a man's fist leaped from the rod to his head and killed him instantly. After leaving a red mark on his forehead, where it entered, singeing his clothing and bursting open his shoe, where it escaped, the fatal globe knocked his companion senseless and tore open a panel of the door, where it made its escape.

SPUN ABOUT HEADS OF DINERS.

Another lightning ball, described as like an orange, came bounding through an open dining-room window in Constantinople in 1885. After spinning about the chandelier, it bounced up and down on the table, whirled about the heads of the diners, and, without injuring any of them, leaped through the window again into the street, where it exploded with a frightful crash.

In another instance such a ball, following an awful thunder clap, fell at the feet of a young man and without harming him passed into a near-by house, where, after avoiding nine persons, it merely ignited a box of matches before making its way to the barn, where it killed six cows.

One of the most remarkable vagaries of lightning is that of shaving people as clean as a razor and in some instances sparing their lives. One of these cases was that of a Dr. Galter, who, when struck upon the head, had his hair and whiskers razed completely away, never to grow again. Although it is said that his head after this ordeal swelled up to enormous size—one account being that it measured a yard and a half around—he survived.

Two men during a storm took refuge in a windmill which was struck by lightning. Both were rendered deaf, and one found his hair, beard and eyebrows completely shaved off. There are also cases of women whose tresses have been completely removed by the same cause. In some of these cases the locks return, while in others the victims remain permanently bald.

STRIPS VICTIMS NAKED.

Even more remarkable are some well established cases where lightning stripped its victims naked without disfiguring their bodies. Miss Jennie Martin lately had this experience in a Pennsylvania village known as Bird-in-Hand. She had ran to the barn to close the door while a storm was breaking. While she was in the building a bolt ripped off part of the roof, struck her apparently on the head, whence, after shaving off her hair, it passed over the clothing, which, like a pair of shears, it cut in shreds and dropped at her feet. Her shoes were also ripped from her feet. In fact, she was stripped entirely, yet she suffered no serious injury.

Nine years ago, at Nice, one Mme. Blanc was similarly stripped completely, but although her body was uninjured she was rendered mute and when last heard from had not recovered her speech. In another case a man was struck while standing by a willow tree. His boots were found at the foot of the tree while he was picked up six feet away, absolutely naked save for part of one sleeve. Although conscious he was badly burned and his leg was broken. The field around was strewn with fragments of his clothes.

Similarly, three women were struck while standing by a reaping machine in France in 1898. One, whose clothes were undisturbed, was killed, and although the two others were stripped absolutely naked, even of their shoes, they were uninjured. Flammarion reports the case of a Frenchwoman who, while walking through the country disguised as a man was completely stripped by lighting and compelled to wrap herself in a sheet while escaping to the nearest village. All of her clothes as well as her shoes were thrown far off when stripped from her by what some might suppose to have been a supernatural force design to expose her disguise.

In some such cases the clothing is halved exactly and merely dropped or folded back from the body. Such an instance occurred in a chapel near St. Michael de Bellechasse, Quebec. Here, while kneeling in prayer, an old man named Polette was struck by lightning and dazed. His clothes were evenly bifurcated all along the line of his spinal cord and the two great nerves which forked therefrom and ran down the back of his legs.

DEAD, BUT STOOD ERECT.

But the most weird of all these lightning pranks on record is that of killing a man and leaving him standing erect, as in life. Such a phenomenon was lately reported by a Canadian observer, C. Baillarge, who near Beaumont saw a man struck by a thunderbolt while walking in a field. Although dead, he remained motionless, standing with one foot in front of the other in the attitude of taking a step.

A similar case, and even more gruesome, is reported by a British divine, the Rev. Mr. Butler, who at Everdon, England, saw lightning strike dead four of ten harvesters who had sought refuge under a hedge during a thunderstorm. All four were left as if petrified. One was holding in his fingers the snuff which he had been about to take. Another had one hand on the head of a dead dog, resting on his knees, and in the other hand a bit of bread with which he had been feeding the animal. Another sat with his eyes open, staring at the storm cloud.

More astonishing still is the now quite famous case of the three French soldiers who, after having been struck dead by lightning while under a tree in Aisne, remained standing as if alive. Even their clothes seemed all intact, but when touched the three forms pulverized into as many heaps of ashes. This case, or one very similar, doubtless inspired the scene in one of Kipling's stories, where a lightning-struck fugitive fell to ashes when seized by his discoverers. And here we have but another instance where truth is even stranger than fiction. Such complete incineration of human bodies by thunderbolts has been offered as an explanation of some mysterious disappearances.

FALLACY OF AN OLD SAW.

The fallacy of the old saw which sayeth that "lightning never strikes twice in the same place," may be illustrated by many cases locally well known. On September 2, 1909, M. E. Snyder, a farmer of Roanoke county, Va., suffered the destruction of his barn by a stroke of lightning. As he had taken out an insurance policy only a few days before, he promptly rebuilt upon the same spot. Remarkable to relate, on the exact anniversary of this conflagration, September 2, 1910, and at the same hour of the afternoon, 4 o'clock, the second barn was destroyed by a thunderbolt.

The Methodist Church of Bridgeville, Del., had already been struck twice in the summer of 1909 and workmen had hardly finished repairing the damage early in July when it was struck the third time. After that the pastor had to adjourn the services when a fourth storm found the worshipers in their pews. Otherwise he would have preached to empty benches.

About the same time the house of W. E. Rail, a homesteader of Chaves county, New Mexico, was struck a dozen times during a single storm. Each stroke hitting the house shocked a separate member of the family, which numbered thirteen people—in this case, surely, unlucky, especially in as much as one of the inmates was killed. The last dozen bolts hitting the house fell about a minute apart and the last one set the building on fire, although the flames were extinguished before great damage was done.

In Genoa there is a church, St. Mary's, which has been struck by lightning scores of times, frequently twice in the same year, and it was discovered that the lightning after hitting the spire always followed the same track, where the walls were clamped with iron.

JOVE'S FAVORITE TARGETS.

But we do not have to go abroad in search of such edifices highly preferred by Jove as a target for his fiery darts. In Washington there are the Capitol and Washington monument, each of which is commonly struck several times each summer.

In front of the entrance to the House of Representatives is a stately old linden tree, which upon five distinct occasions has been struck by lightning glancing off the Capitol dome. Well defined grooves in the trunk of the tree are all that it displays as evidence of its ill-fortune. Some years ago a thunderbolt that struck the great dome ricocheted to the plaza below, hitting a cab. The horse was felled to the ground and the driver hurled forty feet from the vehicle, but neither was seriously injured.

Five times in twenty minutes an immense bolt of lightning was seen to flash between the Washington Monument and a thunder cloud overhead April 5, 1885. And, having escaped this severe bombardment unscathed, the great obelisk was damaged by a single bolt descending June 15 of the same year.

Such instances where tall buildings are often struck are not so remarkable, however, in comparison with those in which particular localities are repeatedly bombarded by the celestial artillery. Thus, on the outskirts of Minneapolis is what is locally called the "lightning road," so termed because of the frequency with which trees, cattle, horses and people upon it have been struck by thunderbolts. A more famous case is that of Vega de Supin, in New Grenada, where no one can be induced to build a house, this prejudice being due to fear of the lightning which has assailed the region so persistently, year after year, that the rocks have been converted into magnets.

STRUCK SIX TIMES AND LIVES.

People as well as buildings and trees have defied this same old proverb about lightning's not striking twice in the same place. Charles Hines, a farmer of Dutch Neck, N. J., is reported to have been hit by six distinct thunderbolts. The first struck him when he was a lad of 15 and while he was sitting in the stern of a rowboat fishing, with his feet dangling in the water. The boat was reduced to scraps, but he was unscathed. A few years later while walking a railroad track a thunderbolt hurled him into the air and left him hanging over a stone wall. At the age of 23 while he was in church another bolt reduced the pew in which he sat to matchwood, tore his trousers into ribbons, ripped his shoes off his feet and blistered his leg. About five years later while plowing his field he was hurled to earth by a bolt which killed his horse and twisted his plowshare into a spiral. Although his hair, whiskers and eyebrows were on this day shaved off by the subtle fluid he escaped without any other injury save a sprained ankle. Then in 1889 a bolt knocked him under his dining table, rendering him unconscious. And finally, in 1895, while returning from town with a horse laden with provisions he was stunned while passing under a chestnut tree. Coming to his senses, he found his shirt, coat and hat missing, the horse lying unconscious and a ham from his market pack lodged in a tree.

During an electric storm at South Windsor, Ct., last summer, a flash of lightning struck the handlebars of a bicycle standing beside an elm tree, tore them from the machine, drove them upward along the trunk of the tree for twenty feet, removing the bark as smoothly as a knife, carried them down five feet and buried them eight inches deep in the wood. When cut out they were none the worse for their experience.

Lately a bolt struck a barn on the historic Custer farm, in Prince George county, Va. After tearing a hole in the roof it ran along a threshing machine, knocked down a man and a horse, burned the leg of one, John Lane, and killed a dog at his feet. Although Lane was severely burned and paralyzed on the left side of his body, his clothing was not disturbed.

LIGHTNING IN FRIENDLY ROLE.

Lightning is not at all famed for saving lives, although it takes many each summer. An exception to this rule, however, was noted some time ago near Le Sueur, Minn. While walking on the railroad here William Schultz found a loose rail lying across the track. Dropping it loosely in place, he was about to run to the station to seek assistance, when a blinding flash of lightning knocked him unconscious. As he came to he saw an approaching train and managed to drag himself off the track barely in time to save his life. Astonished to note that the train passed the loose rail without injury, he made an examination of the track, with the aid of the engineer, who had come back to see if he had been hurt. They were astonished to discover that the rail had been melted at the two ends—that the lightning had welded it into place as securely as could have been done by artifice.

A case even more remarkable is one where lightning saved a criminal from the disgrace of being hanged. A negro was about to be thus executed for murder in Kentucky, July 20, 1872, and had just stepped upon the trap of the gallows, when a thunderbolt struck him dead. The Sheriff, regarding the circumstance as an omen, resigned.

BOLT DOES POLITICAL SERVICE.

This summer it will be timely to recall how this subtle force also took a hand in the Presidential campaign of 1896. In that year the barn of Abner Milikan was decorated with lithographs of McKinley and Hobart. During a fierce thundergust the barn was several times struck by lightning and seemed to be wrapped in flames. But after the storm had subsided Milikan was amazed to discover that, although his barn was intact, the two candidates' lithographs had been reduced to ashes. Silhouettes of both McKinley and Hobart were, however, found burned into the barn, just where the pictures had been.

Thunderbolts frequently measure themselves upon the ground, leaving a record of their diameters. In the National Museum is a collection of glass tubes which lightning has made upon striking in sand. The holes through these, representing the thickness of the bolts, vary from the size of a quill to three inches in diameter. Such tubes have been followed thirty feet into the ground.

THUNDERBOLTS AS TATTOOERS.

Records of the vagaries of lightning are replete with accounts of tattoo marks left by thunderbolts upon the skins of victims. As these are almost invariably in the form of branching trees or other vegetation, there was formerly an erroneous notion that they were "lightning photographs" of such objects, in the path of a flash. But experiments upon photographic plates prove that when a powerful electric current darting through the air comes in contact with a flat body it branches into myriad forks, resembling not only the limbs and twigs of trees, but the details of the most delicate sea mosses.

Morbid fear of lightning results not only from knowledge that it is an uncertain foe, giving no quarter and behaving without rhyme or reason, but from the awe-inspiring enormity of the thunderhead with its fiery, forked tongue and from the rapid increase of barometric pressure preceding a gust. As intimated, thunderheads are the giants of the cloud family. The Weather Bureau has by aid of surveyors' instruments measured some as high from base to summit as Mt. Everest, the tallest mountain in the world. But even a person who is both deaf to the crashing challenge of an approaching gust and blind to the spectacle of the rising thunderhead and its ominous pyrotechnics will feel the depression caused by the sudden addition of hundreds of pounds of atmospheric pressure to his blood vessels. Such depression is fuel for morbid fears. In the course of a census of terrors made some time ago by our noted psychologist, G. Stanley Hall, it was discovered that lightning excited the chief fear of the majority of the subjects examined. Yet, according to the government's statisticians, it causes less "violent deaths" than any other agency upon whose ravages they keep tab.

MAKES QUICK TURN.

A two-story, twenty-room lodging-house, occupying a lot 40x165 feet in size, on the rear of which is situated a five-room cottage, the property being known as No. 716 Hemlock street, was sold during the past week by J. W. Roper to O. K. Uzzell for a reported consideration of $10,500. The property was immediately retransferred by Uzzell to S. S. Cederberg, the former receiving in exchange a nine-room, frame and concrete dwelling on a lot 150x165 feet in size at the northeast corner of Converse and Sixty-first streets. Both deals were handled through the agency of W. L. Elder.

GAS ENDS HER TROUBLES.

Woman, Evidently Despondent Because Out of Employment, Commits Suicide—Little Known of Her.

Practically penniless and despondent because of inability to find employment, Mrs. Dorothy Wolfe Blair, between 30 and 35 years of age, committed suicide Friday night by inhaling gas in her room at No. 1905 Estrella avenue. The body, which was found yesterday noon, was taken to the Bresee morgue.

Mrs. Harriette Lane, who conducts the house where Mrs. Blair committed suicide, said yesterday that she knew little about the woman. Mrs. Blair went to the house on the 23rd inst. and asked for an unfurnished room. She furnished it with the contents of a three-room house which she said she had been renting in Glendale. Mrs. Lane said Mrs. Blair told her that her home is in Philadelphia and that she worked her way from city to city to come to Los Angeles. Letters found in the woman's room showed tht she had answered newspaper advertisements in an effort to find employment.

San Jacinto's New Water Discovery a Wonder.

The recent water discovery and development at the foot of Mt. San Jacinto attracts outside attention. Engineers and water experts of three States seek data on Citizens' Water Company's model plan of development. Conditions are pronounced exceptional, and system ideal, with phenomenal possibilities for further development.

Many new and interesting theories have been advanced and proven in this development. Even the two narrow streaks of clay, called the Italian Wash and Indian Creek, which cross at the upper part of the valley (meaning little to the untrained eye,) play an important part in creating the source of this immense water supply. For centuries these two little gullies have been pulling down the clay from the surrounding hills and depositing in putty-like formation, layer upon layer, along their entire course, slowly but surely building the great submerged dike or dam, sufficient in length and depth to retain the millions of inches of water that is today stored in the great subterranean lake, proven to exist above its wall. This great reservoir has existed for centuries, and will continue to exist for as many more. The out-cropping of surface water, called the cienega, immediately above this dike, gave mute evidence of this impoundment and supplied the incentive for its full exploitation. The existence of this dike was proven by placing a series of test wells along its lower or west side. No perceptible water supply was obtainable at three hundred feet in these holes, while in a corresponding string of holes dirctly opposite to these, of holes directly opposite to these, but above the dike, flowing water in every case within a few feet of the surface. Many hundreds of test holes were placed over an area of five square miles, with the same result as the latter, proving conclusively that this supply is not only inexhaustible, but that it is separate and distinct from other water supplies in the valley.

Miles of submerged pipe line, with perforations on top side, to admit the percolating waters, are already in commission, conveying the flow by gravity from every direction to the company's immense head gates, or main lines of distribution.

We wish to state to our readers, especially those who are seeking locations, that this is truly an exceptional condition for this country, and can have but one meaning, unparalleled and continued prosperity for this beautiful little valley, and a snug fortune for all who are lucky enough to secure a share of its rare offerings at even double the price obtainable at this time. Splendid Addition to Local Convent and Home of Refuge for Unfortunate Girls.

Imposing new main building of Convent of Good Shepherd at Pico and Arlington, Albert C. Martin, architect.

Noble Philanthropy.

HOME OF GOOD SHEPHERD TO BE DOUBLED IN SIZE.

Notable Charity for Shelter and Reclamation of Wayward Girls Outgrows Present Quarters—Plans Out for Imposing New Convent Building and Chapel—Present Structure to Be Completely Remodeled.

THE growth in importance and influence of one of the noblest philanthropies of Los Angeles is exemplified in the announcement that the Convent of the Good Shepherd, maintained by the Sisters of the Good Shepherd as a home of refuge for wayward and unfortunate girls and women, is to be more than doubled in size. The plans which are nearing completion in the offices of the architect, Albert C. Martin, call for the erection of an imposing convent building fronting on Arlington street and joined to the present institution by arcades, together with the construction of separate chapels for the sisters and their charges and the complete remodeling of the building now in use. Bids for the carrying out of the work will be asked for within a few days.

Tentative sketches are being made also for another building to be extended southward along Arlington street at some future time. For the present only the two chapels and the new convent building are contemplated.

At present the power for service of the order in charge of the convent is restricted for lack of space. Crowded into the one building are over 100 girls, together with the sisters in charge. The one building serves the purposes of a home, school and shelter and contains the chapels and assembly-rooms, as well as the living and sleeping quarters of the institution. The necessity for increased facilities has long been apparent to the friends of the work.

ENGLISH ARCHITECTURE.

The new or main convent building will follow the English Renaissance style of architecture and will be faced with golden brick and trimmed in terra cotta. The structure will have a frontage of 192 feet on Arlington street by a depth of thirty-seven feet, and will adjoin the west or gable end of the present building, being connected with it on all three floors by arcaded corridors. The chapels will be placed back of the other buildings. Architecturally the institution will be one of the most imposing maintained by the Sisters of the Good Shepherd in this country.

The first story of the new convent building will be given over to offices, parlors and reception-rooms. The second story will contain a community room, an infirmary and dormitories. The third floor will be devoted entirely to bedrooms. The attic will be well lighted by dormer windows, but will not be finished for occupancy for the present.

The main entrance and vestibule of the building will be finished in oak and will have tile floors. Especial attention will be paid to proper lighting and ventilation. Enclosed glass porches facing the west and south on every floor form an important part of the lighting plan. The structure will be heated from the present plant.

The children's chapel will extend southward from the rear of the present convent and will be 31x78 feet in size. The chapel of the sisters will extend back from the center of the new convent and will be 40x82 feet. One sanctuary, 32x40 feet in size and fitting into the angle of the two chapels at their point of intersection, will serve both. The chapels will be finished in oak, the ceilings being carried out in the Tudor arch effect. That of the sisters will be provided with a choir loft.

The inner court formed by the angle of the chapels and of the two larger buildings will be 92x42 feet in size. This space will be laid out as a lawn and will be made a place of recreation for the charges of the convent.

The present building is to be completely remodeled, all the space at present devoted to the use of the sisters and to the chapels being converted to the uses of the girls seeking shelter at the convent. Upon the completion of this alteration work and the new buildings the capacity of the institution will be increased to approximately 250 girls, whereas at present it is impossible to accommodate many over 100. The present structure will also be made to conform as nearly as possible to the architectural style of the new buildings.

ORDER IS INTERNATIONAL.

The order of the Good Shepherd dates back to the year 1641, when the Rev. John Eudes, a French missionary, in the city of Caen, France, provided a home for wayward girls, whom his zeal had won from the error of their ways. One year later he organized a community with the approval of the bishop of the district, calling the members the Daughters of Our Lady of Charity, and requiring that they take in addition to the vows of poverty, chastity and obedience, a vow to devote themselves forever to the care and instruction of penient women. Twenty-four years later Rome formally recognized the order and the fourth vow imposed by it.

The order was erected into a Generalat in the middle of the last century, the Holy See giving its sanction to the creation of a world-wide mission. Mother Mary of St. Euphrasie, the prime mover of the order as it exists today, was a French woman and a member of the community at Tours, and lived to see the work extended throughout the world.

Louisville, Ky., is the cradle of the order in the United States, a house of refuge for girls having been founded at that place in 1842. From there a number of foundations were made, the first being at St. Louis, from which place emanated the colony of sisters who founded the Los Angeles mission.

The work was established here in 1904 by Mother Incarnation, who died two years later. The first quarters were in the old Ganahl homestead on Grand avenue, near St. Vincent's College. This building becoming overcrowded, the order moved to the Childs mansion at Eleventh and Main streets. The present building was completed in 1905 and was immediately occupied by a number of sisters and forty girls. Since that time over 500 girls have found shelter at the convent.

The institution is at present under the care of Mother St. Raphael, who has as assistants sixteen sisters of the order. One hundred and four girls, ranging in age from 14 to 27, are now sheltered in the convent. These include girls placed in the home by the courts, those committed by parents and many who voluntarily have sought refuge for varying periods of time. Regular school instruction is provided for the girls under 16 years of age and instruction in music is offered to all who have a taste for it. All the charges are taught sewing, cooking, laundry work and housework, and it is the intention that all who leave the convent shall be capable of earning an honest living.

The branch of the work carried on at present is that known as the work for the "penitents," or those girls who have erred and who seek shelter from the world which so bitterly condemns them. The home is not a religious institution in the strict sense of the term, for no girl, whatever her creed, is denied admission so long as there is room for her.

A convent for the instruction and shelter of younger children who are forced to live in environments which are not conducive to proper morals and upbringing will be erected within the next few years, according to the plans of the order. This branch of the work is known as the foundation for "preservation" and is designed to take innocent girls in charge before they have to come to any harm and to pilot them through the most susceptible period of their lives, equipping them meanwhile for the battle of life. In the same building will be housed those girls who desire to lead religious lives and to prepare themselves for the service of the church. The property of the order extends from Pico street to Sixteenth along Arlington and is ample for all future requirements.

The work of the Sisters of the Good Shepherd is one of consecration and sacrifice and is supported almost entirely by charitably inclined friends of the order. Of the 100 girls in charge of the local sisters only twenty are supported from outside sources. Not only those of the Roman Catholic faith, but hundreds of other creeds, are represented in the list of annual contributors.

THIS BUSIEST SUMMER.

Heat no Deterrent to Real Estate Activity in Imperial Valley—Cotton Growers Encouraged at Prices.

EL CENTRO, July 27.—The warm weather has little effect on the real estate market, and those who are in close touch with the situation declare that this is the busiest summer they have ever known here. Not only are many newcomers securing homes here, but old residents of the valley are increasing their holdings.

E. F. Surface, who, a few months ago, purchased a twenty-five-foot lot on the south side of Main street, west of the Courthouse, has bought an additional frontage of fifty feet, also unimproved, in the same block. The price paid was $4000, and the property was purchased of C. H. Langmuir.

Another sale of Main-street frontage has just been completed, whereby T. J. Douglass of Los Angeles becomes the owner of the lot on the northeast corner of Main and Seventh streets, formerly owned by the People's Abstract and Trust Company. The consideration is said to have been $3500. The property has a frontage of fifty feet on Main street and a depth of 140 feet.

One of the largest transactions of the summer in ranch property was the sale made this week of 320 acres near the international boundary line, east of Calexico, owned by Burt L. Young and A. M. Shenk. The ranch, together with 300 shares of water stock in Imperial Water Company No. 1, was sold to the Imperial Valley Creamery Company for a consideration of close to $40,000. It is the intention of the new owners to make of it a model dairy farm. The ranch was originally owned and improved by Emmet S. McCollum, and was sold by him to Young six months ago on a long-term agreement.

Another important sale was that of the ranch owned by A. M. Kelsey of Mesquite Lake. The purchaser is A. A. Cox, who gives in exchange a twenty-acre orange grove in San Bernardino. The consideration involved was $20,000.

According to estimates just made by Daly Bros., & Gage, the aggregate amount of cotton planted in the Imperial Valley this year is 8365 acres. Cotton growers are encouraged at price indications, and, although the acreage planted is smaller than last year, it is expected that the returns received will be fully as large, on account of the higher price this year.

TEN HOMES STARTED.

For Perishable Truck.

GREEN BEANS SHIPPED FROM TEXAS TO BOSTON.

Significant Experiment With the Aid of Pre-Cooling Process—Southern California's Green Vegetables May Be Placed Upon the Market Thousands of Miles Away, in Fine Condition and Flavor.

BY W. D. HORNADAY.

SCIENCE has improved upon the ordinary methods of refrigeration and cold storage. There is coming rapidly into use in the vegetable and citrus fruit growing regions of Southern California, Texas and Florida a new process by which perishable truck and fruits may be shipped long distances in their original condition and bring big prices out of season. It means that the consumer of these products will no longer have cause to complain that the fruit is insipid, that the vegetables are wilted and lacking in crispness.

By pre-cooling the products at place of shipment, Southern California's green vegetables are placed upon the market thousands of miles away in the same condition that they were when they came from the garden. They are fresh. An event of much importance in produce circles of the country took place last April when a carload of pre-cooled green beans was shipped from San Benito, Tex., to Boston, where they sold at wholesale for $3.50 per bushel, the total proceeds of the car being $2100. But for the fact that these beans were put through the chilled-air process as soon as they were picked they could never have reached their destination in marketable condition, it is said.

What is being done to fruits and vegetables in the matter of placing them in prime condition for transportation may also be applied to sea foods, products of packing-houses and dairies and dressed poultry and eggs.

By delivering these various perishable products to the consumer with the least possible deterioration human life is supported and benefited.

What is known as the intermittent vacuum pre-cooling process has proved so successful that the establishment of a number of plants in addition to those now in operation is contemplated by railroads and other interests identified with the growing and shipment of perishable products. In California there are pre-cooling plants at Colton and Roseville.

The fact that the railroads are taking such an active interest in this new process is not at all remarkable. Less ice is required for the cars and this gives more room for the products. An average of 16 per cent. more loading room is available in the pre-cooling cars than in the cars where the old refrigerating process is used. This enables an increase in efficiency of equipment directly remunerative to the carrier and indirectly advantageous to the producer, without any increase in dead weight. It is shown that pre-cooling retards the development or decay of the products. It therefore lengthens the period within which the shipment may be safely held and gives to the carrier the added benefit of avoiding extraordinary and expensive speed for trains handling the traffic. Another very material advantage to the railroads is that under the intermittent vacuum method a car and its contents is cooled in about four hours, while to properly refrigerate a car under the old method of icing requires two or three days. Under the icing plan it is also necessary that the cars shall be stopped and held at points en route for new icing. All this means delay to the traffic and is costly to the railroads.

THE PROCESS.

The process of pre-cooling is interesting. Ducts leading to the air coolers in pre-cooling houses are attached to the openings on top of the car, where the ice is put in, and by means of a fan in the pre-cooling house the warm air in the car is exhausted. At the same time another duct, leading from the air cooler in the pre-cooling house to the cars to be pre-cooled, is attached to the door opening in the side of the car, and cold air is blown in through the operation of the fan.

The intermittent vacuum process consists in cutting off the supply of cold air for a brief period while the exhaust continues in operation, producing a partial vacuum within the car, which causes the warm fruit in the interior to part with its gases as well as its heat. The air that is withdrawn during this period of intermittence is exhausted into the atmosphere. The period of exhaust with the air supply duct closed, is determined by the temperature in the car and is regulated automatically by means of thermostats. The vacuum exhaust is continued, ordinarily, for about five seconds and recurs at varying intervals, according to the conditions present in the car and in the fruit, usually, at from five to fifteen-minute intervals.

As soon as conditions within the car indicate a sufficiency of vacuum the automatic regulating device closes the valve that allows the air in the exhaust tube to pass into the atmosphere and at the same time opens the valve in the supply duct passing cold air into the car, so that a circulation of cold air through the car is resumed. The exhaust now enters the cold air chamber, where it is chilled in passing over the cooling coils and deposits upon same the moisture and gases with which it was laden from the fruit, or rather that small portion which is left in the air after the vacuum part of the process; the air returning to the car being thus not only chilled, but dried and purified. The valves that thus automatically shift the air circuit are cross-connected so that they operate in unison from a single mover.

According to an official report, the instruments for determining this condition of lessened and pressure by regulation of valves, have shown from two to two and one-half inches of vacuum in the center of package when this condition has been created, with a consequent reduction in temperature in the center of the fruit itself so that after two or three hours of the intermittent treatment the fruit has been reduced on an average of from 30 deg. to 40 deg. and an absolute equalization of temperature, which, in most cases would average from 65 deg. to 70. deg. down to a temperature of from 34 deg. to 38 deg. Fahrenheit, this being the temperature of the boards forming the inner layer of the car body itself and not the temperature of the airing car, which would, of course, correspond to the temperature of the blast used, and which, in certain cases, has been as low as 5 deg. Fahrenheit without injurious effect!

A CALIFORNIA IDEA.

The invention of this pre-cooling process was the outcome of heavy losses experienced by citrus fruit growers of California in the transportation of their product. The losses of the members of the California Fruit Exchange amounted to $60,000 to $75,000 annually from deterioration of the fruit en route, due to improper refrigeration of the cars. A. R. Sprague, who was president and manager of the California Fruit Exchange in 1895, began experimenting with the precooling of the fruit, and as a result of his investigations he invented the vacuum process that is now in use at the several plants which the railroads have established.

It is claimed that as a result of the precooling of cars, the fruit and vegetable growers of California, Texas and Florida, where plants are now in operation, are able to derive an annual benefit of more than $2,000,000 above what they obtained under the old icing process.

According to an estimate made by J. W. Culp, vice-president of the

SANTA MONICA CANYON

Continues to Be the Center of Attraction for Investors

It takes something out of the ordinary to be an attraction center. It takes something a little different and more meritorious to command the attention of the buying public today.

Investors everywhere called for a subdivision that did not savor of the old cut and dried offerings. They wanted an opportunity, fresh and crisp, with direct avenues to profit. That's why they jumped at Santa Monica Canyon offerings immediately and boosted the sales in a few weeks to over $250,000.

Moderate Prices and Easy Terms

You who want to get away from the crowded city—you who love the beauties of nature—you who enjoy the daily dip in the ocean—you who love the peaceful quiet of a canyon retreat—why don't you break the retarding chains today and live where life's worth living—out in glorious Santa Monica Canyon, where the mountains meet the sea? You can find many canyons and beaches, but only one ideal combination of the two—the Beach-Canyon ideal, Santa Monica Canyon.

This will be an all-the-year-'round home place near Santa Monica and Venice. Already many business and professional men have expressed the intention of erecting substantial homes. BEAN CULTURE IN BACK COUNTRY.

RIVERSIDE RANCHERS ARE MAKING INTERESTING EFFORT.

Experiment Demonstrates that With a Small Amount of Water the Flowers Do Not Drop and the Soil Is Greatly Benefited by the Crop Variation.

ETHANAC, July 27.—Bean culture in Riverside county has been tried out this year by a few experienced men from the coast. While the results have not been definitely successful at first trial the claim is made that reasonable returns can be expected in faverable seasons with proper care and cultivation. Indeed, the crop this year is better than could have been expected, as the season is unfavorable for any crop, the planting was done on ground that has been grain farmed for many years, the soil was plowed deep when dry and the beans were put in three or four weeks later than they should have been.

The blackeyes withstood the hot weather successfully and are showing quite a respectable yield of pods. A second year on the same ground should bring gratifying success, as beans on new ground are poor yielders, and the farmers will better know how to cope with conditions next season.

The vicinity where the experiments are being carried out is about twenty-six miles southeast of Riverside, a dry farming section that has never been utilized for anything but grain and hay. The rainfall is probably up to the usual average of Southern California, but the summers are hot and dry, without fog and distinctly different from the bean growing climate nearer the coast. However, as this is a new country as to crops other than grain, every trial at something different or more profitable is watched closely by all ranchers.

Bean cultivation has always been discouraged, it being declared that the hot weather blights the blossom, but the experiments that determined this conclusion were on a decidedly small scale and not carried to the second or third year. There are many different varieties in beans, too, and probably the kind that can withstand hot weather was not tried.

The most notable experiments this year were carried out by J. G. Eckstein, who comes from Norwalk, and J. W. Ogam of Carpenteria. Each has about twenty acres of different varieties. It is evidently proved that the lima and pink beans cannot survive the heat of July. However, the plant itself does fairly well and might possibly be grown for hay on grain land for a summer fallow crop.

It is certain that the pink bean or lima can be grown with water. Mr. Eckstein has quite a show garden of strong beans that have secured a slight amount of water from his windmill. The hot weather seems to have no effect on the blossoms when the roots are damp, in fact the blossoms are well protected with foliage and the beans are well out of harm's way under the plant. Considering the heart-breaking expense of pumping water for alfalfa, and the uncertainty of grain farming, it has been argued that the best paying crop on irrigated ground for this vicinity would be beans. A minimum amount of water would be necessary, the returns would be far above grain and a bean crop is as good as summer fallowing.

As a matter of course, if a success can be made of beans, it will speak for better farming. For many years the back country of Riverside county has been farmed haphazard. Grain has been scratched in for so long that the top soil was completely exhausted, necessitating deep plowing. But ranchers are fast learning that merely deep plowing is not summer-fallowing, nor does summer fallowing mean plowing in the summer time.

It has been shown time and again that to plow while the ground is dry is mere folly. This last season of grain farming has shown a greater contrast than ever before in proper methods of farming in the semi-arid regions. Those who planted on properly tilled soil had average crops, while those who did not had little or no returns whatever and are disgusted with Southern California as a farming country. This year has proved conclusively that proper methods must be applied in ranching to make success certain. If beans prove reasonably satisfactory it means better and more precise cultivation with definite results in view for each operation. No weeds will be allowed to carry away the moisture and greatest care will be exercised to retain the moisture and not stir it unnecessarily.

TEXANS BUY ACREAGE.

A piece of close-in acreage was purchased during the past week by a syndicate of Texas investors, from S. C. Graham, oil and real estate operator. The property comprises twenty-seven acres adjoining the Ivy-wild subdivision, on the Venice Short Line, and is a portion of the Rancho Rincon de Los Bueyes. The holding has a frontage upon the National boulevard; is one block from the Air Line, and is highly improved, much of the land being set out in walnuts and fruit trees. It is the intention of the syndicate to subdivide the tract into quarter, half-acre and one-acre pieces. The purchase price is given at approximately $30,000. Charles C. Burnett and C. P. Blackmore of Charles C. Burnett & Co., were the agents in the transaction.

HISTORIC RANCH SOLD.

Highland Home Property at Beaumont to Be Subdivided and Placed on Market by Local Firm.

Selover and Whipple with Strong and Dickinson have closed a deal with C. L. and Frank C. Nye and A. Adair of Riverside for the subdivision and sale of the old Highland Home ranch at Beaumont. The transaction involved a consideration of $110,000.

The property consists of over 600 acres, a part of which is now in bearing orchards in a high state of cultivation. There are valuable water rights, together with other substantial improvements in the way of buildings and a complete system for the distribution of the water. The entire tract lies 2800 feet above sea level.

This old rancho has been frequently mentioned in some of the State histories. Ruins of the old stage station and corrals were only recently removed. The ranch was a favorite stopping place before the advent of the southern branch of the Southern Pacific road. Many men identified with the early history of California were guests there.

The surveys for the subdivision of the property have just been completed.

ORGANIZATION COMPLETE.

With the consumation of a deal whereby Theodore Weisendanger, president of the Conservative Investment Company, transferred his personal property holdings, said to be valued at $1,500,000, to the Conservative Investment Company, all legal steps toward the formation of the Conservative Investment Company were completed during the past week. The properties transferred consist of the Roosevelt Apartments, No. 334 South Figueroa street; Taft Apartments, No. 330 South Figueroa street; Seattle Apartments, No. 806 West Fourth street; Geneva Apartments, No. 205 Fremont avenue; Parkland Apartments, No. 911 Drummond avenue; Portland Apartments, the Park Apartments and the Golden Apartments on West Seventh, together with several other smaller apartments in various parts of the city. Other than the apartment buildings the transfer includes 200 bungalows in Hollywood, Alhambra and Los Angeles. Fifty flat buildings of minor importance were also transferred. Other minor parcels of lots in various parts of the city were included in the transfer. These are valued at $10,000 to $60,000, and will be held by the company as an investment.

TO SEVENTH AND SPRING.

A lease on practically the entire third floor of the new Van Nuys building, at Seventh and Spring streets, has been taken by the Western Building and Investment Company, now occupying the same corner at Second and Broadway that is used by Strong and Dickinson, selling agents for the investment concern. The building company has been forced, by growth of business, to secure larger quarters. It owns a large lot on Spring street, between Sixth and Seventh streets, and has completed plans for the construction there of a modern skyscraper. Existing leases, however, will delay for some time the demolition of the structures now on the site and meantime the new offices will be taken in the Van Nuys building. As quickly as possible new furnishings will be installed.

GREEN BEANS SHIPPED.

Southern Pacific Railway, the losses from the decay of California citrus fruits were variously estimated at between $500,000 and $1,500,000 annually. Besides the enormous saving in the matter of preventing deterioration and decay of products while being transported to market, the growers, by reason of the precooling process, are able to obtain top prices for fruits and vegetables, it is claimed. This fact was amply proved during the last two or three seasons.

It is pointed out that the old system of gravity circulation of cold air from ice bunkers in cars is essentially ineffective in securing uniform temperatures for upper and lower tiers of the loads. The dense cold air seeks the bottom of the car and gradually cools the fruit and drives the heat and gases to the top where the temperatures are at the end of the trip always higher than in the lower tiers. By pre-cooling the cars and loads comparatively little icing is necessary to carry them to destination and the temperature remains uniform throughout the interior, varying, according to repeated tests, less than an average of 2 deg. from time of shipment until opened at the unloading point.

PROFESSOR'S VIEWS.

J. C. Whitten, professor of horticulture of the Missouri State University, in a communication to B. F. Yoakum, chairman of the Board and Executive Committee of the Frisco Railroad, gave his views in regard to the pre-cooling process in part as follows:

"I am of the opinion that this pre-cooling method has a distinct advantage over ordinary refrigeration, in that it gets the heat out of the fruit more quickly. Even before this pre-cooling process was introduced, fruit growers and shippers have been more and more impressed with the fact that the quicker the heat could be gotten out of the fruit, the better it would keep. This is emphasized by the fact that the shippers of perishable fruits have found it advantageous to ice the cars even before the fruit goes into them.

"The more alert men who stored apples of semi-perishable variety, have emphasized the fact that the temperature of the storage house ought to be run down six, eight or even ten degrees below freezing for a few days, in order to cool the fruit through quickly, and then allow the temperature to rise to approximately the freezing point of water. Growers who handle perishable fruit have emphasized the desirability of packing and handling in cool, shady sheds, so the fruit would not heat through. Not infrequently in a hot autumn, men have put large masses of fruit into refrigeration and have had it hold its heat long enough virtually to spoil or to become over-ripe before it could cool through even though the registered atmospheric temperature of the storage room was at the freezing point of water.

"I believe the advantage of the pre-cooling process is that with this intermittent vacuum process, the heat is drawn out of the package when the air is exhausted and cold air is put in its place when the cool draft is again turned on. This repetition of exhausting and then cooling quickly effectually displaces the heat and hot air around the fruit with the cooler air. When the fruit is gathered in hot weather the breaking down process often goes on so rapidly that quickly reducing the temperature of the fruit is of the utmost importance. Practically the only gas which could be liberated in the fruit packages in any appreciable quantity is carbon dioxide which is the by-product of ripening of fruit or of the decay of any vegetable matter. With a given temperature, fruit will not break down quite so fast in an atmosphere charged with carbon dioxide as it would in common air. With a given temperature fruits will not break the little of this gas that is given off would tend slightly to retard rather than to accelerate the ripening or breaking down process. The great advantage, then, in exhausting it by the vacuum process is to get the heat out, not to get out the carbon dioxide."

The United States Department of Agriculture has been lending its assistance to the general introduction in fruit and vegetable growing regions of the pre-cooling process. A series of experiments of this method of cooling the products was made in California under the auspices of the Federal government and they proved highly successful, it is stated. In a statement on this subject the Department of Agriculture said :

"The air in a car of fruit that is cooled before shipment is comparatively dry and pure throughout the trip, in contrast with the moist, impure air in the car under ordinary icing. The quality of the fruit is therefore preserved to a greater extent when it is pre-cooled. It is a common impression that a cold temperature injures the quality of fruit. This is not necessarily the case. The flavor of fruit from cold temperatures is not always good, but the impaired quality is generally caused by the absorption of impure odors while the fruit is warm. The air in a closed car under ordinary icing is charged with the gases given off by the hot fruit, but when it is cooled before shipment both respiration and transpiration are retarded and the air of the car is comparatively dry and pure."

"Another advantage of pre-cooling is that the shipper can allow the fruit to develop a high color and a fine flavor on the tree. Under the present method of handling, quick-ripening fruits like the peach and plum, that are shipped long distances, have to be picked when partly developed in order to protect them against the ripening that occurs in transit. The quality of the fruit is not developed, and it arrives in market with an insipid flavor, giving a region in which this practice is followed a reputation for fruit of poor quality.

"The losses from over-ripeness are equally complex. The fruit ripens rapidly as soon as it is picked and the ripening needs to be checked quickly at this time by a cold temperature. The grower may hasten the ripening by delivering the fruit to a car in a warm condition and by delaying the shipment after the fruit is picked. Once in the car the fruit continues to ripen until it is thoroughly refrigerated throughout."

RUSHING TRACT WORK.

A steam grader has been added to the force of men and teams engaged on the street work in Chester square, the new 900-lot tract between Slauson and Vernon avenues on Western avenue, and the improvements will be pushed as rapidly as possible. Additional water pipe is being laid, and the Los Angeles Gas and Electric Corporation is mapping the tract for its gas mains.

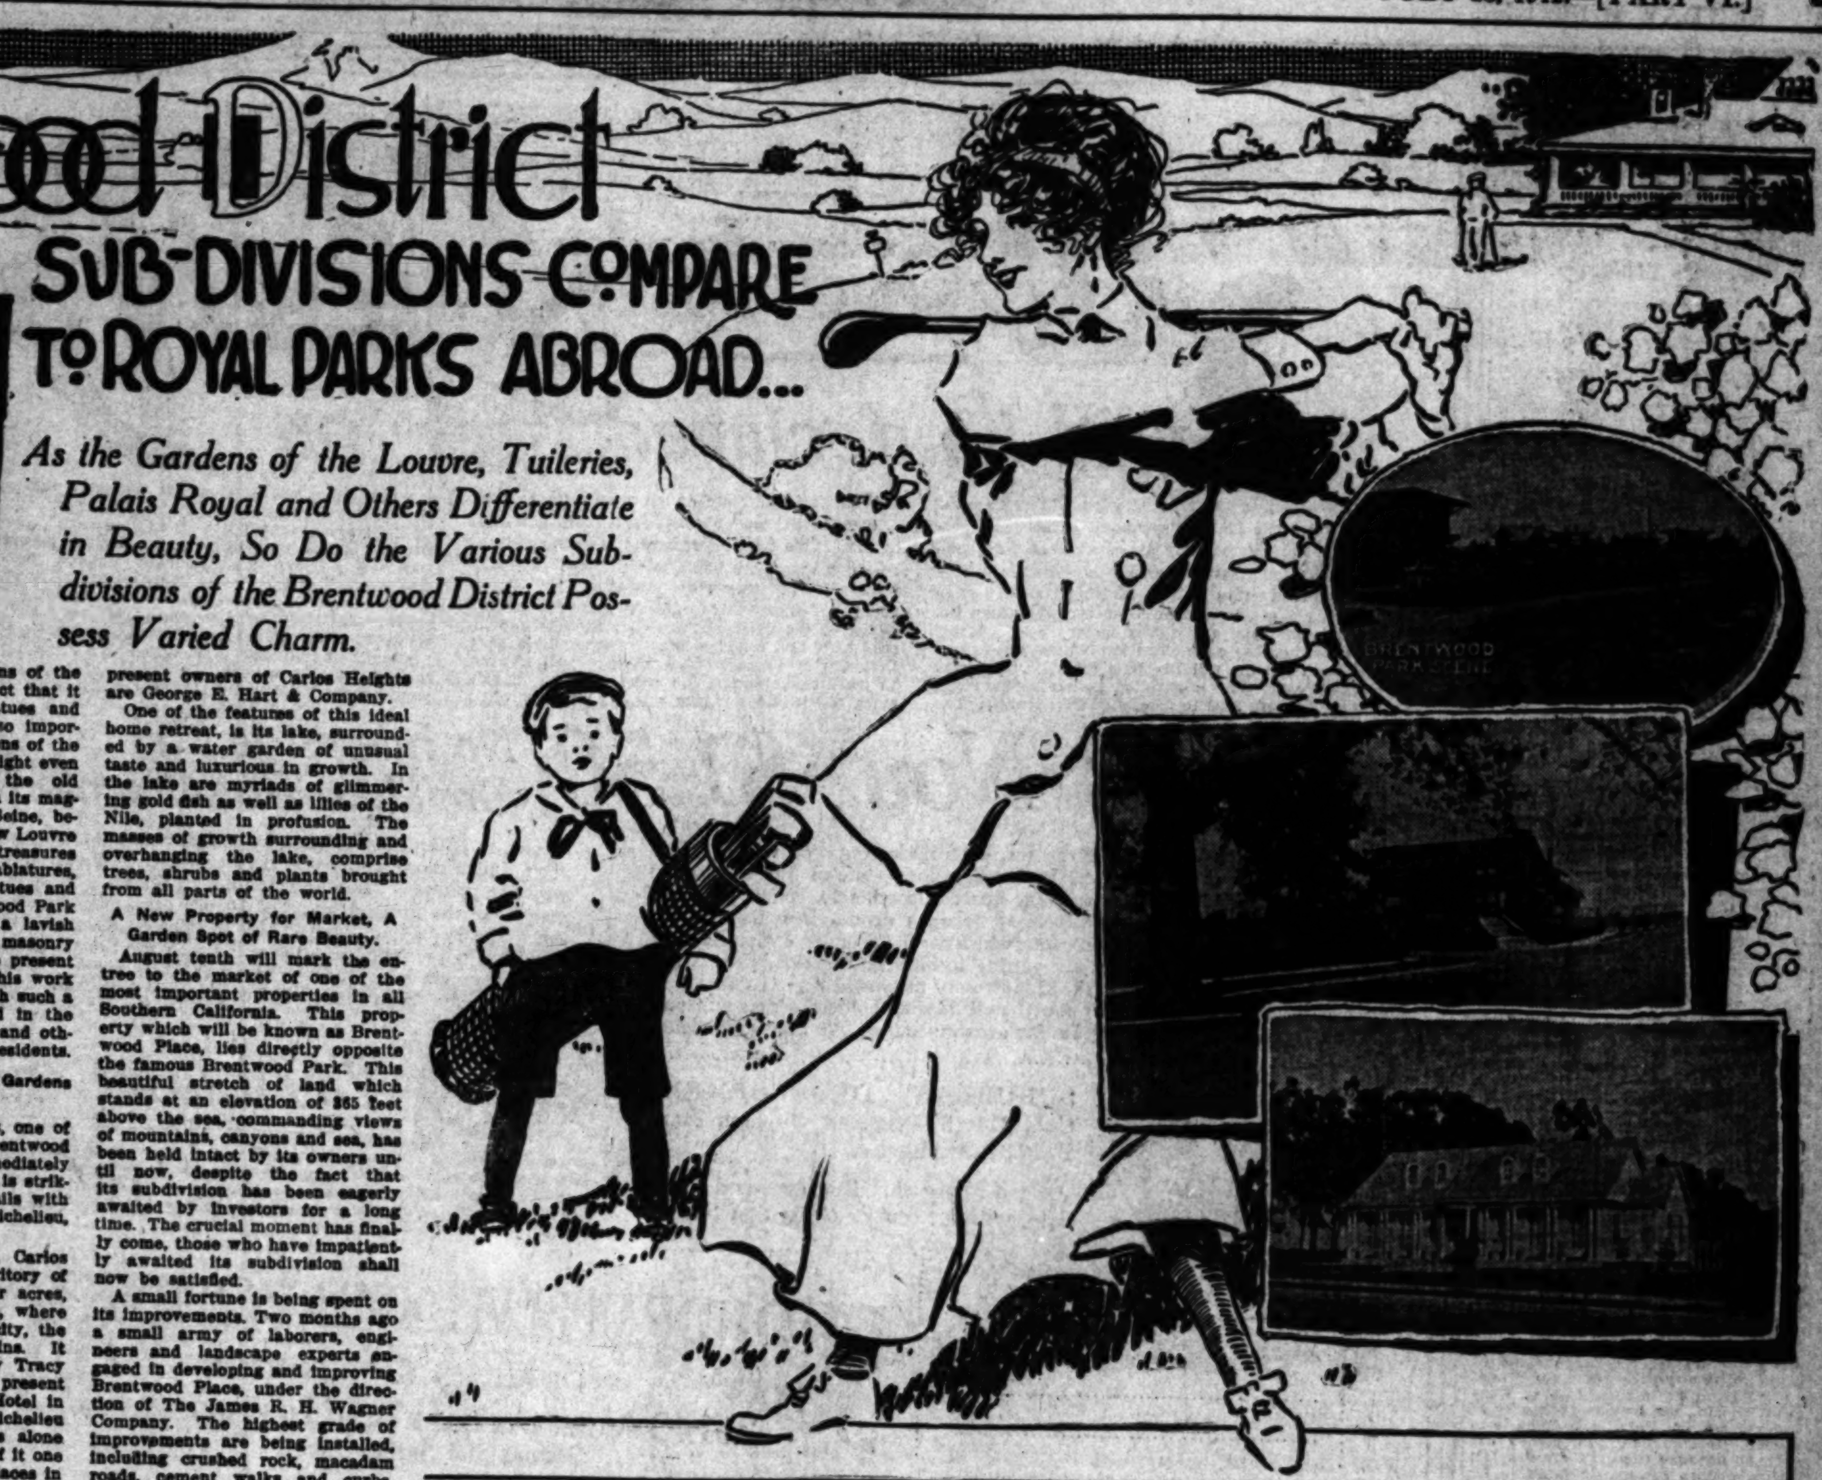
Brentwood District

SUB-DIVISIONS COMPARE TO ROYAL PARKS ABROAD...

WATER GARDEN OF CARLOS HEIGHTS



As the Gardens of the Louvre, Tuileries, Palais Royal and Others Differentiate in Beauty, So Do the Various Subdivisions of the Brentwood District Possess Varied Charm.

What is known as the Brentwood district, Santa Monica, which more accurately described, is the territory lying between the foothills and Montana boulevard, and Seventh street and the Soldiers' Home, has come to be regarded among the most traveled, as one of the beauty spots of the earth.

It is composed of a number of some of the most ideal and beautiful home parks in the United States, each possessing certain distinguishing details, yet each as alluring in its way as the various parks of royalty in Europe.

History tells us that the famous Tuileries, having its inception in the regime of Charles IX, and its extinction during the Commune, gave shelter to five kings, only one of whom found his way to the tomb, while three of the others were finally exiled and the remaining monarch was sent to the scaffold.

While there is no such blood curdling history in connection with any one of the subdivisions of this ideal land, Indian warfare and the occasional conflicts that arose between the Indian and the white man, being alike the only historical blots—if they may be termed as such—on this placid and beautiful territory—yet the natural beauty of this Brentwood section and man-established embellishments, tourists are constantly comparing with the gardens of the many historical palaces abroad.

Brentwood Park Contrasted To Famous French Parks.

Brentwood Park, owned by the Braly-Janss Co., with its mass of graveled walks, winding roadways and ornamental trees and superb lawns, might well rival the beauties of the famous gardens of the Tuileries, omitting the fact that it has but few of the statues and colonnades, that played so important a factor in the gardens of the sixteenth century; or it might even bear comparison with the old Louvre of Charles V, with its magnificent gardens on the Seine, before Francis I built the new Louvre with its Renaissance art treasures of facades, caryatids, entablatures, festoons, bold reliefs, statues and columns. Though Brentwood Park does not display such a lavish amount of such stone and masonry art treasurers as does the present Louvre, still as much of this work as would be consistent with such a home park may be found in the many luxurious Japanese and other gardens of its various residents.

Carlos Heights Not Unlike Gardens of Palais Royal.

Beautiful Carlos Heights, one of the treasurers of the Brentwood district, and in fact, immediately adjoining Brentwood Park, is strikingly similar in many details with the hybird palaces of Richelieu, the Palais Royal.

This noted show place, Carlos Heights, comprises a territory of one hundred and sixty-four acres, situated high on the mesa, where it overlooks the sea, the city, the canyons and the mountains. It was laid out originally by Tracy Drake, the well-known present owner of the Blackstone Hotel in Chicago. This modern Richelieu spent on its improvements alone $50,000, planning to make of it one of the most superb home places in all Southern California, in the achievement of which ambitions, he was highly successful. The present owners of Carlos Heights are George E. Hart & Company.

One of the features of this ideal home retreat, is its lake, surrounded by a water garden of unusual taste and luxurious in growth. In the lake are myriads of glimmering gold fish as well as lilies of the Nile, planted in profusion. The masses of growth surrounding and overhanging the lake, comprise trees, shrubs and plants brought from all parts of the world.

A New Property for Market, A Garden Spot of Rare Beauty.

August tenth will mark the entree to the market of one of the most important properties in all Southern California. This property which will be known as Brentwood Place, lies directly opposite the famous Brentwood Park. This beautiful stretch of land which stands at an elevation of 365 feet above the sea, commanding views of mountains, canyons and sea, has been held intact by its owners until now, despite the fact that its subdivision has been eagerly awaited by investors for a long time. The crucial moment has finally come, those who have impatiently awaited its subdivision shall now be satisfied.

A small fortune is being spent on its improvements. Two months ago a small army of laborers, engineers and landscape experts engaged in developing and improving Brentwood Place, under the direction of The James R. H. Wagner Company. The highest grade of improvements are being installed, including crushed rock, macadam roads, cement walks and curbs, water, gas and electricity. The beautiful parking strips are to be planted in an alternating line of some of the finest plants, trees and shrubs obtainable.

Although in perfect keeping with the other high-grade subdivisions surrounding it in beauty, transportation, climatic advantages and improvements, this ideal property is to be offered at prices and terms that will place these large villa lots within the hands of the investors and homeseekers of the most modest means.

The land is high and is said to be adapted for residence purposes. The price is given at $120,000, and included the Ocean Park Heights water plant. The seller was represented in the transaction by C. F. W. Palmer and Charles L. Hubbard, president of the Charles L. Hubbard Company. The purchaser was represented by Charles A. Funk & Co.

PLAN NATURAL STADIUM.

Athletic Field of Occidental College to Be One of Finest in West. No Indoor Track.

The athletic field of Occidental College at its new location in the Eagle Rock Valley will be one of the finest in the West, being of the same dimensions and general lay-out as the famous Franklin Field of the University of Pennsylvania at Philadelphia. The ground will be graded to the contour of a natural stadium and will eventually be improved in a lasting way. For the present the bleachers are to be of wood, whitewashed.

The gymnasium will be unique in that it will be largely in the open air. It will consist of two buildings joined by a colonnade, the semi-enclosure between being utilized for training purposes. The indoor running track, so indispensable in the wintry East, will be dispensed with at Occidental.

Has the Habit.

GLENDALE KEEPS ON GROWING.

SUMMER'S BUILDING TOTALS GREATEST EVER.

Business Double that of Year Ago. Trustees Ask People for Over Three Hundred Thousand Dollars for Improvements—Ranchers Are Optimistic.

[Special Correspondence of the Times.]

GLENDALE, July 27.—Glendale has contracted the growth habit. H. M. Banker, building inspector of this city, stated this week: "The receipts of my office last Tuesday were the largest they have been in a single day since my appointment as building inspector of this city several years ago. During the past year there has been a wonderful growth in building activities here, the business in this line being about double what it was a year ago." In the course of six years, at which time the Pacific Electric line was extended from Los Angeles into the heart of this valley, this section has grown from a strawberry patch and orange grove and vineyard into a modern, thriving city.

The following building permits were granted here during the past week: A Laurent, six-room house, No. 466 Rock Glenn avenue, $2000; J. W. Venable, No. 128 North Kenwood street, seven-room house, $2500; B. H. White, No. 133 North Louise street, seven-room house, $3000; J. P. Shropshire, Nos. 409-411 Broadway, brick garage, $4500; W. H. Eurick, No. 219 Maryland avenue, five-room house, $2000; H. W. Vanderhoff, No. 201 Jackson street, seven-room bungalow, $2500, and C. J. Sullivan, No. 251 East Fifth street, five-room bungalow, $1500.

Sketches are being drawn for T. W. Wright, real estate agent of this city, for a brick block to cost about $20,000. Several days ago Wright purchased the southeast corner of Brand boulevard and Broadway for the consideration of $10,000, this being the highest price ever paid for a lot in this city. The block projected will be strictly modern and will be erected on this site. It is understood that when the building is completed the corner room will be occupied by the First National Bank of Glendale, which has offices at this time in the Masonic block.

Chandler & Lawson are starting two new homes this week, one to be located on Kenwood street, the other on Lomita avenue. These homes will be of seven rooms, and will cost about $3000 each. This firm erects on the average forty houses a year in this city

Two homes erected by the firm were sold this week, one to Mrs. A. Lewis of Los Angeles for $4800. This home is located on Jackson street and contains seven rooms. The other house is on Lomita avenue and was sold to A. J. Casebeer. It contains seven rooms, is on a lot 50x150 feet in size and was sold for a consideration of $4500. This firm also sold a lot at the corner of First and Louise streets to C. J. Orff for $675 cash.

The Walker-Middleworth company reports the sale of a lot on Jackson, north of First street, in the Livingston tract, to P. S. Venable, of Redondo and a lot on Kenwood street, between First and Doran streets, from C. O. Pulliam to J. W. Venable.

Work was started this week on the improvement of Sixth street, this being the conecting strip of road between the splendid boulevard from Pasadena through Eagle Rock to the eastern limits of this city. When finished, this road will connect with the Pasadena-to-the-Ocean boulevard at Sixth and Glendale avenue. Peter L. Ferry will do the improvement work at the contracted price of $20,000.

Directly in the path of this growth habit comes the calling this week by the City Trustees of a bond election to the extent of $315,000, this to be used for local improvement, divided as follows: Municipal water system, $225,000; public parks, $65,000; firehouse and apparatus, $20,000; street building and repairing machinery, $5000. The present water supply is extremely unsatisfactory. It is proposed to purchase two parks, one on the east side and the other on the west side of town, the former to cost $20,000, the latter, $45,000. With the $20,000 for fire protection a centrally located lot will be purchased on which will be erected a modern firehouse. An auto fire engine will also be bought.

Fred R. Sinclaire of this city has been awarded the contract for doing the grading, paving, curbing and sidewalking of the new eighty-acre subdivision in the large Richardson estate in the southern end of this valley. This tract is just south of the Pacific Electric track and west of the Southern Pacific line. The tract was purchased and is being improved by a wealthy realty man from St. Louis. A number of excellent residences will be erected just as soon as the streets are put through.

Lemons and oranges are doing well here this year. Although the crops are a little lighter than in previous seasons, it is believed that slightly better prices will counteract the effect of the shortage. The Valencia season is just closing and the lemons are beginning to come in again. The fruit is of a better grade than usual. It is estimated that at least 300 cars of these fruits will be sent from this valley this year. From the Sparr packinghouse, seventy-five cars of oranges and thirty cars of lemons have already been sent out.

Several thousands of boxes of apricots were sold this year to the canneries in Pasadena. The output of the Ross ranch, which was fancy fruit, was sold to the local market in Los Angeles. Many cots were dried by the ranchers this season. The price for this fruit is keeping well up, the retail price at local stores being three cents per pound. Early garden truck is beginning to come in and is commanding a good price. Taken altogether this season is proving exceedingly profitable to ranchers of this valley.

GROWTH IS STEADY.

STANDARD OIL TOWN LIVELY.

EL SEGUNDO, July 27.—One of the striking evidences of El Segundo's steady and remarkable growth is the erection of first-class residences, hotels, rooming and apartment-houses.

The Concord house of thirty-three rooms was recently completed and is first-class in construction and modern conveniences. Five handsome residences are also nearing completion and five others are under construction.

The Walsh apartment-house is nearly finished, and plans are now under way for the erection of two twenty-suite apartment-houses.

SELLS TEN-ACRE GROVE.

W. H. White has sold a ten-acre grove of lemons and navels, situated at the corner of Valley Center and Covina avenues, in San Dimas, to Oliver J. Parker of Pittsburgh, Pa., for $2500. The deal was consummated by the San Dimas Real Estate Company.

TRADING BRISK FOR OVER WEEK.

Southern Investors Adding to Extensive Holdings.

Development Keeps Up With Buying and Selling.

Activity Is Brisk Through Strathmore District.

PORTERVILLE, July 27.—Last week's quiet realty trading was evidently in preparation for the activity of the present, since business has picked up at a marvelous rate and the trading has been as brisk as at any time during the year, in spite of the rather disagreeable weather. Southern investors continue to buy freely in this district, and as an indication of the manner in which Southern California capital has come here it may be stated from carefully-compiled figures that in the Dinuba and Reedley foothills alone Los Angeles and other investors from south of the Tehachepi have purchased almost 8000 acres of land in the past twelve months. This means development for the district, as in almost every case the new owners expect to start at once on improvement of their places.

A Los Angeles capitalist made the largest purchase of the week and in the district which is already largely owned by Los Angeles people, when he bought a full section of the famous Simon estate lands in the Reedley-Dinuba foothills, paying $100 per acre net for the tract, or $64,000 in all. The new owner is A. B. Bevans, and he is here to take charge of his new property. He expects to start at once on development work and will make of the holding a show citrus orchard.

Edwin McKinney, a former business man of this city, who is now in business in the vineyard district, has sold to Anton Konda, a large owner of Porterville realty, four lots in the Hermosa colony, this tract including some fine orange land. Konda has not announced his intention with regard to the property, although it is not believed he will put the tract out to citrus trees. McKinney recently disposed of a portion of his extensive orange-grove holdings in the Blacherne tract to southern investors.

G. L. Gids, a local newspaper man, has made one of the large deals of the week in city property, having purchased from E. L. Harrelson of Kansas City, Mo., the business property at the corner of Putnam avenue and Second street. The new owner expects to improve the property this fall with a modern newspaper home.

ANGELENO BUYS TRACT.

William H. Shryx, manager of the National Colonies, has sold one and one-half sections of his personal holdings in the Deer Creek district to H. Proctor of Los Angeles. The consideration is given at $80,000. In company with Proctor when he closed the deal was Harry Norris, also of Los Angeles. Proctor expects to make his home here later in the fall and will then undertake a portion of the development he has planned. The land is adapted to orange culture and can be cut up into a number of exceptionally fine orchards.

J. J. Sammons, formerly of Southern California, has sold his 160-acre alfalfa ranch in the Woodville district to Will Hershberger, a young orchardist of the Strathmore district. The property is close to the Woodville townsite of the Big Four Railroad and is a choice property. The price of the land is not given. Sammons has purchased city property here.

C. F. Courday of Southern California has purchased from the Strathmore Land Company a twenty-acre tract in the Strathmore foothills, the land being adapted to orchard culture. Among the projected improvements is a fine bungalow home. When this is completed he expects to start planting to oranges. The opening of the Strathmore ranch, which is owned by an English syndicate under the corporate name of the Strathmore Land Company, has meant a great deal to the orange district, increasing the orchard area as it does by about 10,000 acres and the trading in Strathmore foothill land has been brisk. Considerable of the property, however, has been sold on time contracts in which contracts for deeds are passed rather than the title to property and only a few of the real transfers have been announced.

Emily Berringer has sold to Evan Hughes of Southern California, a lot of the California Citrus Colony lands, together with the young orchard and nursery stock which the land includes. The new owner has also purchased a ten-acre tract of the Pollard lands. He expects to further improve both his holdings in the near future. The Pollard tract land is unimproved.

H. L. Bleecker, an eastern investor, has received a deed to a thirty-acre tract of the D. A. Vaughn lands in the Deer Creek district. Bleecker is one of the many who will spend a large sum of money in improvement of his Deer Creek lands this fall. The water situation in the Vaughn colony lands could not be better, an unlimited supply with a small lift over the entire big tract having been indicated in wells recently completed.

PAYS CASH FOR HOME.

Fifteen thousand dollars in cash was paid by R. G. Beebe to Leonard Weels during the past week for a handsome residence at No. 500 Cahuenga boulevard, the negotiations leading to the transfer being closed by Allyne & Culver, managers of the house and lot department of Bryan & Bradford. The dwelling is a two-story and attic frame and brick house and has a fine entrance supported by brick columns. It is situated in a fashionable residence district. The interior is finished in Peruvian, Tobasco and Juana Costa mahogany.

DEALERS OPTIMISTIC.
REPORT GROWING DEMAND.

SOUTH PASADENA, July 27.—The summer season shows no cessation in the activity in the real-estate market. On the contrary, dealers generally report an increasing demand for all kinds of property, with indications of a more than usually active market throughout the summer season.

Washburn Bros. report the following recent sales: E. E. Washburn to W. C. Merritt of Pasadena, 50x175 feet on the north side of Bank street, between Marengo and Fair Oaks avenues. This lot will be improved at once with a six-room bungalow costing between $2500 and $3000.

Louise T. Briggs to C. F. Carberry, 75x155 feet on the north side of Bank street, between Fremont and Diamond avenues. K. G. Malcolmson to F. A. Keeler of Los Angeles, three large lots, each 75x185 feet, making 225 feet on Orange Grove avenue by 185 feet on Magnolia avenue. Mr. Keeler will probably improve one or more of these lots.

C. Lawrence Stimson to A. A. Polhamus of Los Angeles, 50x165 feet to an alley on Stratford avenue, north of Mission street, improved with a six-room bungalow. Polhamus purchased this property for a home. E. E. Washburn to I. S. Hurst of Los Angeles, 50x175 feet on the north side of Bank street, between Marengo and Fair Oaks avenues. This lot will be improved in the near future.

A. A. Polhamus of Los Angeles to C. Lawrence Stimson, 50x150 feet on the west side of Bushnell avenue, just south of Huntington drive. This lot is to be improved with a handsome bungalow. C. W. Manwarring to W. H. Milne, 60x151 feet fronting east on Milan avenue, just north of Oak street. This site will be improved at once.

WILL EXHIBIT PRODUCTS.
HARVEST FESTIVAL PLANNED.

[Special Correspondence of the Times.]

VAN NUYS, July 27.—The Van Nuys Chamber of Commerce will hold its first annual harvest exposition next Saturday, August 3.

A notable feature will be that products shown have been grown without irrigation. A prominent position will naturally be given to fruits, some of the San Fernando varieties having achieved national reputation.

The display will be arranged by the Chamber of Commerce in a prominent place on the boulevard. It will embrace all the tree products, such as peaches, apricots, pears, plums, apples and nuts. Grapes, berries and melons will also have a place. Potatoes, pumpkins, beans, beets, peas and in fact all vegetables profitably raised in the Van Nuys district will be exhibited. It is aimed to make the showing a fair representation of the success of this year's mighty harvest in the Van Nuys district.

The Chamber is holding special meetings in preparation for the event. It is hoped to make it the most convincing display of its kind ever attempted anywhere in America, by a yearling city.

Many outside people are interested in the harvest show. For the convenience of Los Angeles visitors, the chamber has placed 100 free transportation tickets in the hands of W. P. Whitsett, No. 319 South Hill street, for distribution among those wishing to attend. Special cars and complimentary auto service will be included in the entertainment provided.

THE DEAD AT MUKDEN.

Japanese Have Reared a Marble Temple to the Memory of the Russian Soldiers Who Died in Battle.

[The Advance:] A recent traveler through Manchuria gives us a picture and a description of the great cemetery which the Japanese have nearly completed and which some time ago they consecrated to the Russian dead who fell in the battles about Mukden. In their precipitate retreat the armies of the Czar left thousands upon thousands of their fallen comrades unburied. After the signing of the treaty of peace the soldiers of the Mikado collected every last bone and every bit of ragged uniform and every broken weapon which the Russians had left upon the field, and buried them with soldierly honors. In the center of this vast plat they inclosed by a white marble fencing a reserved space for those who had evidently been officers. Over the graves of the common soldiers iron crosses, in the Greek form, were erected, and over the graves of commanders crosses of white marble. Then as a pivot of the converging lines they reared a terrace, and on the terrace built a marble temple, all at a cost of 50,000 yen. When the work was ready for dedicatory rites they invited Russian ecclesiastics from Peking, Harbin and Vladivostock, together with such military commanders as were near, to assemble for religious service in this chapel, where, amid the assembled men of both races, the land was solemnly consecrated as a resting place for the Russian dead. We think we have not done badly when fifty years after the battle of Gettysburg we invite the surviving Confederates to meet us where they fought us, and with their northern fellow-citizens give thanks today for a united country. But the "Japs" have bettered, as well as anticipated, our act. For within five years of the battle of Mukden they laid out the field as a cemetery for their conquered enemies, buried them decently, had religious rites celebrated by priests of their own faith and paid personal tribute to the courage and loyalty of the men they had vanquished. All this without one word of suggestion from outside.

6th quarterly Cash Dividend will be declared on August 20th

EVER since the incorporation of this successful home building company, it has been customary to publicly announce each forthcoming Dividend several weeks in advance. This enables Investors of both large and small means to plan ahead to acquire a block of Suburban Development Company shares before each quarter (three months) ends. The law allows you to participate in the full Dividend for the quarter in which your name is enrolled on our books. Here, then, you are face to face with Opportunity. The present Dividend Rate on all shares (more than 170,000 have been subscribed) is 12½ per cent. on par. This high interest rate is not only justified—it is extremely liable to go higher. Think a moment. The time-worn argument of banks about a "conservative interest rate" is contradicted by the Dividends they pay their stockholders. One Los Angeles bank has just declared a Dividend of 40 per cent.—not to depositors, but to its Stockholders. You can't buy that bank's stock now without paying a heavy premium. You can buy Suburban Development Company shares at a nominal price and receive a 3⅛ per cent. Cash Dividend (one-fourth of 12½ per cent. per annum) in less than thirty days. Last Dividend Day (May 20th) this Company mailed several hundred checks to its Shareholders all over the continent. Some were small checks—others mighty big. Right here we will state openly that some of our first handful of Shareholders, by reinvesting their Dividends, have rolled up a Profit, all told, of over 100 per cent. Ask us to prove it for your benefit. We make this money by expertly doing the following things: Buying acreage wholesale at bedrock prices; subdividing it; building bungalows and selling them at good profits. Every profitable transaction benefits every shareholder in this company. You yourself couldn't buy two or three tracts of land, lay out streets and sidewalks, and sell the improved homesites at sharply advanced prices. But combined Capital can. It's precisely what this Company does. There you have the secret of our success—co-operative buying, co-operative selling, co-operative sharing in the steady stream of profits.

Shares Now $1.50 No Interest to Pay On These Installments

Your investigation of this clean-cut, vigorous corporation will convince you that our original Glassel Park tract alone—one of five we control—contains $1.50 in assets for every Share of stock sold. Now, get these facts:—Right now we are preparing to open up our new tract of 102 lots. With the 318 adjoining lots which we hold under option, it must be evident to you that you are getting in on a ground-floor proposition of the first water. In fact, the Opportunity presented here is richer than the one snapped up by our first batch of shareholders. You will participate in the forthcoming Profits growing out of our new subdivision, as well as being fully secured by tangible assets in our old Tract. You can't find a more opportune investment if you search California—and we hope you will. Buy any number of Shares you wish. Pay cash or just make the first payment of 10 per cent. MAKE THE START—that's the important thing. Ask the banks about us. Our Protection Fund has never failed to redeem for cash the Shares of any stockholder, large or small, who decided he wanted his money back. Mighty few demands have been made—and they have been met promptly, with interest as well.

Here's One of Our Houses. How Do You Like It?

"Pay $150 and Move In"

Afterward you pay a certain sum each month—like rent. The interest is figured in. Every payment cuts down the principal and interest.

This is the original "can't-lose" proposition.

The man who pays—say $30 a month or $360 a year, is saving that money. In place of a neat stack of "rent receipts," he will have a house paid for in a few short years.

We are home builders on a wholesale plan—we build a whole group of houses at one time—and so, save money on everything that goes into them. (We buy the land in the same way.) And we build these houses the best we know how. Don't confound them with the average "contract" houses that are thrown together and won't last.

These are built on honor, and the improvements are of the best—gas, electricity, sewer and water—paved streets all the way out, 25 minutes from Broadway.

RARE MINERALS, METALLURGY, CHEMISTRY.

INQUIRIES FROM AND ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Arizona Turquoise.

MINERAL PARK (Ariz.) June 26.—Q.: I just seat myself to thank you sincerely for your prompt attention and kind favors with my samples; also for your kind and friendly expressions, and published fact on the gem turquoise. You no doubt know that I was the discoverer of turquoise in Mohave county, thirty-five years ago, but I will not bother you now with that history, and as to the "decomposition" of the gem-mineral by exposure to the elements, I wish to state: In my prospecting I found pieces of beads, pottery, and Indian relics on the surface of the ground which must have lain there for centuries, exposed to the weather, and the pieces of turquoise were of a beautiful blue color, and as hard as it possibly could be. I would give them to you now if I had them, but unfortunately, we had a fire and lost all. On the hill where I made the original discovery, were six ancient shafts and there may be more from eight to ten feet deep. There was not a sign of a hole in the ground and the surroundings were of solid rock (porphyry.) Now where did the dirt come from to fill up those holes?

J. W. H. (Uncle Jim.)

A.: Glad to hear from you again, Uncle Jim, and pleased to learn that you are the discoverer of the Mineral Park turquoise. Geologically, time is somewhat synonymous with eternity, and, reverently referring to our Creator, it is written: "For a thousand years in Thy sight are but as yesterday when it is passed." In comparison with the pseudomorphic habits of minerals (and of their decompositions) what is thirty-five years?

The samples that you heretofore submitted for test were of an oxidized matrix with traces of turquoise sparingly disseminated throughout the mass, and in no wise gem material. The fact is noted that you observed at the locality solid porphyritic rock, with holes therein, and you are in doubt as to where the dirt came from with which the holes were filled. Trust a Mexican Indian always to cover up his finds! and if there was no other way to fill the "diggings," dirt would have been brought in, in goat-skins or in some other novel way. We often hear expressions referring to the crude tunnels, drifts, etc., worked by the Mexicans, but depend on the fact that such miners generally get all of the high-grade ores, no matter where they operate.

Thulite.

EAST OAKLAND, June 27.—Q.: The determination of a certain mineral shows it to be thulite, a variety of zoisite, and a silicate of lime and alumina. I think that the mineral is very pure. Will you tell me if any industrial values are carried in such. I have no samples at hand to send you.

L. F. W.

A.: Without a sample of the particular mineral, no positive answer can be given you. The mineral, thulite is a variety of zoisite of a rose-red color, and often used for small ornaments. The rare metallic element, thulium is obtained from the aluminum group; it is found in combination with gadolinite, and resembles ytterbium.

Zeolites are secondary minerals, and made subsequently to the time of the formations of the matrix in which they find a resting place. "They do not contain iron or magnesia, and are often called hydrous feldspars."

As a matter of fact, there are silicates of alumina now being utilized in certain cements, building materials, paints, etc., but as to the variety of thulite, you have in mind, we naturally, in the absence of samples, have no knowledge.

Nickel Absent.

LOS ANGELES, June 27.—Q.: I am handing you two samples. Sample No. 1 is from a ledge in place, and No. 2 is sediment from spring below ledge. Please tell me composition of each. I suspect nickel?

F. B.

A.: No. 1 is an impure iron-oxide shale, carrying chlorite, and trace of smalt-blue dunortierite (aluminum silicate) with bare trace of copper. No. 2 is an altered granite with 1.50 per cent. potash present.

One Gold Color.

SAN BERNARDINO, June 28.—Q.: I request and desire an assay on the following samples, Nos. 1, 2 and 3. Wish to know what they pay per ton, and what they are composed of?

J. A. R.

A.: No. 1 is quartz with iron oxides, in part hematite (iron peroxide.) Why not have this class of rock assayed for gold? No. 2, native gold present in one "color," seen under the microscope; pyrite (iron disulphide) with iron oxide present. No. 3 is an impure touchstone (lydian stone,) of no value.

Steatite.

EDENDALE, June 29.—Q.: I have here a sample formation that I would like to know if it would be good for wood-stone sink tops, or flooring for bathrooms, or what is it good for? What does it contain?

W. H. B.

A.: The sample is an edible variety of soapstone, such as is eaten by some natives of the southern States of our good old country. Attempts have been made, with partial success, to use such material in the paint industry. The approximate composition of the mineral is: Silica, 64.50; magnesia, 30; iron protoxide, 3, percentages respectively. This silicate of magnesia is impure with a low per cent. of alumina, it is too impure for the porcelain trade; and it is a doubtful "filler." The mineral occurs very plentifully in the desert sections of Southeastern California, in Nevada, and elsewhere.

Selenite.

LOS ANGELES, June 29.—Q.: This sample was found about ten miles from Las Vegas, Nev.

F. R. W.

A.: The sample is gypsum, variety selenite, and in slab-like form. The sample is impure with a coating of iron besides, and granular gypsum. Composition hydrated sulphate of lime. Will make plaster of paris.

Amblygonite.

SAN DIEGO, June 30.—Q.: I am enclosing you a sample from San Diego county which I take to be beryl. If not beryl will you please tell me what it is, and its composition.

N. S.

A.: Composition, phosphate of alumina and lithia. In the mass is approximately 47 per cent. phosphoric acid; alumina 38 per cent., and lithia over 7 per cent.; together with soda, potash (0.40 per cent.) and 2 per cent. of fluorine present. A marketable mineral, when occurring plentifully.

Wolframite.

LOS ANGELES, June 30.—Q.: Is the enclosed sample wolframite and if so, of what per cent. tungstic acid?

"TUNGSTEN."

A.: Approximately 65 per cent tungstic acid.

Poor Showing.

MAMMOTH (Ariz.) June 30.—Q.: Am sending you two samples of ore from the "Old Hat" mining district here, in Pinal county, Arizona, which I wish the names of and names of the minerals they contain—if any. No. 1 (if it reaches you in shape to pass upon) I want to find out if it carries either bismuth, uranium, or vanadium? It is very soft when first taken out of the ground, and has a soapy appearance, and it may be nothing more than gangue matter. No. 2 I take to be a gold ore, and would like to now in what form the gold is in—if any?

E. O. G.

A.: No. 1 bismuth, uranium, and vanadium absent. Potash present in the gritty-talc approximately 2.50 per cent. Looks like gouge matter. No. 2 is a siliceous-calciferous (and in part) porphyritic rock; apparently from a narrow streak, and carrying iron oxides, manganese in dendritic forms (forest rock of the mining boys,) with trace of vanadic acid. If there is any gold in the rock it does not appear in native colors. For gold and silver values you are politely referred to reliable assayers.

Not Wolframite.

LEASTALK, June 30.—Q.: I send you some rock that is so heavy that I suspect it is wolframite. It is found in this mining district in flat-rock (in place) and scattered on the top of the ground. Will you please test it for me and tell just what the rock it?

A. M. E.

A.: The rock is ferruginous quartz, and in layers throughout the matrix we find magnetic iron-ore with some hematite. Tungstic acid not present in the sample.

Nitrite Reagent.

GLENDALE, June 30.—Q.: Please tell me what the enclosed mineral is. It came from Verdugo Mountains, north of Los Angeles. It is dissolved by nitric acid; hydrochloric acid, and sulphuric acid. I found one reagent that acted upon it, viz.: potassium nitrite, which threw down a white precipitate.

C. E. S.

A.: The sample is chiefly of the calcite family with traces of iron and phosphoric acid.

Frankly referring to your problem we are at a loss to find just what solution you added the nitrite to, as reagent, and, therefore we can but cite an illustration: Before us we have some of the mineral in sulphuric acid solution (barring insolubles) to this we use the reagent potassium nitrite. To express the reaction in another form we add potassium nitrite to sulphuric acid, and the reaction gives potassium sulphate.

The nature of the reagent used by you is not fully set forth. If we heat a fragment of potassium nitrate, or of sodium nitrate, on a piece of platinum foil; oxygen is evolved and nitrite of potassium (or of sodium) remains from nitrate of potassium. We will now test th enitrite: "Dissolve the nitrite in water, add a few drops of dilute sulphuric acid, then a little weak solution of potassium iodide, and, lastly, some mucilage of starch; the deep-blue compound of iodine and starch is at once produced. Repeat the experiment, using potassium nitrate instead of nitrite; no blue color is produced."

The liberation of iodine by nitrites and not by nitrates is a reaction of considerable value in searching for nitrites in ordinary drinking-waters, the occurrence of such salts being held to indicate the presence of nitrogenous organic matter in a state of oxidation or decay.

No matter how carefully we reduce the nitrate to nitrite on heated platinum, there always traces of nitrate remaining with the nitrite.

Therefore, from your experiment, and our knowledge being very doubtful as to just what you were trying to produce or obtain, by or from the unknown solution, leaves us with a theoretical view of the proposition, and not on the solid basis of known facts.

Trace of Potash.

DEHESA, June 30.—Q.: I am sending you by this mail a small package of earth, which I will be glad if you will have it analyzed and let me know what the analysis is.

E. E. G.

A.: Qualitatively, the sample shows up as of many combinations. Aluminum silicate; quartz; calcite; magnetite; mica; iron oxides; manganese dioxide; trace of phosphoric acid, and low potash values are, each and all, in the earth submitted for test.

Platinum Absent.

PHOENIX (Ariz.) June 30.—Q.: Under separate cover I am sending you four samples of mineral. No. 1 is from a claim in Pioneer mining district, Pinal county, Arizona. Will you kindly tell me if this sample carries platinum? Samples Nos. 2, 3, and 4 are from the Ellingworth district, Yuma county, Arizona. Will you kindly name the samples and give me some information regarding them, and also, if any of them have a commercial value? Will look for your answer under initials.

M. P. W.

A.: No platinum is present in sample No. 1. The specimen is a compound of iron oxides, limenite, traces of lead and of sulphates. No. 2 is porphyritic rock, hornblende, and iron oxides present, with spherules of obsidian sparingly disseminated throughout the mass. Under one other, "No. 1," we find a good, mixed copper ore, carrying covellite (indigo-copper;) chalcopyrite (yellow copper of the mining boys;) melaconite (an impure, earthy, black oxide of copper,) and iron oxides. No sample was tested for gold. We are pleased with the samples No. 1 and the separate "No. 1." No. 3, iron oxides with lead present, is an encouraging ore to prospect for. There is no No. 4 sample in the "bunch."

Ferrous and Ferric Oxides.

NATIONAL (Nev.) July 1.—Q.: Please name the bright yellow colors in the enclosed sample. From this mining district. I suspect vanadium?

T. B. A.

A.: There is no vanadium present in the sample.

Many Elements.

LOS ANGELES, July 2.—Q.: Will you kindly tell me what metal there is in the enclosed sample?

W. E. A.

A.: The rock carries quartz, iron oxides, titanic-iron, aluminum silicate, traces of potash, and very sparingly stibnite (antimony sulphide.)

Fuller's Earth.

TEHACHAPI, July 3.—Q.: I have sent you by mail one package containing three samples of rock, and numbered 1, 2, and 3. Describe them please?

O. L.

A.: No. 1 is a "bastard-granite," carrying feldspar, iron, manganese, gypsum, quartz, mica and traces of potash. Sparingly scattered throughout the mass are minute crystals of molybdenite of no commercial value. No. 2 is an impure slate, carrying hornblende and microscopic crystals of molybdenite; of doubtful value. No. 3 is a fairly-good grade of Fuller's earth.

Dolomite.

RIVERSIDE, July 3.—Q.: Herewith two samples of the same ore. This is located in ledge form of some two feet, and within ten miles east of Riverside. Please test this, as it appears to be a complicated sort of rock.

A. A. M.

A.: The sample is high-grade dolomite (magnesium limestone.) In rhombohedral and massive forms, of uneven-conchoidal fracture, hardness 3.8. Sp. gr., 2.9. Of vitreous-pearly luster; streak, and color, white. In lump form slowly soluble in hydrochloric acid. Infusible. Alkaline reaction after ignition. Approximate composition: Calcium carbonate 54.35; magnesium carbonate, 45.65.

Asphaltic Rocks.

LOS ANGELES, July 4.—Q.: Being a comparative stranger in California, will you kindly inform me of a California locality where asphaltic shale and sandstone can be obtained in commercial quantities?

G. L. S.

A.: "Extensive deposits of asphaltic shales and sandstone" (right on the point of your inquiry) "are found in California in and contiguous to the oil fields from the vicinity of Santa Cruz southwestward, generally parallel with the coast. Bitumen permeates porous, sandy strata, and exudes at the surface from highly-bituminous oil-bearing deposits, and is found in smaller quantities in veins cutting the same class of rocks. The asphalt in this region appears for the most part to be residue by natural distillation at or near the surface of the earth from the same crude oil that yields the oil asphalt."

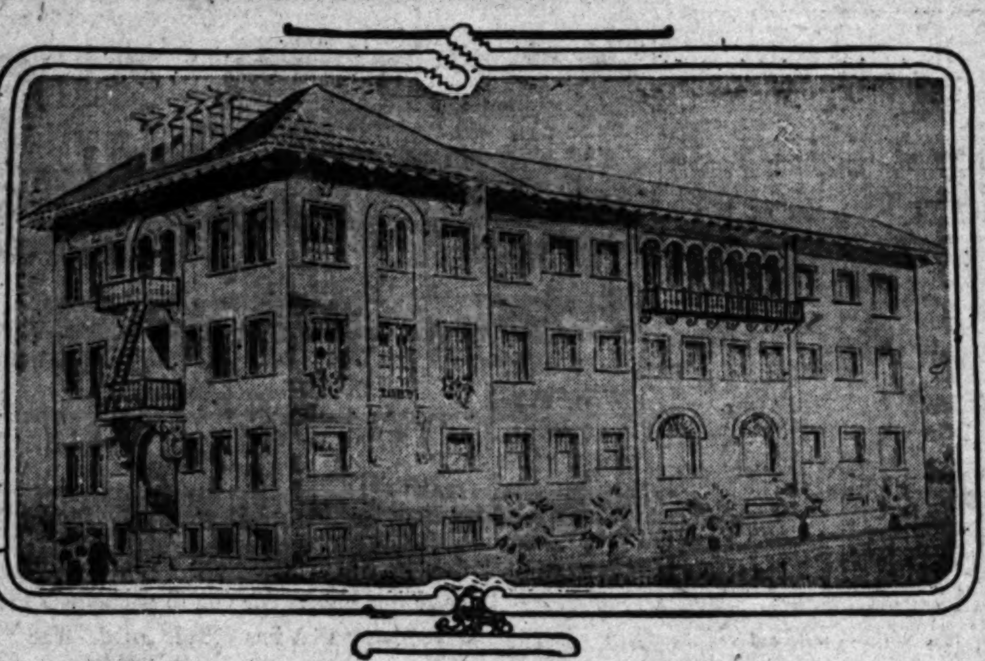
Porphyritic Rock.

LOS ANGELES, July 4.—Q.: Under separate cover I am leaving three samples of rock, and all of them were taken from the abrupt water-cut rocks of the Madison River, Montana, at a locality thirty-one miles westward from Bozeman. Please name the samples, and I would thank you for short description of the rocks?

H. B. T.

A.: All of the samples are porphyritic (feldspathic.) Sample No. 1 is made up of crystals of feldspar, and referred to by some authors as "porphyry." We have always objected to the term as a misnomer. No. 2 is altered porphyritic matter, carrying granula-hematite in seams through the mass, and the hematite carries free gold. Sample No. 3 is porphyritic rock with auriferous pyrite sparingly present.

Attractive Improvement for Close-in Corner.



Apartments for B. Fanta at Tenth and Union, Eisen & Son, architects.

FOLLOWS SPANISH LINES.

Attractive Apartment-House Started During Week at Tenth and Union. Roof Garden Feature.

Work was started during the past week on a three-story and basement brick apartment-house that is to be erected by B. Fanta on the southwest corner of Tenth street and Union avenue. Plans for the structure have been completed by the architects, Eisen & Son.

The building will occupy a ground space of 50x110 feet and will contain fifty rooms divided into two and three-room suites, each with private bath. The first floor will contain a large lobby and reception-room, finished in a combination of white enamel and mahogany. The corridors throughout will be finished in white enamel, the doors being of mahogany.

The main stairway from the first to the second story will be constructed of ornamental iron, with mahogany hand rails. The baths throughout will be finished in tile, with glazed enameled walls. The basement will contain a large social hall. A charming feature will be a pergola on the roof, which will be fitted up as a summer garden with seats and a summer house. Each floor will have a twelve-foot balcony porch.

The structure will be unusually attractive and will follow the lines of Spanish Renaissance architecture. The exterior will be faced with ruffle brick, laid in both black and white mortar. The roof will be of tile. The building, which will cost about $30,000, will be ready for occupancy about October 1.

LARGE RANCH TRANSFERRED.

One of the largest and most important of recent land deals in Modoc county was consummated several days ago in Surprise Valley, when the Dr. W. H. Patterson ranch, of 2000 acres, was sold to the Provident Investment Company of this city. The buying company was represented in the deal by its president, T. A. Johnson. The price paid for the ranch is reported at about $300,000. The ranch will be subdivided by the company, which is also financing the Cow Head Lake irrigation project.

PLANS COUNTRY HOME.

C. A. Barnes, secretary and superintendent of the Coulter Dry Goods Company, has purchased ten acres on Sherman Way, the $500,000 boulevard through the Van Nuys-Lankershim lands, and will at once build a country home. Barnes's site is near the new town of Owensmouth. As soon as his home has been completed and work started on the ground improvements, he will move to the valley lands, combining his downtown business with that of a practical rancher. The sale was made by the Janss Investment Company.

CLOTHING FROM PAPER.

Hats and Shirts Are Now Made and It Is Expected to Produce a Paper That Can Be Sewn Together.

[New York Times:] Though the problem of the high cost of living has not yet become so acute in England as to judge from the American correspondence in London papers, it has become in the United States, it is nevertheless sufficiently serious, and any method of reducing prices that is suggested is eagerly examined, says a London dispatch. The latest idea is clothing made of paper.

A representative of a large city firm of paper manufacturers states that they are the present moment experimenting in the hope of producing a kind of paper really suitable for the making of clothes which can be sewn and hold buttons. "Paper towels are an excellent idea—these are made in Germany," he said.

Paper hats have been a fashion for some time. Instead of wearing washable cotton sun bonnets and caps, children can have each day a new paper hat costing from 2 to 12 cents, which takes one item off the washing bill.

Paper shirts are being produced at 12 cents apiece, while the cost of a paper handkerchief is 2 cents—the price of the washing of a linen one.

In the household, too, the washing bill can be largely reduced by using paper instead of linen, for now there are paper blinds—lace-edged—paper serviettes, paper toilette mats, paper d'oyleys, paper table covers, while paper toweling could be adapted to kitchen use for teacloths, dusters and similar articles.

PANAMA-PACIFIC EXPOSITION.

Expected That Fifty Millions of Dollars Will Be Spent by the Time the Gates Are Opened.

[The Argonaut:] A conservative estimate of the money to be spent on the Panama-Pacific Exposition is $50,000,000. This includes the initial capital of the exposition company, $17,500,000, of which $5,000,000 was pledged by the State, $5,000,000 by the city, and $7,500,000 by private subscribers. The next biggest item in the cost of the fair will be the money to be invested by the various States of the Union for buildings and exhibits. Thus far the sums appropriated by States for these purposes rang from $750,000 down to $150,000. One or two of the larger States are expected to vote $1,000,000 or more. Taking an average of $250,000 as a fair estimate of the per State expenditures, the exhibits of the forty-eight States will represent a total of $12,000,000. The county appropriations from California, estimated on a low basis, are expected to exceed $500,000. One of the biggest items of the exposition will be the foreign displays and buildings. Comptroller Pollak of the Exposition Company estimates that the other nations of the world will spend $20,000,000 here.

TWELVE-YEAR-OLD GIRL WHO IS FAMOUS BREAD MAKER.

According to the current issue of Farm and Fireside the extension department of the Iowa State College of Agriculture has been sending out bulletins to the thousands of girls in their State Girls' Club, teaching them, among other things, how to make bread and how to judge bread. Then, as a close for the year's work, the girls of the State came to the college during the winter short course and baked bread there to see who could make the best loaf of bread.

The article goes on to say:

"A number of girls tried, and their bread was a credit to the instruction which they had received. The winner, Lois Edmonds, of Page county, Iowa, is but 12 years old. She is a happy, wholesome, sensible little country girl of that marked ability which is not unusual in the best country homes. Her bread scored ninety-three points out of a possible hundred, which is considered a very high record.

"Lois used the recipe which was sent out to the girls by the extension department. She used flour manufactured in her home county. The recipe is as follows:

"'Two tablespoonfuls of butter, one tablespoonful of sugar, two cupfuls of scalded milk, one tablespoonful of salt and half a cake of yeast (compressed.) Dissolve the yeast-cake in four tablespoonfuls of water that is no warmer than fresh milk. Scald the milk. Place sugar, salt and butter in a bread bowl. Add the milk when it is no warmer than fresh milk. Add the dissolved yeast. Begin to add flour gradually, and beat thoroughly as the flour is added. Beat out all the lumps and make the dough look smooth. Add flour until dough can be worked without sticking to hands or board.

"'Knead lightly and with a quick motion of the hands until the dough is elastic and you hear a snapping, cracking sound. Place the bread in a bowl and cover with a towel. Keep warm, never hot and never cold. Let it rise until it has doubled in size. Then knead again, and make into two loaves. Set the loaves in a warm place, and allow them to double in size. The oven should be hot enough to brown a piece of letter-paper in from eight to ten minutes. A loaf this size should bake about fifty minutes, and the oven should be cooler during the last fifteen minutes.'

"Lois is such a little girl that she had to get on her knees on the stool in the cooking laboratory in order to reach to knead her bread. At the Page County Industrial Exposition she had the best cake baked by a girl under 14."

AN AVERAGE MAN'S SUCCESS IN THE POULTRY BUSINESS.

In the poultry department of Farm and Fireside a contributor writes:

"Twenty-seven years ago there lived right near me a man who worked in the iron mills of Pottstown, Pa. This man kept twelve Plymouth Rocks in the back lot of a country tenant-house. The lot was altogether about forty yards square. They were a very good show grade, in shape, color of feather and size. They were of female-color line, with a few darker females in the pen. He raised a few each season and exhibited some at shows near by. This was back in 1884. Men of towns from ten to twenty miles away would come and take away birds at from $2 to $5 each. There was almost no extra expense after the first start, which was the eggs. The winnings at the shows would almost pay for the showing expenses.

"After a few years he quit the iron mill and bought a farm of thirty-six acres. Here the Rocks were increased to fifty-five kept in one flock. Sales of eggs and stock greatly increased. The birds were taken to from three to five near-by shows, and they won many of the firsts. About 400 were raised each season, and the surplus hens and pullets all sold to men who saw his stock at the fairs. About 1893 the flock was divided by building two houses in the apple orchard and the whole orchard made into two large yards. One of these was now mated for darker or cockerel line, and the two others mated for light or standard female line. The strain was kept up to the very best practical lines. They always laid the year around. I cannot give figures in detail, but the prices of cockerels were from $1.50 to $5, and a few at $20; the cull pullets often brought $1 each, in the fall, at which time all the culls were sold. The good breeders brought from $2 up to $10. You can readily see that the poultry paid a very neat sum.

"This man raised five children. One of the sons took the farm a few years ago, and the father has taken a house near by. He helps run the small place and the chickens, and keeps one mating at his home. They run five matings now. Three are dark.

"He is one of the many all over our land. He had very little schooling, but was well educated in his calling; he was not planned for large enterprises and did not care or strive for it. He played safe from the very beginning. The great danger is that most of us will begin by building two or more houses each year and spend large sums to beat this or that breeder, and risk large sums in advertising. Finally we go broke. This I have seen more than once. There are farmers who have built up large businesses in standard-bred poultry, but they are the ones who went slow."

Japanese Toothbrush Trade.

[Consular Reports:] China imports about $250,000 worth of toothbrushes from Osaka, Japan, annually, the manufacturers in that city also furnishing the United States with about $1,000,000 worth, Canada with about $125,000 worth, and Australia, India and several European countries with material quantities.

The use of foreign toilet requisites in the open ports in China is increasing, not only in keeping with the increase in foreign population, but also because of the increasing demand for such articles from the well-to-do Chinese, says a Consular report. The manufacture of tooth powder for use of the Chinese is a flourishing industry in Hongkong and in several of the open ports of China.

Queer Collections.

[London Globe:] Collectors gather together articles more or less interesting, but probably few go in for such bulky objects as those chosen by a distinguished Britisher. Old doors are the object of his desire. His doors come from old houses, castles and abbeys of historical interest.

Some time ago he obtained, at considerable expense, a door through which, during the French Revolution, Marie Antoinette, Charlotte Corday, Danton and Robespierre passed on their way to the guillotine.

Lord Petersham, a noted man in his day, had a hobby for acquiring various kinds of tea and snuff. The Dowager-Queen of Italy has a collection of the foot and headgear of royal personages of different periods. It is said to include a sandal worn by Nero, a pair of white slippers that belonged to Mary Queen of Scots, shoes worn by Queen Anne and the Empress Josephine, and gloves that were once the property of Marie Antoinette.

An Odd Burial.

[Chicago Record-Herald:] In life a genial man with a habit of shaking hands with all persons for whom he expressed a fondness, Dr. A. J. Ihne of Fosterberg, Ill., whose funeral was held recently, went to his grave with his right hand outstretched as though to shake the hands of friends who assisted in the final rites.

The tendency of the dead physician's arm to remain outstretched with the hand in the position it ordinarily would assume in grasping that of another person was noticed when the body was first being prepared for burial. An effort was made to arrange the member so it would lie across the dead man's breast, but each attempt to do this met with failure, the hand springing up just as in life.

Cloth bands were resorted to in an effort to fasten the hand down, but this was unsuccessful. The hand remained outstretched as the body was lowered in the grave.

How Catfish Travel.

[Kansas City Journal:] Tom McNeal used to tell about catfish sunburning their backs traveling up and down the Arkansas River. "I don't take any stock in such stories," said Tom Botkin, Assistant Secretary of State, the other day. "Catfish do their traveling in the night time. But, anyway, I am astonished that men tell such stories where there are so many truths to be learned that are stranger than fiction if one will but study the habits and development of birds, animals and fish.

"Nature provides all animals with their needs and develops their nature and organs to suit changing conditions. The crane is provided with long legs to wade in the water for food. The duck has a wide bill for catching flies. The mountain sheep has cup-like hoofs for safety in jumping from rock to rock. The Arkansas razorback has a strong nose for rooting for food, and so on ad infinitum. All these have been developed by constant use to meet conditions.

"In the same way nature has come to the rescue of the Arkansas River catfish since the Colorado citizens have been permitted to take so much water for irrigation. A close study of catfish taken from that stream shows that they have developed a sort of sack or bag extending from the lower lip down the throat to a point where the first fins grow. This sack or bag resembles somewhat the sack or the bill of the pelican, and is used by the fish for carrying drinking water on his pilgrimages up and down the unmoist Arkansas."

The Armies of Europe.

[The Argonaut:] Europe has now reached a point where the size of her armies has become a matter for anxious comparison. So here are some of the figures that play a part in a future Armageddon. Counting the active list and the reserves—that is to say, all trained men—England can put into the field 970,864 soldiers, France 4,777,000, Austria 2,690,365, Russia 6,739,418 and Germany 4,768,520. There are, of course, other nations that would try to be helpful in a smaller way, and there are quite a number of warships that would give maritime variety to the scene. So that a rough estimate of the military strength of Europe in this "year of Our Lord," 1912, shows the existence of some 20,000,000 men fostered and trained by science, art and finance to regard killing each other as their chief aim in life. The reduction of armaments seems to be still some way off, unless, indeed, these same armaments are to be reduced in another way, by the lex talionis.

Life of Birds, Animals and Trees.

[Chicago Tribune:] It has just been computed that the day fly lives twenty-four hours, the May fly six weeks, the butterfly two months, as, alas, also does the flea; the fly three to four months; the ant, the cricket and the bee one year each; the hare, sheep, six to ten years each; the nightingale, twelve years; the wolf, twelve to fifteen years; the canary bird, fifteen to twenty years; the dog, fifteen to twenty-five years; cattle, twenty-five years; the horse, twenty-five to thirty years; the eagle, thirty years; the stag, thirty-five to forty years; heron, lion and bear, fifty years each; the raven, eighty years; elephant, turtle, parrot, pike and carp, 100 years each.

The ivy outlives 200 years; the elm, 300 to 350 years; the linden, 500 to 1000 years; the locust tree and the oak, 400 years; the fir, 700 to 1200 years, and palm trees 3000 to 5000 years.

Mines and Mining in the Great Southwest.

Tonopah.

FOUR CONCERNS MAKE ACTIVITY.

Tonopah Field Feels Effect of New Capital.

Great Western Busy After Four Years' Sleep.

Rescue Eula Changes Its Managers Suddenly.

[Special Correspondence of the Times.]

TONOPAH (Nev.) July 26.—The springing into life of four new strongly-financed companies backed by the better elements of Nevada mining, indicates the obsession which has gripped this camp with respect to the western trend of the vast ore bodies.

Six months ago no one would have thought of mining out on the flat which the Tonopah and Goldfield Railroad crosses, as it leaves the main line down in the valley and begins to climb upwards to the silver district. Now it is a question of being first in the field. The rush is in that direction, and the east end, which was the seat of excitement last month when the Halifax passed through several likely looking ledges, is almost backed off the boards.

With the exception of a diamond drilling prospecting company, there is nothing new in the east end, but west towards the setting sun the air is filled with all sorts of reports shrill through the brokers' offices on the sinuous Main street, which resembled another Sleepy Hollow after the passing of the first preliminary boom of last spring.

One and a half miles distant from the postoffice, the Great Western has resumed work after a silence of four years, and the shaft, now down 600 feet, will be sent down to a thousand. The property is controlled by the MacNamara crowd, which says little about its plans or concepts. Should they get ore, the Great Western will be heard from, and if the engineers are disappointed the men who are furnishing the sinews of war will take their medicine in silence and swallow their losses.

The Monarch Pittsburgh Extension began work this week with a reserve of $50,000 in the treasury, and promises of heavy work in store for the plant, which has been installed with capacity to exploit the lowest depths at which the management expects to tap the Merger ore body. This property is situated three-quarters of a mile west of the Tonopah Extension. Then there is the Cashboy directly west of the Golden Anchor, where they are dreaming of eclipsing the Belmont with the magnitude of their strike. Beyond this again lies the Umatilla, which has been unwatering preparatory to starting sinking in the shaft, which the company virtually abandoned some time ago. The equipment is safe for a thousand feet. The stockholders include a number of railroad employees, but the future of that corporation is regarded as somewhat problematical since it is somewhat remote from the recent strikes to reflect the full glory of the discovery. Anyway the backers are hopeful, and that is the principal element in mining.

CHANGE IN MANAGEMENT.

One of the spectacular features of the week was the substitution of Jim Heney, former superintendent of the Belmont, for E. M. Luckett, whose resignation from the Rescue Eula became effective Tuesday morning.

Heney is credited with finding the big Belmont ledge and establishing that company as the greatest mine in camp. Ever since his connection with the Jim Butler in the early days of Tonopah, Heney has been credited with more than man's average share of luck, and everything he touched seemed to turn to value. He has been down on the Pacific Coast for over two years recuperating and enjoying the wealth which he pulled out of the ground, but he could not resist the lure of the gray desert.

He will act as superintendent of the Rescue, and James J. McQuillan has been booked for manager. Luckett achieved notoriety last spring when he waged a vigorous campaign against the Kadig control of the North Star, and it was predicted that his tenure in the camp would not last long. He is commonly credited with owing his job to the pull of the estate of Frank Golden and the friends which the former banker left in Nevada, but his knowledge of mining was never accepted by oldtimers.

The information of the change led to a sudden appreciation of Rescue, which is held largely by the working classes of the camp, and orders were placed freely for blocks of the stock on the same principle that the touch of a hunchback brings good results to those who believe in witchcraft. The buyers bank on Heney to make good, and that is about all there is about it. They are willing to back their faith with their money.

BELMONT'S NEW MILL.

The Belmont's new mill started on what the management hopes will be a long and unbroken campaign last Thursday morning (July 25.) The opening was strictly informal, but everything in connection with the mill ran as smoothly as the best engineering talent could wish. For a matter of two weeks the Belmont has been filling in chinks and crevices and tuning up the various parts for the run, which they hope to continue without ceasing for an indefinite period. The tonnage treated Thursday was a trifle more than one-half the capacity, or 500 tons, and this will be the average for the first two weeks, when the equipment of men and machinery will be thoroughly broken in beyond the preadventure of a doubt. After that the mill will be expected to treat its full capacity of 500 tons a day. In the meantime the plant at Millers will be kept in commission handling Belmont ores. Not until the new mill is proven competent and up to the expectations of Mr. Bosqui, the designer, will there be any change in the shipment of ores to the valley.

MILLER'S CUSTOM PLANT.

The Millers plant will become a strictly custom plant, which may be rendered available for resumption of company ore treatment in the event of a fire or accident, crippling the new plant at the mine. Already there are more applicants for tonnage than can be cared for, and it will cause some misgivings among the stockholders of proposed shippers should their offerings be turned down.

The latest bidder for treatment is the Tonopah Merger, which is already discounting the future to an extent which they think will warrant them in providing immediate milling facilities. The MacNamara is another newcomer owing to the impairment of that property by lightning during a storm last week. The electric current entered a segment of the mill and silenced the machinery in most effective manner. The loss is covered by insurance, but the company is eager to arrange for treating its ore in the interim of reconstruction. The MacNamara, while taking care of only sixty-seven tons a day, has the record of greatest efficiency of any mill in the district, and no time will be lost in restoring the home plant to working conditions.

The Jim Butler, which rested secure on a promise to have an outlet for its ore at the old Belmont mill, is in an embarrassing position since it is growing so rich the mill cannot treat its product with the greatest regard for economy. The mine has been thoroughly sampled during the last two weeks, but a final test will be made under the direction of Clyde Heller. The Midway is another candidate for milling privileges, and its improved prospects promise steady shipments, even though it should not strike the Golden Anchor ledge in its eastern thrust.

Goldfield Concern Is Pushing Its Development Work.

Black Butte Company Uncovers Pay Dirt.

Jumbo Extension Discovers New Ore Shoot.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

GOLDFIELD (Nev.) July 25.—A crosscut from the bottom of the thirty-foot winze shows the body of milling ore recently encountered in virgin ground on the 100-foot level of the old C. O. D. M. and L. Company lease shaft, on the property of the C. O.D. Consolidated Mining Company, to be sixteen feet between walls.

The ledge was originally exposed on the surface of the ground by leasers several years ago, but through a fault at a depth of about fifty feet was lost until recently when its downward extension, slightly removed from its natural position, was revealed by the parent company in extending the north drift on the 100-foot level of the old lease shaft named.

The ore body measures ten feet in width. To assist in determining the extent and dip of the ore body a raise was made prior to the sinking of a thirty-foot winze. In view of the satisfactory results obtained in its exploration on the 100-foot level and in the winze, General Manager L. K. Koontz, who has just returned from a business trip to the East, has started a crosscut from old workings to intercept the ore body on the 200-foot level of the lease shaft.

It is calculated that to accomplish this aim not more than fifty feet of crosscutting will be necessary. This work completed, the extraction of ore from the new find on the 200-foot level and its development at greater depths will be prosecuted by way of the company Gold Bar shaft, which is equipped with a twenty-five-horsepower hoist and connected with the old C. O. D. M. and L. lease shaft by laterals run several years ago.

BLACK BUTTE REORGANIZED.

After considerable exploration work in search of it, what appears to be the downward extension of what is known as the Campbell ledge was revealed a few days ago in a drift to the southwest on the intermediate level above the company tunnel on the property of the Black Butte Reorganized Mining Company. When first encountered in the drift named, the ledge showed a width of only several inches but as work upon it has progressed it has increased in size, measuring at present about three feet in width and dipping to the southwest at about 45 deg.

From the dip named, it is estimated that the ledge passes about thirty feet over the top of the tunnel, which explains the failure of that working to pick it up. Samples from the ledge at its latest point of disclosure give returns as high as $55 a ton in gold and silver. Several days more work will be required to determine the extent and importance of the discovery. In addition to the work being prosecuted through the long tunnel, the company is drifting south on the 135-foot level of the Dorch shaft. The drift now has a length of about 135 feet and highly favorable conditions prevail in the face.

FLORENCE.

President A. D. Parker of Denver, Colo., who, with Vice-President T. G. Lockhart of Los Angeles, Cal., spent several days of this week inspecting and outlining future work at the Florence mine, set at rest all rumors as to the early erection of a mill on the property to replace the plant destroyed by fire last December. Mr. Parker stated that, while a great amount of profitable milling ore had been developed in the mine since his previous visit of inspection last March, the accumulated tonnage is not sufficient at this time to warrant the construction of a mill. He, however, intimated that if the present rate of ore development continues, the construction of such a plant will be given serious consideration by himself and associates in due time.

With the completion of the main shaft to the 1200-foot point, with a sixty-foot sump for pumps, which level will be reached within the next few days, deep sinking operations will be at least temporarily suspended and lateral work vigorously prosecuted.

Mr. Parker made it known that he believes that the southern extension of the great quartz mass which is giving such an excellent account of itself on the 1300-foot level of the Grizzly Bear shaft of the Goldfield Consolidated, will be found within the confines of the Florence holdings. With this belief in mind, Mr. Parker has decided to have a crosscut driven north on the 1300-foot level of the Florence toward the Combination Fraction. Superintendent Dewey is daily expecting to reveal in the new crosscut on the 350-foot level the downward extension of the rich ore body opened up about two months ago in virgin ground on the 250-foot level.

BLUE BULL.

The work of retimbering and enlarging the 400-foot shaft on the Hat claim of the estate of the Blue Bull Mining Company from 4x7 to 4½x9½ feet has been completed from the water level—350 feet—to the surface, a rate of ten feet a day having been accomplished since the inauguration of the work, under the supervision of Manager K. M. Simpson. Like work from the water level to the present bottom of the shaft is now under way, and with its completion the bore will be sunk to a total depth of at least 650 feet, preparatory to the driving of a cross-cut to the west to fully explore the Hat claim at depth and to intercept what is known as the Gold Bar—Victor ledge in the east half of the Victor claim of the C.O.D. Consolidated Mining Company, held under lease by the Blue Bull Company.

DIAMONDFIELD MERGER.

Good headway and encouraging results are being obtained by the Diamondfield Merger Mining Company in the development of its lease on the Daisy property.

In the south drift on the 150-foot level, a winze has been started on an eighteen-inch streak of ore, averaging about $20 a ton, that was recently encountered in what is known as the "Fault" ledge. On the 200-foot level, the south drift, which has a total length at present of 210 feet, is being cleaned out, preliminary to its continuation a distance of about forty feet to intercept the ore body upon which a winze is being sunk on the 150-foot level.

TONOPAH DIVIDE.

The Tonopah Divide Mining Company, an assessable corporation of 1,000,000 shares of the par value of $1 each, has been organized by George Wingfield and associates for the purpose of taking over the property in the Tonopah Gold Mountain district, eight miles south of Tonopah of the defunct Tonopah Gold Mountain Mining Company.

The property, which has been considerably developed and has an excellent showing, was purchased by Mr. Wingfield and H. C. Brougher of Tonopah, two of the stockholders of the defunct company. The privilege of further sharing in the ownership of the ground has been extended by the organizers of the new company to the stockholders of the old corporation upon a basis of an exchange of share for share and the payment of an assessment of 3 cents a share. The period of time for such an exchange of shares expires September 5.

JUMBO EXTENSION.

In the east drift on the 800-foot level about 250 feet from the shaft of the Poleverde workings of the Jumbo Extension, a new ore shoot, four feet in width and averaging $76 a ton, has been encountered. A new hanging wall raise from the 900-foot

MEN HELD BACK BY SOCIALISM.

Views of the Vice-President of a Railroad.

Red Flag Philosophy Destroys Shop Discipline.

Santa Fe Official Gives Some Timely Advice.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Socialism with its agitators who preach a sentiment of anarchism rather than the good of the common people, as was the aim of Lycurgus when he tried to remove from Greek life the evils of insolence, envy, avarice and luxury, was discussed yesterday by W. B. Storey, Jr., vice-president in charge of the operation of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railroad.

Mr. Storey's discussion followed the speech of W. L. Park, vice-president and general manager of the Illinois Central Railroad, before the International Railway General Foremen's Association on Wednesday. In his address Mr. Park declared that railroads had "temporized too long with socialism, syndicalism and other pernicious isms."

HOLDS MEN BACK.

The attitude of a certain element toward socialistic doctrines, declared Mr. Storey, holds men back and causes a mutual feeling of antagonism, which can do the employer little harm, but which can do much toward making the workingman less prosperous.

Socialistic proclivities in the employee, who otherwise would be advanced to do a great deal in the interest of his employer, makes him feel, said Mr. Storey, that the less he does the less he produces for the man who pays his wages, and therefore the nearer he is approaching to the ideals of the socialistic propaganda.

"I recognize that the tendencies of socialism today are destroying the control of the shop employees and are hurting the essential spirit for the proper conduct of large industrial enterprises," said Vice-President Storey.

RED FLAG DOCTRINE.

"Efforts should be made to discourage the principle among the men who are susceptible to the teachings of a red flag doctrine—which is in the interest of a few who are endeavoring to commercialize the sentiment of socialism.

"The workingman who, as a rule, has the interest of his family and home at heart, is spurred to action by stories of the efforts of his employer to obtain the largest production possible from him at the lowest cost. He is told that the product of his labor belongs to him, and the weaker man, feeling that he is being robbed of what is really his, naturally wants to strike back.

"Immediately he becomes a foe to his employer. He develops into a barrier in the progress of the business, rather than an aid."

A BOND FROM STRIKERS.

A Cleveland Towing Company Required a Guaranty Before Taking Back Repentant Employees.

[The Argonaut:] The Great Lakes Towing Company of Cleveland, Ohio, established a useful precedent when it demanded a financial bond from the Tug Firemen's Union before allowing its striking and now repentant employees to return to work. The offense was a particularly bad one. A contract entered into a year previous, and that was supposed to preclude a strike, had been deliberately broken, not under the pressure of grievances, but because certain agitators in Chicago had arbitrarily ordered the men to leave their work. Even the local union president had been ignored in the matter, orders being sent to the men direct from Chicago, and this fact was actually urged by the employees themselves in their plea for reinstatement. They acted, they said, in the heat of the moment and without reference to right or wrong. Now they ask to go back to work under the terms of the unexpired contract.

Under such circumstances the towing company was justified in questioning the value of any contract with a union to which no financial liability was attached. Obviously there could be no value to an agreement with a union that recognized no ethical consideration whatever and that was ready to break any contract that could not be enforced at law. After such an object lesson in union honor the company asked for a bond for $5000 as a guaranty against its repetition, and as this was a condition of reinstatement the bond was immediately forthcoming. Henceforth the Tug Firemen's Union will probably be a little more chary about breaking its contract. If it can not understand the obligations of an agreement it will have no difficulty in estimating the precise value of $5000 and the inconvenience of forfeiture.

All agreements with unions everywhere ought to be based upon liability bonds. Without such bonds the agreements are useless. Moral obligations have no binding weight upon men who are ready at a moment's notice to throw aside their duties to their employer in obedience to orders from dictators of whom they know nothing and in quarrels that are not theirs. To give bonds in support of contracts is the general commercial practice even among men who attach a certain sanctity to an agreement. Why not impose similar liabilities upon those whose promises have been so often proved to have no value?

Convicted Himself.

[Topeka Capital:] Wichita lawyers are yet talking about the way Wallace B. Baker, who was found guilty last week in the District Court of selling mortgaged property, showed his ignorance of married life. The prosecuting attorney was trying to show that Baker wasn't married. He asked Baker the following questions:

"Did you ever send your wife any dresses?"

"Yes. I sent her four dresses."

"What kind of dresses did you send her?"

"I sent her one good dress and three common dresses."

"How much did you pay for the good dress, Mr. Baker?"

"Oh, I guess about $4.50."

The lawyers put Mr. Baker down then and there as an unmarried man and a poor guesser.

A NATIONAL DEFENSE.

Employers of the Country Will Have to Unite Against the Anarchistic Spell-Binders Making Trouble.

[The Square Deal:] That the Industrial Workers of the World, as an organization, bid fair to become so powerful by reason of their methods that it will be necessary for the employers of America to make a determined stand against them now is evidenced by the growing feeling of dread shown by various employers associations throughout the country. On the Pacific Coast, where the Industrial Workers of the World have been active for quite awhile, the various employers' associations have presented a solid front and in many instances have succeeded in driving the anarchistic spellbinders out of their cities.

The Lawrence strike convinced the East that there was something more in the Industrial Workers of the World organization than mere wind. Several plans have been suggested by which the inroads of this latest labor union could be prevented. The most recent plan is to form a National Employers' Council. This idea originated with Robert Wuest, a commissioner of the National Metal Trades Association, and was first broached by him at the annual national convention of that association, held in New York City early in April.

Mr. Wuest's plan is best described in his own words, and the following extract, taken from his annual report as commissioner of the Metal Trades Association, is self-explanatory:

"In presenting my annual report covering our operations for the past year, I feel it my duty to call attention to the grave danger which will confront employers, immediately upon the return of business to normal. This danger lies in the scarcity of labor, both common and skilled, which is beginning to be noted at this time. It seems to me that unless immediate steps are taken by employers, there is danger of a social upheaval of the working people of this country, if for no other reason than because of the activities of the extremely active and militant arm of Socialism, the Industrial Workers of the World, which was responsible for the violent incident to that totally unnecessary strike which occurred recently at Lawrence, Mass.

"The danger referred to and similar dangers, which it is unnecessary at this time to enumerate, can be obviated to an extent by the formation of a National Employers' Council, designed for the sole purpose of taking prompt and effective action. This council should consist of the president, vice-president and active executive officers of such associations as our own, the National Founders, the National Erectors, the National Furniture Manufacturers, and many other similar national associations, whose officers and members would undoubtedly want representation.

"Such a council would not necessarily require more than a merely nominal working capital, for the reason that the expenses of its members and any extraordinary expenses recommended by the council itself could be taken care of on some equitable basis by the associations represented.

"As one of our correspondents, in writing on this subject, puts it, 'what really ought to be done is to get some sort of action on the part of the investor.' If bankers and investors would take the proper stand as regards the open shop the contractors (in the building trades, for instance,) would be compelled to do so. This, in a measure, could be brought about by this proposed council making representation to the American Bankers' Association and like associations having to do with granting of credits.'

"If such council as I have briefly outlined, with the backing of all other associations of employers, could be formed, it would strongly tend to place industrial matters in this country upon a sound footing.

"Conditions may not be such at this time as to make much progress toward open-shop conditions in many trades, but it is unquestionably the height of time to begin the constructive work. I, therefore, seriously recommend that this convention place itself on record as being favorable to the formation of a National Employers' Council such as has just been described."

CHANGING FOR WORSE.

British Criticism of Organized Labor and Gompers' Admission of being Fooled by McNamaras.

Writing of the Los Angeles dynamite crime, the London Times says that there is "no doubt in the public mind that the long series of outrages are trade-union outrages," and it adds:—"The McNamaras were evidently not working at their own charges. A series of over a hundred dynamite explosions, all occurring in shops where the domination of organized labor was not recognized, could not have been carried out without plenty of money, without central direction, or without a complete system for sheltering the criminals. There have been many indications that 'organized labor'—or, to give it the proper name, the American Federation of Labor—has under its present direction been changing for the worse alike in its aims and methods. Its president—Mr. Gompers—has shown a sinister tendency to sympathize even openly with violence and lawlessness. The impression thus created has been deepened by the way in which he and his fellow-officials have ranged themselves on the side of the McNamaras, declaring them to be the victims of an unscrupulous capitalist conspiracy.

When they took that line they, of course, were not aware of the strength of the case against the actual perpetrators, and could not forsee that these men would be reduced to confession. Their subsequent pose has been to present themselves as 'fooled,' and to lead the outcry for condign punishment, but they have not succeeded by these means in throwing public opinion off the scent. The complaint that they have been fooled might have had more success if they had not added that they see no necessity for investigation on their own part into the working of an organization the chiefs of which are exposed to such a misfortune. It is now noted that the Federation of Labor is not incorporated, and is therefore outside the law, and beyond the control of the State. Also people note that its affairs are as much a secret as were those of the Standard Oil Trust, and that it can raise and spend vast sums of money for which its officials appear to be responsible to no one. The comparison with the Oil Trust is rather significant as showing how the American people are confronted with the same evil of secret and irresponsible autocracy at both ends of the social scale."

Labor's Unrest.

STRIKES ON AND OFF AND STRIKES COMING.

TWO HUNDRED AND FIFTY THOUSAND women and children are literally starving in London—women and children belonging to the striking dock workers, for whose support and existence those self-deluded men are responsible. Column after column of the daily papers of London is filled with appeals for money to buy food for them, signed by bishops, clergymen, relief societies and others. Women stand pitifully on street corners asking charity. Children, hundreds of them, hold out begging hands. Practically the entire dock district of London is a vast poorhouse. In all the streets of the district one sees the pinched and hungry faces of little children and their starving mothers. The shame of it rests first on the designing strike leaders and next, if not first, on the many thousands of able-bodied strikers who will not do the work and earn the wages, waiting for them at the docks. For the sake of that fool thing called "recognition of the union," these strikers are letting nothing but intermittent and, naturally, insufficient charity, stand between their wives and children and literal starvation. And this has been going on for weeks and weeks, with no real signs of cessation. There is no indication (but the contrary) that the strike agitators or their wives and children are doing any of the suffering. What care they (in the United States as well as in England) for the mental and physical suffering of their deluded victims or of those dependent on those victims. In passing it may be noted that the London strike committee has wired Gompers and Company (A. F. of L.) for financial help. They won't get much, if anything, as in 1911, out of about $360,000 income, and cash balance, Gompers and Company only returned to its deluded wage-earning contributors, $4192—only a little over 1 per cent.—for "strike benefits" (see Gompers and Co., 1911 annual report.) It was only $6484 the year before. Still Gompers, Morrison and Co. drew their fat salaries and expenses with regularity, besides paying thousands of dollars of wage-earners' money to Alton B. Parker and other lawyers, in the effort to keep them and John Mitchell out of jail, to which they have been justly sentenced for gross and repeated contempt of court.

Gosling, chief leader of the London dockers' strike, is openly charged by clergymen of the strike district with leading a dishonest strike, few of the strikers knowing why they are on strike. His methods are scandalous. In labor circles he is denounced for using the tactics so unsuccessful seven years ago, when, after fifteen weeks of strike suffering, the lightermen went back to work on the old conditions. Gross intimidation is being practiced, without any rebuke from him. All he says is: "Fight on, boys, even though you and yours are starving." The port of London has already lost hundreds of thousands of pounds; public anger is reaching a white heat. This strike is one of the most desperate and demoralizing in England's history. And all because just one worker could not be forced to join a certain local union, though already a member of another. That's worse tyranny than recognition of "the" union, meaning unions as a whole. Besides this, the strike entails much political evil, because, by its pandering to socialist union labor in the past for votes (just as the Democrats in the House at Washington are now doing) the present semi-socialist British government is not dealing with the strike situation as it should—in fact, led by Socialist Lloyd George, it is holding aloof and letting all the strike evils and misery go on. Ten thousand Liverpool dock workers struck on July 15, against the workmen's compulsory insurance law:, just gone into operation, affecting 10,000,000 workers. It was put through by John Burns, the erstwhile labor leader in the British Parliament, who now draws a government salary of $25,000 a year, and wears gold lace, knee-breeches, cocked hat and a sword. He is now quite willing to put more taxes on his years ago fellow-workmen, in spite of the fact that they foolishly put him where he is. Had Gompers, the cockney cigar-maker, stayed in London, a job like that would doubtless have been gladly accepted by him. So it is with most union-labor leaders and strike leaders on both sides of the Atlantic. Out of public office it is "we are for you;" in public office feeding at public crib, it is, "We and this are for us."

Extraordinary stories of picketing are current among the East End tailors says the London Times. The situation became so serious that one of the leading West End tailoring firms had to move their East End "shops," master tailors, journeymen, and all, to quarters under the shadow of their business premises. The men employed in these shops are non-unionists and do not want to join the union; they accordingly seemed to be marked men in the district in which they lived. Employers have also received statements from their workmen of violence inflicted upon them. One employer reports two pressers and a deaf and dumb man badly knocked about. Another gives names and full details in a description of a savage assault upon a man who was summoned to a kind of court of inquisition, where his working as a non-unionist during the strike was investigated. He was brutally belabored in his transit to and from the scene of his "trial."

Eighty per cent. of the Pennsylvania striking freight-handlers at New York City have stampeded back to work. The road made some minor concessions, but not, say the strikers, "recognition of the union." That thing of industrial tyranny is being kicked around from pillar to post everywhere. Union labor hurts itself badly everytime it urges it.

Philadelphia icemen have gone on strike for shorter hours and more pay. There is danger of an ice famine, even though as in Egypt of old, the "cribs are full of corn."

After eighteen years of trial, the worker's compulsory arbitration law of New Zealand is not now generally approved. For years New Zealand was famous as "a land without strikes." From 1894 to 1905—the first 11 years of the original law—there were no strikes at all. In 1906 there was one, in 1907 there were twelve, and in 1908 there were again twelve. Workmen now make war upon the court when its awards do not suit them. That's what the California "recall of the judiciary" law means. No award, if obtained by force, can be enforced lastingly, to the permanent advantage of either party.

Striking seamen set fire to the Red Line steamship Zeeland in the port of Antwerp, Belgium. The managers of the Seamen's Syndicate have been arrested.

Thirteen thousand cotton mill operatives are now on strike at New Bedford, Mass. The striking weavers want the grading system of wages abolished, and this thirteen thousand went out in sympathy.

The seamen's and longshoremen's strike at New York and other Atlantic ports goes harshly on. Some ships have to sail with strike-breaking crews. The longshoremen want a raise from 30 to 35 cents an hour. They now demand it also of the trans-Atlantic lines. Some violence is occurring. Signs printed "Remember the Titanic—this crew is incompetent" are being displayed in an effort to frighten trans-Atlantic passengers. That action is indefensible and utterly alienates sympathy.

The I.W.W.'s are trying to tie up harvesting in the Walla Walla district, Washington. As usual they demand more wages and less (or no) work. Openly they are cursing the government and the flag. This kind of outrage must, eventually, lead to military executions. It's revolution, and nothing else. Our flag is ourselves—it must be protected at any cost, as in the Civil War. Love for the flag is not merely a sentiment with true Americans, but a vital duty. We bought it by blood and must, if necessary, defend it by blood.

The American Ice Company will sue the Central Labor Union of that city for officially blacklisting it. This is what Gompers, Mitchell and Morrison have (eventually) to go to prison for in the Bucks Stove and Range Company case. It seems hard to impress warnings on badly-led union labor.

Mechanical orchestras may replace the disposed to strike musicians of the New York theaters. Many of the theaters will cut out orchestras this season rather than lose money by paying the too-high wages asked. Discontented union labor is fond of putting itself "out of a job."

Labor conditions in Massachusetts today, says the Sun of New York, are worse than at anytime in the history of the Bay State, according to records in the offices of the State labor authorities. Fifty-two strikes are on and 20,000 workers are idle. New Bedford has 13,490 cotton mill operatives out. They demand equal pay for bad work and good work. Boston has 3500 car employees out, and 300 painters. Other cities in the State where strikes of shoe or other workers are on include Lynn, Ludlow, Holyoke, Lawrence, Huntington, Fall River, Clinton, Amesbury, Webster, Springfield, Worcester, Everett, Lowell and Pittsfield.

REPORTS ON WAGES AND CONDITIONS.

Timely Bulletins from All Parts of the World.

Railway wages in England (always far too low) are being advanced. The Lancashire and Yorkshire Railway granted for three years from June 28 a general advance of wages to freight-yard employees of 24 cents to 36½ cents a week, and a general reduction of working hours from over sixty to fifty-seven and a half and fifty-four a week. The lower-paid grades receive the greatest advantage. It is expected that terms will shortly be arranged with signalmen and plate layers.

The North-Eastern Railway has issued to its workmen in detail on May 30 and June 7 decisions on wages, etc., of the Conciliation Board. About 7000 men, principally of lower grades, were awarded advances from June 21, varying from 24 cents to 73 cents a week.

The Midland Railway also consents to the following higher daily wages:

	Per Day.
Firemen	97½ cents to $1.10
Drivers	$1.46 to $1.82
Emergency drivers	$1.22
Drivers of express trains	2.01
Drivers of certain freight trains	2.01
Drivers of certain passenger trains	1.89
Drivers of class A trains	1.89

These terms are regarded as entirely satisfactory to the men. Comparison of these advanced rates of wages earned by British railway workers with the well-known much higher rates paid to American railway workers, shows that the latter have really no just reason for their present attempts to force advances from American roads of far greater amount than "the traffic will bear."

Testifying before the Commission of Arbitrators sitting at the Oriental Hotel, Manhattan Beach, N. Y., President B. A. Worthington of the Chicago and Alton Railway, said:

"If the commission granted the increase in wages to the engineers the roads would be forced without a fight to make similar concessions to all their other employees, and this would mean an increase of $63,000,000 to the yearly pay rolls. The eastern engineers' request (or demand, rather) for $7,000,000 increase would fall upon these smaller and weaker lines and not upon the richer ones that can more easily afford it. It would force some of the small roads into stoppage and bankruptcy. In 1911 the fifty-two eastern roads, whose engineers' demands are the demands under arbitration, had net operating revenues of $361,973,439. In 1900 they employed 19,543 engineers at an average salary of $1130 and in 1910 they had 27,775 engineers at an average of $1360, an increase of $230, average, per man per year. The increase granted to these engineers in 1910 amounted to $4,044,230, while now, only two years later, they demand a further $7,000,000. The present rates of wages are adjusted to local conditions and weak roads, and the advance, if granted, will fall entirely upon the latter. In addition, the firemen on the fifty-two roads are demanding $20,000,000 increase. The other workers are waiting to demand equivalent increases in their turn.

The rates of wages per day demanded by the engineers are:

Smaller freight engines	$5.25
Larger engines	$5.50 to 5.75
Mallet engines	7.00
Switching engines	4.50
Belt line engines	5.00

All want overtime if held more than fifteen hours away from their home terminal.

British Compulsory Workmen's Insurance.

Consul-General Griffiths of London reports:

"Under the provisions of the British national insurance act of 1911, which came into operation on July 15, 1912, all persons over 16 and under 70 years of age under contract of service, at whatever periods they may be paid, who receive less than £160 ($778.64) per annum, must be insured.

"There is no option. It is compulsory insurance. Certain persons are exempt, but no exception is made in the act in favor of consular employees. A firm of English solicitors assures me that consular employees, whatever their nationality, who receive less than £160 ($778.64) per annum, are compelled to take out such insurance, unless exempted by some treaty stipulation.

"All employees who fall under the act will pay 8 cents each week in the way of insurance dues or premiums, while the employer will be required to pay 6 cents weekly for each of the said employees."

Bids for the Labor Vote.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—The House passed two measures today designed as a bid for the labor vote in the coming campaign.

One was a bill introduced by Representative Sulzer of New York creating a department of labor, the head of which shall be a Cabinet officer. The other measure was introduced by Representative Hughes of New Jersey and provides an industrial commission, consisting of nine members, to investigate and report on the causes of labor troubles and the general relations existing between labor and capital. Both measures have been approved by labor organizations.

The American Pay Envelope.

Under our present economic and fiscal policies fully $5,000,000,000 a year now gets into the weekly pay envelopes of our wage earners. It was $4,615,000,000 when the census was taken on April 15, 1910. In addition, fully $7,500,000,000 a year more, gets into the monthly and other pay envelopes of salaried men, of farmers who do much or all of their own work, of small merchants and shopkeepers, and of professional men and women.

Necessarily, says the American Economist, a vast sum of money must go into the pay envelopes of Americans of all classes to enable them to pay for the 90 per cent. used at home of our annual $21,000,000,000 factory production. Any radical change in our present economic and fiscal policies means less employment, less wages, and economic disaster (as in '93 to '96.) That's the thing for us to remember when we go to the polls one November 5, next.

Wage Reductions Proposed.

British employers are resenting being compelled to pay towards the compulsory insurance of their employees, and intimate a general wage reduction to offset their forced contributions. In that way the worker will be compelled to pay his own insurance. Lloyd George, the Socialist Chancellor of the Exchequer, openly declares that this act (now in force) is only the beginning of a series of forced levies upon capital. At the same time it is a forced levy on the wages of the poorly-paid British worker. Their insurance tax cards have to be stamped daily by the employer for them and for himself. It is 12 cents a day for some low-grade workers who only get 28 cents a day. Already this socialistic act is causing loss of work to those whom it was alleged to benefit. In a way it is pauperizing, like the old age pensions act, and other Socialist acts.

Wages Increased.

The Jones and Laughlin Steel Company has of its own accord, like the United States Steel Corporation and other companies, advanced wages 10 per cent.

Must Increase Cost.

IS EIGHT-HOUR LAW NECESSARY?

WILL SERIOUSLY AFFECT ALL MANUFACTURERS.

Government Work Will Have to Be Done by Government Alone at a Higher Cost Than Otherwise, Which Will Have to Be Paid by the People of the Whole Country.

[The Review:] The shorter work day will always be a popular subject with the workingman. It is particularly pertinent for discussion just now due to the eight-hour bill which has been introduced in our national Congress, providing that all direct contractors and all their sub-contractors as well shall employ no man on government work more than eight hours per day. This brings everything supplied to the government, directly or indirectly, under its provisions. Furthermore, if adopted, it means in the language of union leaders, an extension of the eight-hour day to every line of industry. Every man, woman and child in the country, therefore, is vitally interested.

Government work is so intermingled with other work that no one who has not studied the matter can understand all its ramifications. We were surprised, when we came to investigate, at the number of plants which were doing the work and the number that wished to be in a position to do it; in other words, had submitted bids from time to time and lived in the hope of eventually getting a contract. Every workman therefore in machine shops, foundries, cotton mills, woolen mills, flour mills and limitless other occupations is interested. It makes no difference whether or not he is doing government work today; he may be doing it tomorrow. What then are these supposed friends attempting to do for his advantage?

We are most interested ourselves in foundries and machine shops, and therefore in this article will refer mostly to these industries. The average machine shop throughout the country works either nine or ten hours. It is doing work perhaps for several customers, but government work is its filler. Without it there is not enough to keep everybody employed; it represents the percentage of profit.

Briefly, there are two arguments why the firm devoting only part of its plant to government work could not continue its practice under the proposed legislation. The first is that the general competitive work, or its own line of business, requires a nine or ten-hour day to produce at the right price. Obviously, a plant could not run one department, or part of a department, on eight hours and the others on ten or nine. Even if it were practicable, wages would be based accordingly and there would be continued strife. What is worse, it would be impossible to maintain discipline, the greatest essential of the well-organized shop. The second argument is that in most cases it would be impossible to segregate the work. Each mechanic would require constant superintendence to be sure he was working only eight hours on a government piece and the regular time on other work. It cannot be done.

The result would be that a firm would have to do all government work or none. The private establishment cannot do government work exclusively. It is mostly given to the lowest bidder; there is no certainty as to whether the contract will be obtained or not. One stroke, and all a firm's business may be lost; another business would have to be built up. No one would take such a risk.

Therefore, the present bill if passed means that the government will have to do all its own work. Well, you say, the result would be the same; the same number of workmen would be employed. But would the result be the same? The government, to do all its own work, would enlarge its present plants and perhaps build new ones, but in any instance the work would be centralized. The workmen would have to follow the work. What does this mean to the man whose home and whose friends are not movable? He has the alternative—less work or perhaps no work. William Cramp & Sons recently refused to bid on a battleship under the eight-hour law. How many men are out of work as a result? Who then gets the benefits? The government employee. Without belittling the work of the government employee, is it not a fact that he is already hampered for political purposes beyond all limits? Is not the very expression "government job" a synonym for a "soft snap?" Has not the government employee already all the favors he can reasonably expect? And who will pay for this new one?

The increase in the cost of the battleship New York of $1,710,000, built by the government, over her sister ship, the Texas, built outside, suggests the answer. Our government expenditures are large enough now; indirect taxes are easy to collect, but there will come a time when these same indirect taxes will be too heavy a burden and the workmen will be the principal sufferers.

Obviously, the present bill is of no benefit to the ordinary workman, and so we will get right down to the proposition that most interests him.

Here, you say, the workman has his inning. In the abstract there is no proposition quite so good to the workingman as the eight-hour day, unless it is a still shorter day. "Something for nothing" is an appeal that bolsters up many a doubtful proposition. No one knows, this better than the demagogic politician and the labor agitator. But, "those who dance must pay the fiddler." It is an old maxim, and a very true one.

Is the eight-hour day logical? Bear in mind that its advocates do not say we shall have an eight-hour day for the molder and a ten-hour day for the farmer—they say we shall have an eight-hour day for everybody. Occupations differ; for some, eight hours is too long; for others it is too short. It is unfair to class all alike.

Furthermore, what class of manufacturer will be most hurt? It will be the small proprietor; the one who has but little capital to spare—the machinist or molder perhaps who has saved enough from his daily wages to start in business for himself. Can he afford to invest five or six thousand dollars in machinery that can only be run eight hours? Look around at the men who have started in business for themselves. They are running on the smallest possible margin of profit until their business increases. What possible chance for success will they have if hampered by an eight-hour day?

And now we come to this extra leisure time; the supposed object of this movement. This extra time is to conserve the workingman's health; to provide more time for him to improve his mind; to enjoy his family, his

Similarly $500 will handle 5000 shares—and the net profit on a 25% advance on 5000 shares is $1250. The point is right here:

When You Buy California Realty Corporation Stock at $1 per Share You are Buying at 25% Under the Intrinsic Value

"HOLLAND" ON CORN CROP AND HIGH LIVING COST.

[LETTER TO WASHINGTON POST FROM DISTINGUISHED NEW YORK ECONOMIST AND WRITER.]

NEW YORK, July 13.—In round numbers, 3,100,000,000 bushels of corn were harvested in the United States three years ago, and by a curious coincidence the number of bushels was approximately the same as the money value of our entire international commerce measured in dollars. Since that time this commerce has been increasing, whereas not so many bushels of corn have been harvested in any year since the record corn crop was made.

The crop experts employed by the government forecast a harvest of 2,811,000,000 bushels of corn this year. But the record which is to be made by our international commerce in the present calendar year will, unless there be a great slump in the fall, probably be in excess of $4,000,000,000 money value. We are commanding foreign trade more rapidly than we are growing corn, if the comparision be made in this way. It has been pointed out that the government's estimate of the corn crop, made public on Tuesday, was in great measure made before recent favorable climatic conditions prevailed over the corn belt. Therefore, unless there should come scorching heat and protracted drought, the probabilities are that the harvest of corn this year will approximate 3,000,000,000 bushels.

So long ago as the fall of 1877, Samuel J. Tilden, who made a prolonged excursion to Europe with intent to recover from the fatigue and the disappointment of the Presidential campaign the preceding year, spoke to a large gathering that had assembled in front of his Gramercy Park house on the night of the day after his return. He made no reference to politics. His speech was devoted entirely to economic questions. The chief topic discussed by him was the importance of the harvest of Indian corn, or maize. He thougt that the American people did not realize the economic value of Indian corn, especially when the markets of Europe and of the world were under consideration. He urged that Americans be sent to Europe to teach the people the palatable and nourishing ways in which Indian cornmeal could be prepared as food. He said that if we could overcome the prejudice prevailing in many countries of Europe and especially in Great Britain against the use of prepared cornmeal as a table food, we could find a very large and very profitable market for this product.

Gov. Tilden went so far as to proclaim his belief that if the American farmers would cultivate corn upon a great scale that product would ultimately supplant even cotton, and certainly wheat, so far as the money value of these products was concerned. Gov. Tilden ventured to say privately after he had delivered his speech that he believed it to be possible to harvest at least 5,000,000,000 bushels of corn a year in the United States. A harvest of that kind would mean, he said, great increase in the traffic of the railroads. Corn converted into food products, such as beef and pork, and into table food would, he thought, be discovered to be the most valuable of American agricultural productions.

GOV. TILDEN'S PREDICTION.

What Gov. Tilden predicted thirty-five years ago has now been justified by the event. While the American population is rapidly equaling the wheat production, so far as demand and supply are concerned, and must soon be in excess of wheat production unless new wheat belts are opened up or more skillful cultivation of wheat is adopted, there is no danger that our population will grow so rapidly as to encroach upon our yearly production of Indian corn sufficiently to absorb at home all of the corn harvest. Corn and cotton are to be our great agricultural exports although in the case of corn it will be converted either into animal food or into meal adapted for table use.

A GREAT REPORT.

The latest government crop report is most encouraging. Nothing but severe climatic setbacks can apparently prevent the harvesting if not of a record crop at least one whose money value may be estimated as high as $9,000,000,000.

Whether the greatest harvest of corn now looked for will make possible a reduction in the price of beef remains to be disclosed. Apparently a tacit, spontaneous, and yet far-reaching understanding is operating in such manner that the price of beef may be affected, and in accordance with the economic law of supply and demand. In many parts of the country the hot weather and the high cost of beef have combined to make this a most favorable opportunity greatly to reduce the demand. In some of the markets it is reported that householders are buying anywhere from 50 per cent. to 75 per cent. less beef than they did when the prices were lower. The movement appears to be a spontaneous boycotting of beef, and possibly it may be the most effective way to bring about a reduction of price.

THE HIGH COST OF LIVING.

Recently in speaking of the relation of the tariff to the high cost of living Col. Roosevelt said that he had observed that some of the necessaries of life, like eggs and butter, were marked at very high prices, although the tariff has no important relation to these necessaries of life. There are millions of eggs sold in the markets over which the middlemen or the trusts have had no control. The farmers bring eggs in great numbers to the markets or peddle them from house to house, and it is observed that they always charge prices quoted in the markets which are controlled by the middlemen or by the trusts.

E. C. Converse, the banker, who is also identified with the United States Steel Corporation, operates a great farm near the boundary line of New York and Connecticut. While in one sense it is an avocation or recreation for Mr. Converse, the farm is operated on as strict business principles, and with as firm a discipline as is any of the industrial or banking corporations with which Mr. Converse is associated. The eggs which he markets from his great chicken farm command even higher prices than the eggs controlled by any trust, and yet Mr. Converse employs no middlemen nor does he have any dealings with commission merchants except that some retail dealers act as agents for him. Butter from his farm sells at a standard price the year around, yet it never knew the brand of any milk or butter trust. These high prices are asked because, in the first place, Mr. Converse wants to get a reasonable return from the heavy investment which he has made in his model farm, and, in the second place, the prices are paid because purchasers know what the quality of Mr. Converse's farm products is. Yet the standard prices which he has been able to maintain fix the standard prices which other farmers charge for like products.

Much of the land once devoted to grazing, the veterans say, is now devoted to nothing. Productivity has been reduced to a minimum, relatively speaking, and some of the most careful students of the problem of the high cost of living are beginning to be persuaded that it cannot be solved, at least so far as the necessaries of life are concerned, until lands which for years have been neglected are made available for producing some of the necessaries of life.

How easy it is to make these neglected lands available so that they can produce rich harvests and a great variety of food products, is illustrated by the experience of Mr. Converse. It is only about six years since he took up a dozen or more deserted or half-deserted farms in the northwestern part of the town of Greenwich, Conn., near the New York boundary line. He has already been able to convert lands which were presumed to be worthless and orchards which were thought to have gone to decay, into one great farm producing in richness and in high quality every variety of food product that will grow in the temperate zone. Of course, it is said that great capital has been required to accomplish this, but the small farm with relatively small capital can achieve as greatly with intelligent cultivation as can this colossal farm of thousands of acres which Mr. Converse has developed chiefly for the purpose of giving the farmers of the East an object lesson.

News From the Great California Oil Fields.

McKittrick.

OPERATORS ATTRACTED.

Much Interest Shown in Newly Discovered Field.

Light Gravity Oil at an Unusually Shallow Depth.

Standard's Intention to Sink New Wells.

[Special Correspondence of the Times.]

McKITTRICK, July 27.—Attracted by the interest resultant upon the recent discovery of light oil at shallow depth on the property operated by Fred Mannell, and associates, of Bakersfield, on section 35, 27-20, prominent oil men from various points visited this and neighboring tracts during the week.

For several days negotiations for the purchase of tracts of land near and some distance from the Mannell lease have been conducted quietly by representatives of various companies and also, by individuals, who wish to acquire options on holdings regarded as more or less promising. Most of the conferences as to prospective transactions have been held in Los Angeles and San Francisco, and the outcome will likely be made manifest within a comparatively short time in at least some instances.

The finding of oil at 485 feet was not made public for some days, but when announced in the press widespread interest was aroused among operators, and it is now a much discussed topic, owing to the prospective development of a practically new field, the quality of the petroleum and apparent low cost of production.

Added to these features and evidencing the confidence felt in the future of the territory extending from the McKittrick-Belridge district for miles in the direction of Lost Hills, are late deals in land near the Belridge field.

The Standard Oil Company, as heretofore stated in The Times, early in the present month, consummated the purchase of all of section 19, 28-21, with the exception of the south half of the northeast quarter. The Standard's latest acquisition is near the properties of the Belridge Oil Company, which has about two-score wells, among them being some excellent producers. No work has yet been done on the Standard's tract, but it is believed that a camp will be established before long and the building of rigs commenced.

The General Petroleum, the Union, the Pittsburgh-Belridge and the Panama and the Belridge Oil companies are doing considerable work on their respective sections, and much activity also prevails on the North McKittrick front on the part of several new concerns.

The transportation of lumber and supplies continues steadily, indicative of still greater and more widely distributed operations. An innovation in the Belridge district is the use of motors by the General Petroleum Company, in the drilling of several wells, and as they are said to be working quite satisfactorily, it is probable that other companies will give them a trial.

KERN TRADING.

The Kern Trading and Oil Company has started one string on the southeast quarter of section 28, 31-22, eight miles south of McKittrick.

DEVELOPMENT NOTES.

The Tumbadour Oil Company is drilling well No. 8, on the northwest quarter of section 23, 31-22.

The Associated Oil Company on Wednesday spudded in well No. 63, on the Del Monte lease, in the McKittrick field, and on the following day began the placing of twelve-inch casing.

Well No. 22, on the Belridge Oil Company's lease, which, until recently, supplied gas sufficient to run the lease, is being redrilled for an oil well.

The German-American Oil Company will, within the next day or two, spud in well No. 1, on section 18, 29-21, on the North McKittrick front. [illegible] capitalists are at the head of this company, and R. H. Rice is superintendent.

The United Oil Company, operating on section 6, 30-22, will likely begin the erection of a new rig within a short time. This company recently purchased the equipment of the Bob-Burns Oil Company.

It is reported that a number of wells are to be drilled by the General Petroleum Company on the north half of section 8, 29-21.

The Hondan Oil Company, which has several wells on section 15, 31-22, North Midway field, is getting an output of about 200 barrels daily from No. 4. This well was redrilled some time ago, and the company is now having No. 5 well redrilled.

ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Speedwell Oil Company, which controls a lease on section 1, 30-22, North McKittrick front, will be held in McKittrick next Monday for the election of directors.

STANDARD ACTIVITY.

It is reported today that the Standard Oil Company will put up a standard rig on section 3, 28-20, and another on section 19, 28-21. These derricks are to be on lands recently acquired by the company, the former location being ten miles northwest of the Belridge properties, and the latter four miles.

ENGINEER RESIGNS.

Harry Schwab, who for two years has filled the position of mechanical engineer of the Associated Oil Company, in the McKittrick division, has resigned, and this week removed to Santa Barbara, where he will engage in the automobile business. Mr. Schwab, who came to McKittrick two years ago, from Portland, Or., is well known and very popular in the West Side oil fields.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Thomas O'Donnell of Coalinga, a prominent figure in oil circles, was in the city this week.

President and General Manager E. [illegible] of the State Consolidated Oil Company, was here this week from Los Angeles.

J. O. Arkley, formerly superintendent of the Bear Creek Oil Company, is spending the summer months with his family in Fresno county.

PETROLEUM RECORDS BROKEN.

THE production of American petroleum in 1911 was 220,449,331 barrels of forty-two gallons each and constituted nearly two-thirds of the world's total output. In this we broke our own record with nearly 11,000,000 barrels more than in 1910.

California led off with 81,134,391 barrels, followed by (chiefly:)

State—	Barrels.
Oklahoma	56,069,637
Illinois	31,317,038
Louisiana	10,720,420

The prices of the different oils varied greatly, ranging from 47 cents to $1.33 per barrel. Pennsylvania got $10,894,074 for 8,248,158 barrels, while Louisiana got only $5,668,814 for 10,720,420 barrels.

The principal increases in production in 1911 over 1910 were, in barrels:

California	8,139,331
Oklahoma	4,040,919
Louisiana	3,879,035

Illinois suffered a decrease of 1,826,324 barrels, and Ohio one of 1,099,358 barrels.

Seven year's sample productions:

Year—	Barrels.
1911	220,449,391
1910	209,557,248
1909	183,170,874
1907	166,095,335
1905	134,717,580
1903	100,461,337
1901	69,389,194
Increase in ten years	151,060,197

It is a matter of interest that the country's demand for gasoline has become so imperative, says Dr. Day, that little or none is now allowed to lower the safety of lamp oils; the latter have therefore greatly improved in character.

The three commodities of general market value to be considered in connection with crude oils are gasoline, kerosene and residuals, the last suitable for fuels in the West and for lubricants and wax in the East.

A feature of 1911, the influence of which is being felt in 1912, was the increase in transporting and refining capacity, which, in spite of the general increased yield of the country, led to a drain on stocks in the mid-continent field, the result being a general increase in the price of crude oils for refining.

LOST HILLS TO THE FORE.

Fresno Operator Is Spending Considerable Money Putting Down New Wells—Gas Is Showing Strong.

BAKERSFIELD, July 26.—James A. Ward the Fresno operator who has large holdings in the Lost Hills has resumed work on section 29, 25-20, in the northern end of the field. He has great faith in this upper territory and is backing up his convictions with the money of each for the development work.

It is said that $36,000 has been subscribed by the stockholders of the Little Jack Oil Company, which is putting down a well on section 15, 25-18, in the Devil's Den. The well is now more than 500 feet deep, with the ten-inch casing and work is progressing very favorably.

The Pluto Oil Company on section 19, 25-19, started work Saturday afternoon in its attempt to finish up the well. The gas is showing just as strong now as when operations were postponed several months ago. The work will now be rushed forward as the company has the financial suport to complete the well. The fact that the drill is now in hand under favorable conditions has given the management much encouragement.

FIVE HUNDRED WELL.

The Panama Oil Company's No. 1 well is just entering the oil formation at 3060 feet. The territory here is somewhat deeper than estimated, but the indications are for a very good well, which should be finished and on production within a week or ten days. This company's No. 2 well, which has been flowing since the eighteenth of June, was opened up Monday for the purpose of cleaning out and finishing it with 2½-inch tubing. The mud scow struck the sand plug 115 feet from the bottom. The scow was run in seven or eight times when the sand heaved up 450 feet in the casing. The next time the scow was run in, the gas pressure was so strong that it forced it out of the hole and clear to the top of the derrick. The well flowed over the derrick several times and when the mud scow was run in again, it was found that it had cleaned itself entirely of sand. Worw was started Tuesday running in the tubing, but at this writing the tubing was down only 800 feet, the gas pressure interfering with the work. The well has continued to flow almost without interruption. It flowed from 6:30 o'clock Wednesday evening until 10 o'clock Thursday morning, during which time 900 barrels of oil was tanked, and is now flowing 500 barrels daily. The company is making regular deliveries to the Standard Oil Company. Well No. 3 is down 260 feet and running in the 16-inch stovepipe casing.

LEVIES ASSESSMENT.

The Pyramid has levied an assessment of 5 cents per share, payable at once at the offices of the company in San Francisco. Stock on this assessment becomes delinquent August 19, sale day on delinquent stock September 23. In No. 1 well the 4¼-inch casing has been carried down to 3880 feet. An analysis of a sample of the sand brought out from this depth by the bailer is reported to show oil. The depth of the well at the time of the gas blowout was 4044 feet. The gas pressure is very strong and slow progress is being made. Well No. 2 on section 18 is drilling. Well No. 2 on section 26 in North Midway spudded in Sunday.

Rancho La Brea.

Two air compressors are scheduled to arrive in about a month for the Rancho La Brea Oil Company's new air plant's compressed air plants. One small compressor is now in operation and is pumping seven wells. One of the new outfits will be installed with this as soon as it arrives and will make it possible to operate twenty-five wells with air. The other new compressor will be operated in another portion of the field.

No. 18 of the Rancho La Brea property is nearing completion at 1800 feet. This is one of the wells which the company has been redrilling. It has been found that the production of many of the wells could be increased three times by sinking them from 100 to 300 feet deeper.

The compressed air which takes the place of steam in pumping the engines, has been found very successful on the Rancho La Brea ranch.

Field Notes.

The new derrick, which is being built over the old Lakeview gusher, will be completed about the last of next week, it is reported.

Adjoining the Rancho La Brea on the Gilmore property a gasoline refining plant has been built at a cost of $500, which has been putting out something like 100 barrels of very fine gasoline a day.

The Birch Oil Company is runnnng four strings of tools in Brea Canyon, and wells Nos. 7 and 8 will be finished in about two or three months. No. 7 is 2700 feet and No. 8 is 3085 feet deep. No. 8 is only about 150 to 200 feet distant from the great Menges gusher, which has been yielding 2400 barrels a day for nearly sixteen months. The company is drilling for the deeper oil sand in the new wells.

The California Midway well No. 7 has been bailed to 800 feet, and has had showings of gas and oil. It is said that this well shows indications at this stage of being a better well than that of the Pacific Crude.

FOURTEEN COUNTIES IN IT.

More than Forty-one Million Dollars Received for Hydro-Carbons During Nineteen Hundred and Eleven.

State Mineralogist Storms has issued an advance report, which shows that hydro-carbons, including petroleum, natural gas, bituminous rock, exclusive of asphalt and all other refined products, to the value of $41,161,226 were produced in California during 1911.

Fourteen counties contributed to the above total, as follows:

Kern	$20,373,344
Fresno	9,344,085
Orange	4,097,980
Los Angeles	3,329,180
Santa Barbara	3,305,103
Ventura	352,735
San Joaquin	114,433
Sacramento	83,890
Santa Cruz	80,371
Solano	40,274
San Luis Obispo	30,276
Santa Clara	8,505
Kings	800
Humboldt	150

The output is divided as follows:

Petroleum sold in 1911, or in storage Dec. 31	$37,930,820
Petroleum used as fuel in the field	2,621,268
Natural gas	491,859
Bituminous rock	117,279
Total	$41,161,226

JULY PRODUCTION.

The production of oil in the State for the month of July was 6,895,865 barrels, a daily average increase over May of 7861 barrels. The increase was chiefly due to the Pacific Crude well in the Midway field, which has been flowing for some time at the rate of 5000 barrels per day, and to the Belridge district north of McKittrick. The net production of the Midway district was 1,989,072 barrels, an increase of 5484 barrels per day. The Maricopa district produced 405,023 barrels, a daily increase of 741 barrels. Shipments for June totaled 6,420,405 barrels, a daily average increase of 3750 barrels.

In Devil's Den.

Reports from the Devil's Den district indicate that an oil field of no small proportions is to be opened up there. The formations of this district are somewhat different from those encountered in the Coalinga field and in the Lost Hills or further south. The shales in Devil's Den carry a large amount of gas accompanied with light oil.

The Pluto, on section 19, 25-19, has resumed operations on a well which has been shut down for several months, and the gas pressure appears to be as strong as ever. The hole has shown considerable shale oil with occasional seams of oil sands that indicate light oil. It is believed that the company will now finish the well.

The Marathon, on section 18, 25-18, a short distance from the Pluto, has been drilling and is now down 1320 feet with a ten-inch casing. It is in brown shale carrying a considerable quantity of oil, which is said to have increased in the last fifty feet.

The Lacey, on section 34, 25-18, is down 1840 feet and for the last 150 feet has developed more oil in the shale.

The Little Jack is over 500 feet deep, and a 12½-inch casing will soon be set in.

The Welcome Oil Company has resumed operations. Work was started up last month. The well, which was shut down at 450 feet about a year ago, is now being cleaned out and will be carried to completion at once.

This is said to be all the active development work in the Devil's Den district at the present time.

Finland's "White Nights."

[Answers:] June is the month of the "white nights" in the North. In Finland one can read a newspaper in the open air at midnight, and the sky is bright with a tender, gentle radiance. There is no break between the sunset and dawn, and the same rosy flush serves for both.

Strictly speaking, summer in Finland is just one long day. The moment the first star glimmers in the south it is a sign that autumn is at hand. The long period of light exercises a marvelous effect upon vegetation and the leaves of trees grow to an enormous size. Up North the development of plant life is crowded into a few weeks, but it is none the less perfect for that.

Though few people realize it, it is a fact that in June London has only five and a half hours of darkness. Up at Aberdeen in clear nights there is no blackness, only a kind of twilight. Scottish gardeners, if they wished, could work in the open at midnight, except perhaps in the south of our sister country.

Doonside.

I drank to Burns a draught of bonny Doon,
And as the water touched my lips, behold,
It seemed a scroll before mine eyes unrolled
As from the cloudy battlements of noon,
"Mortal," wondering, I read, "though man so soon
Departs to his dark chamber in the mold,
The seed of his life's work grows never old,
If it unto the nations yield a boon.
So fares the singer of these banks and braes;
So springs and twines his soul about man's dream,
That still he seems to live, to be not far.
To be a part of nature—like his lays,
And like the mavis here, and like this stream,
And like the ageless glory of a star."

Up Against It.

BIG FIGHT WITH POCKET OF GAS.

Efforts to Control Meet With Resistance.

Five Blow-outs Stir Up Water and Mud.

Devil's Den District Looms Very Bright.

After a difficult struggle lasting nearly a year with a tremendous gas pressure in well No. 2, the Lakeview No. 2 Oil Company has at last landed a 6¼-inch casing at a depth of 3900 feet and has cemented. The well will be opened up in the course of sixty days, and promises to be one of the largest producers in the field.

No less than five blow-outs were encountered in this well while drilling with a rotary. The last endured for nearly a week and threw mud and water to the top of the derrick at the estimated rate of 40,000 barrels a day for nearly a week. To accomplish this the pressure of the gas must have been about 3500 pounds to the square inch as that was the weight of the water and mud in the hole.

To control the gas pressure mud and water was forced into the hole, back into the walls of the well and into the gas strata, by rotary pumps and the mud was held in place by a heavy type Union tool gas blow out preventer. Then a high-power "Snow" line pump, with a pressure of 1000 pounds, in addition to the 3500-pound pressure of the mud and water within the well, was used to hold the gas in check. A bridge was formed at 3900 feet by allowing the well to stand idle for a period of three months, so that a casing could be landed and the well could be cemented.

It has cost the company nearly $100,000 to put this well in shape for operations.

NEW PIPE LINE.

The Producers' Transportation Company, which handles the oil of the Independent Agency, is to parallel its pipe line from Junction Station, where it received oil from all the San Joaquin Valley fields, to its terminus at Port Harford, in San Luis Obispo county. This will be an eight-inch line about sixty miles in length. The material is now in transit and active construction on the line will commence in thirty days. The capacity of the present line is 25,000 barrels per day and the company is now loading at Avila the full capacity of the line.

FOUR CENTS - - A DAY

Less than a nickel. Yet, these pennies, paid monthly, buy a hundred of our shares.

Queer, the difference between the penny paid for a paper and the penny banked—or, between the dollar that buys a meal and the dollar deposited to your account.

The penny banked and the dollar deposited immediately become important.

The same difference, to a greater degree, is in the penny invested.

Pennies invested become instantly your active agents.

Put into our shares, they are out where you can see them, and where you can lend a hand on your own account.

The four cents a day mean little. Anyone can save that much—even the babies.

Yet, they stand for the thought back of this Company—THRIFT—the keynote of our success.

We have wasted no time making a small success so that we might pay dividends the first few months.

Instead, we have laid a solid foundation, backed by plenty of capital, with enough building on our own properties to keep us busy for a year.

The results, in dividends, are close at hand.

Co-Operation Wins Another Big Victory

THE FAITH OF THE WORLD IN THE WEALTH OF THE LAND, THE GROWTH OF CALIFORNIA, AND THE GREATNESS OF THE GIBRALTAR PLAN OF DEVELOPING RICH TERRITORY IS BACK OF THE REMARKABLE SUCCESS OF THIS COMPANY IN TWO MONTHS' TIME, AND OF THE EARNING POWER OF EVERY DOLLAR INVESTED.

Our record is a decided victory for the policy of co-operation, and a most emphatic indorsement of the Gibraltar plan of sharing fully with all stockholders the great profits from using our own immense nurseries in the developing of land and the creating of orchard homes and little farms.

Gibraltar represents co-operation in the fullest sense. Not only does the 8 per cent preferred stock share equally in all greater profits beyond the 8 per cent guaranteed, but the directors of the company being holders only of common stock must make money for the co-operating public before they receive any benefit from their efforts and business skill. The preferred stock enjoys every right of the common stock.

This company was incorporated on May 11, and permanent offices were opened in Los Angeles on May 20. The directors immediately showed their business judgment by buying dividend-paying business enterprises, with records of large profits for 20 years. These include the largest olive nurseries in the world that are worth far more today than the cost of purchase. There are a number of big money-making propositions being closed by the directors that mean gratifying profits to the shareholders of this company.

Strong Record of Progressive Growth

The Gibraltar plan is so safe in establishment and so broad and liberal in profit-sharing that a record has been established for a two-months-old investment corporation in the City of Los Angeles. The amount of stock subscribed to is now $586,718.50, while the capital paid in reaches a total of $516,035.10. In one day's time a total of 287,500 shares of preferred stock were sold.

The faith of the world in the future of California is shown by the records of this company. From announcement made solely in Los Angeles papers we now have co-operating shareholders in Germany, Canada, Mexico, New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Oklahoma, Nebraska, Arizona, New Mexico and along the entire Pacific Coast.

This is a record for any new company to be proud of. The large army of co-partners in developing California's acres means big profits for all. The man who buys at the start secures the full earning power of his dollar.

Subscriptions will be received either in cash or 22 monthly payments to either the 8% preferred participating stock or to the common at 11c a share. Preferred stock may be exchanged at full market value for any property the company has for sale.

An Odd One.

PRINCE HENRY THIRTY-SEVENTH.

QUEER TITLE OF THE GERMAN HEIR OF A PRINCIPALITY.

All the Men of His Family Have the Same Name and Are Distinguished from Each Other by a Number—Custom Has Prevailed for Over Nine Hundred Years.

[Brooklyn Eagle:] When Prince Henry XXXVII of Reuss came to town people said that Henry must be a popular name in his part of the country, and most of us assumed that he must be a reigning Prince in his small German principality, or he would not be so royally numbered.

However, he is not a reigning Prince. He is only the heir to the leadership of a division of a much divided family, and while he is royal enough he probably will never be sovereign.

Why, then, is he XXXVII., since only monarchs are numbered in this way? The reason is curious. He is numbered because all the men in his family are named Henry and are distinguished one from the other only by the number as if they were so many convicts instead of entirely respectable German Princes.

It began in the twelfth century. Henry the Sixth was then the Holy Roman Emperor, and he had made war against the Slavic tribes on the East. Conquering them he appointed as "voigt," or bailiff, or personal representative, whatever you choose to call it, one Erkenbert, Lord of Weida, a town which is now in Saxe Weimar. All this happened in 1122, pretty nearly 900 years before the young Prince Henry XXXVII, saw the Palisades, but in gratitude to the founder of the family fortunes every man child born to the house of Reuss in all these centuries has been named Henry.

The family is a large one with many divisions, although there are only two reigning sovereigns connected with it. If a Reuss marries and has a son he is numbered whatever may be the current figure—let us say XX., for instance. Then his third cousin has a son, and this son is numbered XXI. After a year or two the original Reuss has a second son, whom he numbers XXII, allowing for the third cousin's child, who came in between his own two boys.

It is an extraordinary custom, but having kept it up for 900 years, no doubt it has become quite natural for the Reusses to think of themselves and their relations as numbers. The chief difficulty was to keep within reasonable figures, and as the family has never been keen on race suicide, it really was quite a problem. However, they have solved it.

There are two chief branches of the family, the older and the younger, and two sets of numbers. It was about 400 years ago that they divided in this fashion. The older branch, to identify its Henrys, chose the system of numbering them up to 100, and then beginning again. The son of Henry C., is Henry I.

The younger branch devised another plan. It said it would number its Henrys right along, until the century came to an end. Then it would begin afresh. Thus it happens that the present Prince of this younger branch is Henry XIV., because he was born in 1832, while his father, born in 1789, was Henry LXVII. It is really quite simple when one is used to it, and the Reusses have had nine centuries to adapt themselves.

The Reuss principality is a part of the Thuringian States, and is divided into two parts. In between them runs a district of Saxe Weimar. It has been added to many times, and again, many times, the family has sold part of its land and one or two of its towns to other States. As it is today, the two principalities, that of the older branch and that of the younger, cover together about 440 square miles. Most of this land the Reuss family personally owns and they are said to be very rich, indeed.

The land of the older branch is less in extent than that of the younger. It comprises only 122 square miles, and is not very fertile. The chief industry is manufacturing wool. It has a constitution and a representative government of twelve men, three appointed by the Prince, two by the nobles, three by the towns, and four by the rural districts. Its revenue and expenditures for public purposes is about $500,000. Nearly all its people are Protestants.

The younger branch, reversing the usual order of things, has more and better land than the elder. This branch is divided into three chief families, all the sons, needless to say, named Henry. Our visiting Prince Henry belongs to the third family of the younger branch. He is a Reuss-Kostritz.

The population of the principality of the younger Reuss branch is 152,000, and many of their subjects are engaged in agriculture, for the land is fertile. They make wool, too, just as the other principality does. They have a House of Representatives of sixteen members, three chosen by the persons who pay the highest income tax, a neat device to make the income tax popular; twelve by the people in general, and one, the head of one of the family branches, sits by hereditary right. It has a revenue of $700,000.

The Reuss family got its name from a son of the first lord, Erkenbert, who married the daughter of a Pole and a Russian woman. They called the son of this marriage, who in time came to head the principality, Henry "der Russe," or the Russian, and the name has stayed with them ever since.

The heads of the two branches were made counts of the Holy Roman Empire in the seventeenth century and were recognized as sovereign princes a hundred years later. The two divisions send each a member to the Federal Council of the empire and another to the Reichstag.

It is agreed that whenever one line shall become extinct the other shall inherit, and that is what will soon happen. The heir to the younger branch, who is regent for his father, is regent also for the Prince of the older branch, who has no son, and he will inherit both titles.

SUBSTITUTE FOR COAL.

The British Miners' Strike Has Set the People to Thinking About Other Methods of Transportation.

[Consular Reports:] Since the British coal strike in the early part of this year many of the large users of coal, including the railways, steamship companies and municipal corporations, have been considering more seriously than ever before the adoption of a substitute fuel. There has been an unprecedented demand for oil engines to replace or supplement steam engines. It is stated that the British towns of Barking, Reigate, Leatherhead, Fareham, Bude, Lechworth, Aldershot, Coshma, Chichester, Aberystwyth, Birmingham, Bath, Swadlincote, St. Albans, Leek, Hindhead, Rothesay, Oxford, Wakefield, Saltburn, Sheerness, Guildford, Bangor, Bridgewater and Liverpool will soon be partially or wholly independent of coal for their electrical supply.

Many municipal waterworks are also being made independent of coal and steam power. It is claimed by motor makers that many English firms are, as a result of the late strike, seriously considering the advantages of motor transport. Commercial travelers are using motorcycles in increasing numbers when calling upon their customers, as they can travel, it is stated, a hundred miles upon a gallon of petrol (gasoline) and carry their samples, unless they are of great bulk, be entirely independent of the railways, and be able to call upon a greater number of people than they possibly could if restricted to steam travel.

—One Sure Road To Wealth

Real Estate in Los Angeles is one of the surest roads to wealth. Vast as is the number of things bought and sold, there is but one which none can do without—which all men must use all of the time, and that one is land; and because this is so, land upon which thick crops of human beings grow is the safest and surest of all the things that are bought and sold, to buy and to hold.

The one drawback for the individual investor in dealing in land is that it takes so much money to make the big profits. Realizing this nearly eight years ago, the officers of the ORIGINAL HOME BUILDERS OF LOS ANGELES incorporated this Company to handle land and homes in Los Angeles. Starting in with $2350, the Company has now grown to nearly a half-million dollar Corporation.

With possibly one exception, this Company has produced more in cash dividends and has increased more in value of shares year by year, than any other similar company in the world.

Right now this Company owns and controls real estate on which the improvements alone will aggregate more than $750,000.00 in the next few years. Probably $250,000.00 will be made by the stockholders on this land alone.

Dividend No. 19 is to be paid August 10th. This means $3.50 on every 100 shares paid for before August 1st, when the dividend is declared.

PROBLEM SOLVED BY "TIMES" CAMP

A Fair Visitor Writes Her Impressions of It.

Finds Boys Healthy, Happy and Having Fun.

Unique Plan Helps Lads to Help Themselves.

BY MARY A. CLARKE COLQUHOUN

"Can you tell me what this 'Times Camp' is?"

I was sitting on the beach at Avalon, watching two small boys as they struggled to push into the water a boat which bore the legend "Times Camp." As soon as the boys had accomplished their object and I could give my undivided attention to something else, I turned to the gentleman beside me and endeavored to answer his question.

But my effort in that direction was not very satisfactory. I discovered that I had a general impression on the subject, but no very definite information. This discovery led me to visit the Times Camp, where I learned so much which interested and astonished me that I felt an account of my visit might interest others whose ideas regarding this unique place are as nebulous as were mine.

I use the word unique in no loose sense; but rather with that delightful feeling which one has who knows there is only one word in the English language which exactly expresses his meaning, and who is fortunate enough to know that word. The unique climate of Southern California seems to breed the germ which causes unique ideas, for in no other quarter of the globe are there so many things never heard of elsewhere.

I am informed that there is nothing like this camp anywhere else, and that newspapers in different parts of the country are writing to The Los Angeles Times for information regarding the plan.

As the nineteenth century was emphatically the woman's century, so surely is this the child's century; but those who are doing most for the young people of today are not pauperizing them by indiscriminate charity; rather they are giving these young people the opportunity to help themselves in a thoroughly independent, self-respecting way.

And this is the fundamental idea underlying the Times Camp. It is not, as I once thought, a charitable institution where the newsboys of Los Angeles are given an outing each summer. It is something bigger, better, and more far-reaching than that. It is a place where any boy, working according to the plan of the originator of the idea, may earn a right to all the privileges of the camp for a period varying from four days to the entire season.

Have you noticed that during the past year or two no solicitor from the Los Angeles Times has called on you? It is because there originated in the mind of one of the men connected with that newspaper a better way of increasing the circulation.

This better way was nothing more or less than offering to any boy and to all boys a chance to earn an outing by securing subscriptions to The Times. The proposition was that any boy who secured six subscriptions of one month each would be given a four-days'-trip, including the going and coming, and all expenses paid. For twelve subscriptions he would be given eight days, and so on in proportion. Forty subscriptions entitled him to stay during the entire season.

A WHOLE REGIMENT.

The camp was opened June 20, 1911, and there were 1000 "subscription boys" there before it closed in the fall. These boys were the sons of millionaires, of wealthy people, of well-to-do people, and of the very poorest. "The most ginger and the best timber are often found in the last-named class," said Mrs. Galloway, the motherly, efficient matron.

Another proposition is that the four days' outing will be given to any boy who sells 750 papers. All who obtain subscriptions or who sell papers are sure of some reward, but not all are so fortunate as was Ben Knapp, a student in Throop Polytechnic High School, who earned for himself a two-weeks' outing, helped and encouraged forty other boys in the same work, and won from The Times a $500 cash prize which enabled him to enter a university this year, where he has secured newspaper work which will make it possible for him to complete a college education. All honor to Ben Knapp and boys like him! All honor to the newspaper which has devised this unique, practical plan by means of which its own ends are secured and at the same time young men and boys are helped in many ways.

This year another class of boys was added, those connected with the schools and colleges of Southern California who secured prizes in athletic contests planned by representatives of The Times. So far there have been [illegible] such boys.

As for the camp, it would be difficult to find a more delightful situation even in Avalon the Only. The use of a large tract of land just at the mouth of a beautiful canyon, and about a quarter of a mile back from the town, has been given by the Santa Catalina Island Company. There are sleeping accomodations for about sixty. "Not beds for so many," said the matron, "sometimes a boy has to sleep on a pile of straw when we are crowded; but there is plenty of bedding, and each new-comer has fresh bed linen." At the dining-table 150 can be accommodated, for on the days that new boys come in both the old and the new must have dinner.

MUSIC ON TAP.

Under the drooping boughs of a [illegible] tree clean pine shavings have been scattered; this forms the "parlor." Near by is a tent with an auto[illegible] and a large collection of records. I have a fancy that the instrument is silent only when the boys are sleeping or eating.

"That is a characteristic Times Camp scene," said Mr. Gillett, the manager of the camp, as he motioned to the door of the "music-room" [illegible] a boy in his bathing suit playing the piano with real appreciation.

There is no lack of country amusements for these city boys. The Times furnishes them row-boats and fishing tackle, also bathing suits and bath towels, and each boy takes a swim daily. At the camp, also, there is a bath-house and Dame Nature does her share in making the shower bath [illegible] one. In addition to swimming, rowing, fishing and goat hunting, there are other sports such as baseball, football, handball and boxing. Most of the boys are at play by 4:30 o'clock every morning, and the dear little cripple—the pet of the camp who is carried or wheeled everywhere he wishes to go—is often there at that early hour eagerly watching the games. Nearly all attend the band concerts given at the amphitheater in the evening, and the band ocasionally gives a special programme for these auditors. There is no compulsion in the matter, but many of the boys of their own volition attend church services on the Sabbath.

The matron is a trained nurse, and there is a well-equipped medical department connected with the camp. Here, as well as elsewhere, boys will eat green apples, and most of them have to learn by personal experience the effect of sun and water on the skin.

Would I stay to supper? Would I! There is only one thing I like better than seeing a lot of hungry boys eat and that is eating with them. I needed no second invitation.

The four walls of our dining-room were hung with pictures which all the wealth of J. Pierpont Morgan could not buy. The chef is as black as his cap, jacket and apron are white, and the food set before us would have done credit, in quantity, quality, and excellent preparation, to the table of any hospitable southern gentlemen in the good old days "befo' de wah." John D. Rockerfeller, who once said that he would give $1,000,000 for the appetite of a laboring man whom he saw eating at a railroad restaurant, would gladly have doubled that sum could money purchase the enjoyment of food which healthy, outdoor life sports had given to these boys. The millionaire who stole an apple and a doughnut from the dinner pail of his office-boy would have partaken of that meal with the keenest relish.

"Would you like to see the bank?" asked Mr. Gillett as we rose from the table. Going to his office, he was soon surrounded by boys who wished to draw small sums of money they had deposited with him for safe-keeping. Some of the boys bring money with them when they come, most do not; some spend all they earn there, others bank it. One small chap last summer came with nothing and went home with $5 in his pocket.

"How do they earn it?" I asked, and I was told that they caddy, carry suitcases, sell fish, and do anything that comes to hand, including small jobs about the camp.

"A live boy will always find something to do, and there are no dead ones here," said Mrs. Galloway.

The Times Camp boys are a happy, lucky, and a "happy-go-lucky" crowd but they have helped in the solving of a problem and they have demonstrated beyond a peradventure the practicability of the plan of which they are a part. As I walked back to the town I wondered why other business enterprises do not follow the trail which The Times has blazed.

Hermosa Beach

Simply Delightful

Even if beach property near Los Angeles were not quite so scarce, Hermosa Beach would be the right place to invest at present prices, because of its many simply delightful characteristics.

Highly Profitable

But beach property is getting more and more scarce. It's exceedingly scarce today. There is practically no popular-priced beach property for sale around Los Angeles outside of Hermosa Beach, unless you travel 35 or 40 miles away.

Hermosa Beach today offers you ocean-view lots at less than you could find such lots at Ocean Park and Venice three years ago. Those same lots at the older beaches just named have in the last three years more than trebled in price. Lots you could then buy at around $1000, cannot be touched today for less than $3500.

Hermosa Beach is a better beach town than either Ocean Park or Venice, Santa Monica, or any of the other beach towns in this neighborhood, because its improvements are far superior. It has no figure 8, no life-threatening rowdy attractions or thrill producers of any kind. Hermosa Beach is an ideal "Home City by the Sea," with 17 miles of asphalted streets, grammar and high school, and over 1000 attractive dwellings, stores, churches, etc. Hermosa Beach is not merely a week-end resort, but an all-the-year-around home city.

Hermosa Beach offers ocean bathing second to none in the world. Your surf bath here is guaranteed as clean as a dip in your home bath tub. There has never been an accident from drowning at Hermosa Beach. There is no undertow. The strand slants so slightly that you can walk out 500 feet. Bonds have been voted for a magnificent $100,000 pier.

Property Investments Are Today Promised 100% to 200% Profits

Values are rising every week. Our prices have not yet been increased. MODERNIZING JERUSALEM.

Concessions Granted for Construction of a Tramway System and Installation of Electric Lights.

[The American Hebrew:] The arrival in Jerusalem of a heavy American motor road roller is the latest evidence of the progress which has been transforming the Holy City into a city of the present day. So quietly have improvemestn been introduced there that oriental conservatism has not been greatly offended, and the rest of the world has not realized what has taken place.

With the arrival of the new steam roller it has been decided to equip the city with an efficient modern tramway system to replace the donkey and camel power used for centuries.

The walls of Jerusalem surround 209 acres. Thirty-five of these are occupied by the temple inclosure. But, owing to the impossibility of housing the thousands of Jewish immigrants who still continue to arrive, building has been proceeding to a very considerable extent outside the walls. As a result of this, first one and then another of the ancient gates have been left open at night, until today they are always open. Two of the gateways have no gates at all. Meanwhile the Mohammedan population is not by any means, keeping pace with the Jewish, and Jerusalem seems in a fair way to become once more in fact as well as in name the capital city of the Jewish race in Palestine.

A concession for the purpose of building the city's tramway service has already been granted to a French company, which will begin laying tracks this summer. An English company has applied for the concession of illuminating the city with electric light, and a German syndicate wishes to provide the city with water by constructing large resorvoirs near wells situated at a distance of sixteen miles from Jerusalem. The municipality is also considering proposals for paving the streets and constructing sewage works. A modern fire-extinguishing apparatus and a telephone system are also to be provided.

The project of constructing a harbor for Jaffa, which has been discussed for the last thirty years, is likely to be carried out at last. A French-Belgian company with the co-operation of the Jaffa-Jerusalem Railway Company, is said to have applied for the concession to carry out this project, for which it has obtained a capital of nearly £1,000,000. The government is reported to have come to an agreement with the company about the conditions of the concession, and only the consent of the Parliament is now necessary for its consummation.

TIPPING IN BERLIN.

Americans Are Not So Generous as Formerly, and the Englishmen Are in Particular Disfavor.

The Berliner-Tageblatt, in passing judgment on the habits of different nationalities in regard to tipping, takes occasion to remark that Americans are not as generous this year as formerly.

Of all nationalities, the writer says, the Russian visitors to the Kaiser's capital are the most generous in respect of "Trinkgeld," and the American and Englishman the least generous. The Russian, who used to complain that his three great wants—tea, vodka and cigarettes—were unobtainable here, now finds his requirements properly supplied, and is coming in larger numbers every year.

"The Russian," continues the writer, "is open-handed in a lordly way and has even been known to offer a tip to a Berlin policeman. The officer, however, rejects such offers with marks of indignation. Americans and Englishmen are in particular disfavor with the tip-expecting fraternity, the former because they refuse to tip on principle, and the latter in addition to not tipping they do not make up for their want of generosity by a benevolent and condescending manner. The French are very meager in their tips, although certain members of their "noblesse" tip largely.

Two golden rules should be observed about continental tipping: tip small and often, and in hotels and restaurants let your tip be 10 per cent. of the bill. In general the following scale will not be found much amiss: For the railway porter, if you are alone and the porter looks after your trunk, 50 centimes (in France) and 50 pfennig (in Germany;) if two people, with corresponding baggage, 1 franc and 1 mark, respectively, for the two countries; if there is a family with several trunks, a franc or mark per porter employed.

In the hotel three persons should be tipped—the head porter at the desk, who looks after your letters, gives local information you may happen to want, and, in short, exercises a sort of paternal solicitude as to your comings, goings, and business.

The Oil Industry.

STANDARD CAN'T MAKE AN ARBITRARY PRICE.

Fortunate Conditions for the Oil Producers of California—War May Come Up Between the Big Buyers. Will All California Crude Oil Be Refined for Use for Fuel?

BY L. C. BLAKESLEE.

THE recent decision of the directors of the Standard Oil Company of California to increase the capitalization of that concern from $25,000,000 to $50,000,000 again calls attention to the amount of business Standard Oil is doing in this State.

The increase may be due to the fact that last year the net earnings of the company were $3,141,626. This is more than 12 per cent. on the capitalization of $25,000,000, and in view of the fact that Mr. Wickersham and his able assistants are keeping a fairly keen eye on "big business" these days, it may be that 12 per cent. is getting uncomfortably close to an "unreasonable" profit.

But a perusal of the annual report of the company, recently issued, for the year 1911, shows that the increase is justified. The total assets of the company are given as $48,267,207, divided as follows: Plant, $30,334,424; inventories, $14,585,285; accounts receivable, $3,347,498. The liabilities are given as follows: Capital stock, $25,000,000; surplus, $14,212,195, and accounts payable, $9,725,240. The company handled during the year 22,491,561 barels of oil, which was nearly one-quarter of the State's production. The company's equipment is fully equal to handling such a large volume of business. The company has three trunk lines connecting the San Joaquin Valley oil fields with its big refinery at Point Richmond, where 30,000 barrels of oil are handled every day. This plant represents an outlay of $15,000,000, and is one of the largest in the world. The big plant at El Segundo is intended to be a duplicate of the Point Richmond plant in time. The company has in its tanks and reservoirs in the Kern River field, approximately 25,000,000 barrels of oil in storage, which is a comfortable amount. A large fleet of oil-carrying vessels takes care of the company's trade all along the coast, and in addition to all this must be included several thousand acres of good oil land from which the company is securing a big production, and has in operation in the different fields of the State no less than fifty strings of tools in an effort to increase its output.

Under these conditions it is not anticipated the directors will have much trouble in placing the additional $25,000,000 worth of stock. In fact, if any outsider gets any of it he will be considered lucky.

Many oil men have been unwilling to concede that the Standard has had but a small fraction of the business in this State, but the truth is it is now handling 28 per cent. of all the oil produced in the State, and is constantly gaining.

During the first six months of the present year the company handled 12,491,473 barrels out of a total production of 43,602,060 barrels, and placed in storage during that time 2,873,950 barrels out of a total surplus of 4,072,833 barrels. The runs and shipments of the two other large marketing concerns—the Associated and the Union—are not available as these companies are unwilling to give publicity to their operations, but a comparison of the Standard's figures with the total gives an idea of what amount of oil is handled by those companies, and shows while the Standard tanked 2,873,950 barrels, the other two together stored only 1,198,883 barrels. But it also indicates that the Associated and the Union are selling a larger proportion of their oil than the Standard, confirmed by the fact that the Standard is the only one of the three now adding to its storage capacity. This company has recently commenced work on two more 500,000-barrel reservoirs at its storage farm in the Kern River field.

The runs and shipments of the Standard for the first six months of the present year follow:

	Runs.	Shipments.
January	2,177,189	1,687,491
February	1,911,947	1,484,939
March	2,095,621	1,425,629
April	2,127,089	1,510,192
May	2,043,826	1,586,835
June	2,125,781	1,742,946
Totals	12,491,473	9,617,523
Placed in storage		2,873,950

About half of this oil comes from the Midway district, although, with the exception of the Santa Maria field, there is a gradual increase noted in the runs from all the fields, and the Lost Hills district will soon be on the Standard map, as it is now constructing a line from Wasco to that field, where it now has a production of its own, and has recently made a contract with the Universal Oil Company for its output as soon as the latter's contract with the Associated has been filled.

To within about a year the Standard confined its activities to the San Joaquin fields, but the construction of the El Segundo refinery necessitated branching out in the southern districts and the company now has the Whittier-Fullerton district covered by a pipe line system extending to the refinery, and the company is running over 100,000 barrels a month from these fields.

The runs from this field for six months, ending June 30, are as follows:

January	88,465
February	120,660
March	106,737
April	97,142
May	111,448
June	111,063
Total	635,515

The present capacity of the El Segundo refinery is 15,000 barrels a day, so it will be seen that the company is still short of oil, notwithstanding the 25,000,000 barrels of storage oil with which it is credited at Kern River. It is stated that the company is hard pressed to secure enough oil to operate its southern plant, and may be obliged to resort to water shipments from the north to make up the deficiency, which, under present conditions, would be a rather expensive operation. The oil in storage is said to be the heavy grades, good for fuel, but not suited to produce the best results in refining, and the company is always after light oil.

Some good contracts have slipped out of the Standard's hands in the Fullerton and Whittier fields, because, apparently, its purchasing department has not enough latitude in doing business or because of shortsightedness. The Union and the Associated are both competing with the Standard for this oil and they have "shown the way" in two instances at least. The Standard has discovered that it can not make an arbitrary price and expect to do business with producing companies, all of which are inclined to "dicker" when so good an opportunity offers. This fact was demonstrated when the Standard lost the Central Oil Company's output to the Associated when the latter outbid it while the local officials of Southern California were presumably waiting to hear from headquarters; and again when the Union stepped in and secured the output of the Birch Oil Company's famous gusher. All this oil is the high gravity stuff, and in the aggregate amounts to about 100,000 barrels a month, which would help out some at El Segundo.

In view of conditions in the southern fields it is not improbable that some of the money raised from the sale of $25,000,000 worth of stock will be used in building a pipe line to connect the northern fields with El Segundo. This is merely surmise, as the company is not in the habit of giving advance information as to its intentions, but it is the logical thing to do if the company intends to do business on a large scale in this part of the State.

The Standard Oil Company of California is a growing concern, and although there is room on this Coast for two or three large marketing companies, it may yet accomplish the purpose for which it came to California—the control of the petroleum industry in this State.

Fortunately for the producers, the Union Oil Company of California is still doing business here.

Price War Possible.

Now that the Standard has its plant at El Segundo in operation and is able to furnish road oil and "residuum" for fuel a price war may be inaugurated in the southern markets. So far as known none of the large consumers in the south have used any of the Standard's residuum, but that company is after some of the road oil business, and is said to have offered road oil at prices ranging from 80 to 90 cents that the Union and other smaller refiners have been selling from $1.15 to $1.25. Numerous quantities of this product are used in this part of the State, the largest consumers being the counties and especially Los Angeles county, on its system of good roads. It is remembered that the County Highway Commission recently turned down a bid by the Standard for a quantity of road oil on a report received from the northern part of the State to the effect that the same grade of stuff from the Point Richmond plant had not proven satisfactory. The specifications covering the Standard product are not the same as those required by the highway commission, and the Union seems to be the only concern that can meet the requirements. But this fact does not condemn the Standard product, as it is selling quantities of it in the north with satisfactory results. The incident simply indicates that the Standard is determined to at least "outdo" the business with its big competitor.

There seems to be no question that the prepared road oil is superior to pure crude, for road purposes, as has been demonstrated by every one who owns or drives an automobile. The pure crude has not the adhesive qualities necessary in macadamized roads. The lubricants have not been extricated from it and roads treated with it become slippery and greasy.

Eventually, no doubt, no natural oil whatever will be used on any public highway. This means that the business will be divided among those concerns manufacturing road oil. As a by-product of the Standard's refining plants it can probably be put on the market at a price that will exclude the competition of those concerns which make this their principal business.

Refining California Oil.

The matter of treating petroleum before it is marketed is receiving more attention at present than at any time in the history of the industry on this Coast, and the prediction that all the oil produced in California will eventually be put through a refining process is in a fair way to be realized in the not distant future.

The economic waste in burning pure crude as a fuel is recognized by everyone, and the fact that this "residuum," which the Standard Oil Company has "invented," is as good or better for fuel purposes than pure crude, are bringing oil men to this view of the matter. The "tapping plants" which have been erected by so many producing companies on their properties in all fields of the Coast are proof of this. There is no doubt but that millions of dollars have been wasted—literally burned up—by the oil men in California because they thought California oil was only good to burn. That the Standard Oil Company led the way in refining California petroleum and securing out of it all there was in it, is to its credit, and is a distinct gain for every man engaged in the oil business in the State.

That the Associated Oil Company, the greatest marketer of fuel oil on the Coast, would sooner or later be forced into the refining business was a foregone conclusion as soon as the Standard began cutting into its business with the residuum from Point Richmond. This stuff, it is said, can be sold at almost any price by the Standard in order to get rid of it.

Shortly after the Standard placed its residuum on the market it was announced that the Associated was going into the refining business, and that plans had been made for the construction of a large plant. These plans were never carried out, but later the Associated purchased the small refining plant of the Bullshead Refining Company near Port Costa, the terminal of the Associated Transportation Company's pipe line system, where it owns 300 acres of tide lands. The company also applied for a franchise to build a 3000-foot wharf and, it is understood, will add to the capacity of the refining plant, which will place it on a more equal footing with both the Standard and Union companies.

These developments explain, in a measure, the more recent activities of the Associated in seeking the higher grades of oil in the different fields. The purchase of the Pioneer Midway property, which produces a light gravity oil, and its interest in the Belle Ridge field where only light gravity oil is produced are noted. The company now has a pipe line into the Belle Ridge district and also into the Lost Hills pool, where it is running oil of twenty-six gravity.

It may be stated that so far all the refining companies prefer the higher grades of oil, but it is not doubted that a method soon will be evolved whereby the heavy grades can be treated with results nearly as profitable. And it may also be stated that everyone is looking to the Standard to develop the process.

Whoever develops it, however, it is not doubted that the days of burning pure crude for fuel are nearing an end and that every barrel of oil produced in the State will soon be handled by the three large marketing concerns—the Standard, Union and Associated—and that it will never reach the consumer in its crude state.

ENGLAND'S INSURANCE SCHEME.

Fourteen Million Persons Are Promised Sick Benefits and Consumptives Are to Be Sanatorialized.

[New York Tribune:] The new national insurance act went into effect in England on July 15, and the country is thinking of little else. One of the most extraordinary features of the matter is that with all the discussion no one seems to understand clearly what it is all about. Only one or two points are settled, one of these being that some 14,000,000 people are promised various sick benefits, doctors and hospital treatment, and particularly treatments and sanatoria for consumptives, while as a matter of fact the doctors with one accord have refused to treat patients for the sum the act provides they be paid, and no sanatoria are yet available for consumptives.

The country is to have seventy-six tuberculosis sanatoria, with 2500 beds, and something like 50,000 tuberculous workers are ready to take immediate advantage of the act. As The Daily Mail expresses it, the only advantage the workers will receive for their tax will be compulsory cod liver oil.

The government has been hard put to it in the House of Commons these last few days explaining its hope to have sanatoria within eighteen months, and suggesting that, in the meantime, why not be optimistic and see if the act will accomplish any good without them.

Another feature on which there seems to be no doubt is that the English will become a nation of stamplickers. Every man or woman who has a servant will have to keep a little book in which to paste three penny stamps every week for each servant kept, under a penalty of a $50 fine for each stamp missing. Servants must likewise keep a book and lick stamps. These points being settled, and that all the benefits to be derived under the act are deferred six months, with the exception of the benefit of the sanatoria that do not exist, employers have already begun informing their men that wages will have to be cut to make up for the new tax. This means that employees will not only have to pay tax, but will have their wages cut as well, in order to provide for the employers' share of the tax, and while the employers' tax is fourpence a week, wages will be cut a shilling.

The insurance companies meanwhile are rushing to form sick benefit societies and are taking new members by hundreds of thousands, as the act provides that the government allow the societies three shillings and eightpence a week for each member cared for during sickness, and statistics show an average cost to societies of sick benefit of two shillings and eightpence a week.

From all this wonderful muddle over the act there seems only one thing remaining for Mr. Lloyd George to do, and that is to pass a bill requiring a customer to pay a tax and lick a stamp when he gets his hat check in a restaurant. This is the only thing remaining in England untaxed. When that, too, is taxed, the Englishman will be taxed from his first cry for milk to the last spadeful of earth on his grave.

PHOTOGRAPHING WIRELESS.

Guests to the International Radio-Telegraph Conference see Wonders Practically Stolen From the Air.

[Baltimore American:] The members of the first "wireless" congress at London were given the rare privilege of a visit to the Chelmsford workshops of Marcona, who made a notable exception in honor of the occasion. Scientists of nearly every nation came to see these Djinns of the air harnessed to service by a magic as swift as any in the Arabian Nights. A swarthy bearded Moor in turban and heavy overcoat over his flowing robes, Turks in red fezzes, almond-eyed little Japs and a sphinxlike Chinaman mingled with the delegates from Australia, Africa, America and every European country.

All through the afternoon Chelmsford chatted with the Poldhu in Cornwall, more than 300 miles away, and there was little to show how the magic was worked, save a 200-foot mast on the lawn, from which the Union Jack waved in the sunshine.

Inside the works, in a tiny cabin as tightly closed as a safe, an operator, pressing a knob, spoke with his colleague on the Cornish Coast and gathered flying replies from the air as a conjurer collects rabbits from an empty hat.

A closed motor car, part of a military field equipment, stood in the grounds, and inside, guests, with telephone clips over their heads, talked across London with Hendon, while Mr. Marconi was helping his visitors to strawberries and cream as cheerily as a Harrow boy on speech day.

The latest wonder of all was a marvelous instrument which was photographing these "wireless" waves.

On a narrow strip of sensitized paper—like the tape of a "ticker" machine—a jagged line, from which a message could be read like print by an expert, was being photographed swiftly, foot by foot.

This ingenious device enables an operator to leave his instrument with the sure knowledge that his much-more-than-human machine will record any message that may come through the air out of the unknown while he is away, and leave a permanent record.

A platinum wire, only 1-25,000th of an inch in thickness, so fine, in fact, that it can only be seen under a microscope, is the cause of the miracle. This infinitesimal line is moved by the slightest "wireless" wave, and the movement is photographed on the strip.

On the "wireless" side there was no difficulty about this device, but the perfecting of the camera has taken two years of thought by Mr. Marconi and his assistants. It will now soon be ready to be placed on the market as a commercial fact.

Another new invention is a "wireless" telephone, which accurately indicates the direction from which any "wireless" message is coming. A compass in front of the receiver shows at a glance the point from which the "wireless" waves originate, and to vessels in fogs or in grave distress at sea the device should be invaluable.

"Wireless" equipments for airships, motor vehicles, and cavalry corps were shown to the delegates and also a neatly packed set which can be carried by four mules or horses for military field transport.

PISA'S LEANING TOWER.

Believed the Foundation Has Holes in It, and Its Safety Demands Immediate Attention.

[London Globe:] Reports have been current for some time concerning the safety of the Leaning Tower of Pisa, and the Italian papers announce a similar state of things with the Garisenda of Bologna and the Ghirlandina of Modena. The former dates from 1110, and the latter from 1224 to 1319. The Tower of Pisa, which is about 177 feet in height, is fourteen feet six inches beyond the perpendicular. It is accentuated from the base, but diminishes halfway up and onward. The inclination is said to be greater today than it was in 1817. This has been marked in later years. But there are other disquieting signs. Some of the stonework of the windows is giving way, and the steps are said to be cracking. The soil upon which Pisa's Tower was raised, a Paris contemporary points out, is "permeable and friable," and subsoil water is believed to be penetrating beyond the masonry. Architects and other experts are now engaged in a close observation. They fear that below the foundations there are some considerable voids, and they are of opinion that the inclination of the tower has increased since 1859. The commission appointed to deal with the matter concludes that there is no immediate danger, yet there must be no delay in remedying matters. The Garisenda is about 161 feet in height, with an inclination of just fourteen feet. The Ghirlandina is said to be the highest of the towers, being 331 feet. It is slightly inclined toward the cathedral, which itself is in a feeble state.

The Wisdom of Youth.

[Washington Star:] Thomas W. Lawson, condemning crooked business, said to a Boston reporter:

"A Broadway office boy was caught in a nasty lie by the head book-keeper the other day.

"'My son,' said the bookkeeper solemnly, 'do you know what becomes of boys who deceive and prevaricate?'

"The youngster looked at the shabby old book-keeper, sneered and answered:

"Of course I do. The boss lifts 'em right out of the starvation, pen-pushin' class, makes 'em department heads, and takes 'em into the firm before they're 40.'"

WORLD WANTS OIL FOR FUEL.

Englishman Says Freight Rates Are Chief Obstacle.

Commissioner Says Must Cement Abandoned Wells.

Attachment Is Served on the Esperanza Company.

COALINGA, July 27.—That the consumption market for fuel oil is rapidly being extended all over the world is generally known to oil men, and an instance of its rapid growth in England is shown in a letter today received by Col. Frank Haviside of the Reliance Supply Company from his father, who has been in London for some time past. The elder Haviside is the founder of the shiprigging firm of Haviside, Withers & Davis of San Francisco, and is probably more familiar with the shipbuilding and shipping game than the big majority of the men in that line. He says in part:

"You have spoken about the low price of oil that now prevails in the California oil districts. I will say that at the present moment there is not one shipbuilding yard in England, or I should have said in the United Kingdom, that has not more work than it can attend to. A year ago the freight of oil from the United States to the United Kingdom and the continent was nominal. I am quite sure the following statement will be a surprise to you when I state that the freight rate today is more than [illegible] per cent. above what it was a year ago. The coal strike in England has been the cause of this great change. The vast manufacturing and shipping industries were so seriously affected that the mangers of them have decided that in the future they will make all provision for fuel. The introduction of oil on steamships and railroads is only a matter of supply. The same may be said of the vast number of manufacturing industries, and it is for this reason that the great orders for oil-carrying steamers have been placed in the various shipping ports of the United Kingdom. I think the inference may be fairly made that this will cause better prices to prevail in the different oil fields of the world in the future."

TO SAVE THE STRATA.

There has been considerable discussion against allowing companies who are about to abandon a well to pull the casing from the hole before permanently shutting off the water, in order to prevent the flooding of the oil sand strata. Jack Brown, the water commissioner, has declared that no company will be allowed to pull casing and abandon a hole without first plugging the well with cement and properly shutting the water out of the oil sand formations encountered.

Practically every oil man in the field approves of this stand taken by the water commissioner, as several companies have intimated that they intended abandoning certain wells. The general formation of the Coalinga field is at the present time very well known and the matter of shutting off the water at the proper formation will be very simple.

ATTACHMENT SERVED.

W. C. Evans, formerly president and general manager of the Esperanza Land and Oil Company, operating on section 13, 21-14, has attached that company for labor performed by himself and family to the amount of $1100. The attachment was served on the local management of the company Saturday morning by Deputy Sheriff Mike Sullivan of Fresno. A keeper has been placed in charge of the property.

EIGHT MORE.

The voice from the Far Eastern oil fields has made another call for California drillers and as a result eight more prominent oil well drillers of this State are leaving this evening for San Francisco, whence they will embark to the Burmah oil fields in India. Since the first delegation of Coalinga drillers reached the Burmah fields the demand for oil men with experience in the California fields has been great, with the result that on several occasions since that time parties of California drillers have left for that field.

Among those who will leave this evening are James McCormick, Charles Meyers, Charles Eifert, George Cromwell, H. H. Overton and Charles Blackfield of the Coalinga field and Ben Johnson of Ventura and Fred Thompson of Taft. All these men are drillers of good experience and were selected by Tom Hayes, representative of the Burmah Oil Company. The company of drillers will be accompanied to San Francisco by E. Salisbury, who will aid Mr. Hayes in arranging the passage of the Californians on the steamer Persia. The steamer will sail by the way of Hong Kong and Singapore.

VANCOUVER.

The Vancouver Coalinga Oil Company's well No. 1 on section 14, 21-15, was cemented off yesterday afternoon by A. A. Perkins, the cement expert, at a depth of 4575 feet in 6¼ twenty-eight-pound casing. The cement will be allowed to stand for a month, when the well will be tested out. If the cement job proves successful it will be drilled through and drilling resumed in 4¼-inch casing. The Vancouver Coalinga well contains the record string of 6¼ twenty-eight-pound casing in this field.

DUTCH INVENTED GOLF.

Terms Used Today Traceable to Those Used in Holland, but Corrupted by Scotch Intermingling.

[Cincinnati Enquirer:] Although it is generally believed that golf had its origin among the ancient Scots, persons of an historical turn of mind say that the game was brought to Scotland from Holland, and that many of the terms generally attributed to the former country are really corruptions of ancient Dutch expressions. Of itself the fact has often been repeated, but a really comprehensive comparison of terms or their derivation has not been made until recently.

The term "golf" is traced by those who have studied the many-sided phases of this language to the old Dutch term "kolf," which means a bat or a club. Bearing on this subject, A. W. Tillinghast, the well-known Philadelphia golfer, possesses a piece of ancient Holland pottery on which is pictured a portly Dutch gentleman in very roomy and beruffled trousers. On the pottery the Dutchman is shown bravely flourishing a murderous-looking bludgeon over a nearly-round object, which resembles a small cheese. Tillinghast is convinced that the figure depicts a golfer, or a "kolfer," of that period.

When some player shouts "fore" to some golfers ahead of him, he never stops to think that a in reality the term in Dutch for "voor" (pronounced "fore") meant in front. When a golfer drives he puts the ball to flight, and the Holland expression for this is "op de vlugt drijven." Many believe that "putt" is a corruption of "put." The act of playing the ball into the cup is derived from the Dutch "putten." Take "niblick," for instance. There is an old Scotch word, "kniblock," which means a knob of wood. The head of the niblick is short and knobby, and the dictionary informs the seeker after knowledge that it is a "dumpy club." It might seem as if the origin of the word was Scotch, but if the student will seek farther back he will find that there exists an old Dutch term, "knobbielachtig" (kniblock niblick,) the last term, no doubt, the result of mispronunciation.

When one ball is between another and the hole in such a manner as to block the way, the term used is "stymie." Literally, only a portion of the hole is left to view. There is an old Scotch word, "stymie," meaning a disease of the eye, an obstruction to the vision, as a sty on the eye. Some of these explanations may seem a little overdrawn, but it should be remembered that the changes have been going on for years and years.

Several golfing terms are taken from the French. "Dormie," for instance, is derived from "dormir," to sleep. When a player is two or three holes ahead, with only as many more remaining to be played, it is said that he is dormie. In other words, he can afford to take it easy. It may be inadvisable, however, to go to sleep over a match, even though a player may be dormie four or five. The awakening may be sudden.

"Caddie" comes from the French "cadet," a younger brother. It may be that in older times the younger brother was compelled to carry the clubs.

Lots on the Big Pines Townsite range in price from $300 up, and each is so situated as to command a view of the surrounding landscape of valley and hill. HAPPY HOMES ENDOWED BY CHILD-LABOR LAWS.

Welfare of the Individual and the Nation Sought by Committee Organized to Rescue Children from Mills and Sweat-shops—California Is Far in the Lead With Favorable Legislation—Progress Reported.

BY ROSE L. ELLERBE.

ONE of the great movements tending toward the creation of better conditions for the human race is the work being done by the National Child Labor Committee. The chief purpose of the present is preparation for the future. Our government, public institutions, our progressive work of every kind, is chiefly for the benefit of the succeeding generations. The welfare and the history of the nation and of the race is really in the keeping of the children of today.

Because the welfare of the children has been left largely to the individual parent or family, and because the number of irresponsible, ignorant and vicious families has largely multiplied, alarming conditions have arisen. In a recent report, R. Fulton Cutting, president of the New York Association for the Improvement of the Poor, states: "There are 100,000 needless infant deaths in a year in this country; nearly 2,000,000 child laborers, and millions of school children handicapped by easily removable physical defects."

The statement of 2,000,000 child laborers means little to the most of us, so familiar are we with the idea of children working. But if we could go with the investigators of the National Child Labor Committee into the factories, the mills, the mines, the sweat-shops of this country and see with our own eyes the little bent forms, the dulling faces, the weary eyes, of little children at the machines toiling for long hours of the day and of the night, in heat and cold, in air laden with dust, we should see it from a very different standpoint.

ORGANIZED RELIEF.

Eight years ago some of the leading sociologists and philanthropists of this country organized the National Committee on Child Labor to especially handle this factor in the deterioration of the race which it is the province of humanitarians to combat. Dr. Felix Adler, of Columbia University, is chairman; Owen Lovejoy, secretary. Among the membership are the names of Jane Addams, John Graham Brooks, Hon. Robert W. DeForest, Edward T. Devine, Charles W. Elliott, Samuel McCune Lindsay, Hon. Homer Folks, Cardinal Gibbon, Mrs. Emmons Blaine, Mrs. Florence Kelley and many others familar to the nation.

The objects of the organization are thus officially set forth:

(1) That no child between 14 and 16 years of age shall be employed at night or for a longer period than eight hours of a day, nor in an occupation known to be dangerous to life, health or morals;

(2) That no such child shall be employed unless satisfactory evidence is given that he has a normal physical development;

(3) That before employment he shall have been given an opportunity to lay at least the foundations of an American education.

(4) That children above 14 and under 21 years of age shall be guaranteed by suitable laws against specific employments under circumstances that would menace the welfare of society, the restrictions to be graded according to the degree of hazard involved.

Efforts must also be made to secure suitable compulsory school laws in harmony with child labor laws to guarantee against truancy and idleness.

VISITED THE MILLS.

To carry out this programme, the committee began by a careful survey of the field. First-hand investigations into existing conditions in mills, factories, mines and other occupations employing children were made, State by State, and the facts thus collected reported. With the facts in hand, steps were taken to secure corrective legislation and the enforcement of existing legislation for the protection of children. Perhaps the worst conditions of all were found to exist in the cotton mills of the South. During the past seven years laws have been secured for the first time, regulating the child labor in Florida, Georgia, Delaware, Mississippi, Oklahoma and the District of Columbia. Departments of factory inspection have been secured in a number of southern States.

Another industry which has always drawn largely upon childhood is that of the manufacture of glass. The conditions in the glass works are most unfavorable. Illinois and Ohio have passed laws prohibiting the employment of children under 16 at night or over eight hours a day. The enactment of these laws was bitterly fought by the glass factories, which declared that such regulations would drive them out of business.

The conditions under which children may be employed in the coal mines have been greatly improved in the last few years. Yet there are still many abuses. The hazards of the work are great, and the confinement of growing children under ground, in dust-laden atmosphere, often in unnatural positions, doing monotonous work, can mean only physical and mental defectiveness in the resulting man.

GOOD RESULTS.

The results of the work being done under the auspices of the Child Labor Committee have been large. During the past seven years, child labor under 14 has been forbidden in seventeen States. Children under 16 have been protected from employment in coal mines in twelve States; the eight-hour day for children has been established in twelve States; five States have passed their first child labor laws and seven their first compulsory labor law; six States have passed legislation establishing schools for industrial training; physical examination of children desiring to work has been required in thirteen States.

One of the greatest results of the agitation for child welfare is the passage of the children's bureau bill by Congress, April 9, 1912. Miss Julia Lathrop of Hull House, Chicago, was appointed chief of the new bureau. Much is hoped for from the systematic and scientific collection and analysis of information collected by this department of governmental service.

One of the most important undertakings of the committee has been the formulation of a uniform child labor law, which has been indorsed by the United States Commissioners on Uniform Laws, otherwise the American Bar Association. It is hoped to secure gradually the adoption of this law in each State in the Union, as it embodies the best features of all laws yet secured on the subject.

One of the most effective methods of education used by the National Committee has been the exhibits of photographs and material collected by their investigators. Such an exhibit, containing a large number of pictures and a large amount of data, is now being shown in connection with the Municipal League exhibit at the Auditorium.

PENSIONS FOR MOTHERS.

Among the measures under informal discussion by the members of the Southern California Civic League is a bill for the pensioning or the endowment of dependent widowed mothers. It is probable that the league will endeavor to mother this measure through the next Legislature and if it succeeds in placing it upon the statute books it will thereby remove the last form of child labor open to California.

As the laws now stand, a child under 15 years of age must be the support of disabled parents before it is allowed to work. When widowed mothers are given an allowance by the State, as is already done in many States, very few children in California will find it either necessary or possible to work.

The National Child Labor Committee and the members of the different societies in the United States working for the suppression of child labor, as well as the Federal Children's Bureau in Washington, have less quarrel with California than with any other States in the Union. In Eastern States the four worst forms of child labor are in the cotton mills, coal mines, glass factories and canneries. California has canneries, of course, but its children are not allowed to work in them except in rare instances. They are then allowed to work only in daylight and cannot be employed for more than nine hours a day.

SUCH A DIFFERENCE.

While children in many of the Southern States are breaking their young lives at the shuttle and the loom and while those of Eastern States are being crippled and stunted in the coal mines, glass factories and canneries, the children of Los Angeles are spending their vacation days in the beautiful playgrounds scattered throughout the city and are spending their autumns, winters and springs in the public schools under a form of compulsory education which really compels.

So strict are the laws about child labor in this State that a boy who can find some excuse for holding a job thinks he is lucky, and the boy who has a position is looked upon with envy by all his playmates. Unless they are the support of disabled parents or of widowed mothers neither boys nor girls under 15 years of age are permitted to work at anything for anybody else. This forces the youngsters who are full of summer energy and enterprise upon their own resources, and many small boys who cannot disable their fathers nor widow their mothers as an excuse to work for somebody else find ways of working for themselves. Some of them get contracts for mowing lawns, a few of them shine shoes and run errands, while others join the large army of "newsies." The newsboys get away with the labor proposition after school hours all of the year and a large number of them come under the law which allows them to work all of the day.

California's child labor laws are considered so strong that some of the members of the Legislature and some of the societies interested think that the laws should be less strict and should be so amended that children would sometimes be allowed to work for other reasons than that their parents cannot provide for the family on account of illness.

GLAD TO WORK.

A great many sturdy boys want to work during their vacations to add to their spending money during the school year, and where they can get healthy out-of-door employment as messengers and delivery boys many feel that they should be allowed to do so when school is not in session. As it is, a good many small boys are actually spoiling for work in all California cities while the problem of finding messengers and office boys during the entire year is exceedingly difficult for business men.

Children are not allowed to work in canneries and women are allowed to work only eight hours a day, but during the fruit-picking season boys and girls could be used to fine advantage in the fields and in the orchards and the work is so healthy and natural that it is only a perfect form of exercise.

If California errs in the strictness of its laws, however, it does much better than those States where the tender young lives by the tens of thousands are sacrificed to the greed of the factories, and where poor families are deliberately imported that their children may be fed in the factory maw. With its playgrounds, its strict laws against child labor, which even the theaters cannot avoid when they need a single child for an important role, and the compulsory educational feature, California provides for its children in a wonderful way. The strictness of the law is so keenly felt by the motion picture companies that they are obliged to get Lilliputians and dwarfs to play the parts of children in scenarios requiring them.

Testing Tea by Burning It.

[Washington Star:] "I bought tea the other day at a Japanese store," said the young housekeeper. "The proprietor saw that I had doubts about the quality, so he darted back to the rear of the store. I expected him to return with a cup of steaming tea, but he brought a small ash tray and match. He threw a pinch of tea into the tray, touched it with a lighted match and watched it burn. Then he applied the same test to another brand of tea that had claimed my half-hearted allegiance. The first sample showed only a small flake of ash, the second three times as much.

"'Which shows,' said he 'that the first tea is the best. That is an infallible test. The better the tea the fewer the ashes. I invite all my customers to test tea that way before buying.'

"I took the ashless tea, of course. Since then I have wondered what the average American grocer would say if his customers should apply a lighted match to their tea canister before giving an order."

NEW PROCESS IS DEVELOPED.

Afterthought Company at Ingot to Try Experiment.

High Grade Camp Progressing at Satisfactory Rate.

Angelenos Will Purchase the Tulloch Mine.

[Special Correspondence of the Times.]

REDDING, July 26.—The Afterthought Copper Company, is preparing to install a new plant at Ingot, embracing distinctly new principles for the recovery of values. The process has been developed and tested sufficiently to prove its efficiency in extracting high values from the zinc, copper, gold, and silver ores, and two patents have been granted to protect the method. Several more patents will be applied for and the management expects the process to develop into one of the most important yet designed for the treatment of copper-zinc ores.

The first unit of the projected plant will have a capacity of twenty-five or fifty tons, and more units will be added until the smelter has a capacity of 300 to 400 tons per day. In the past, the excessively high percentage of zinc carried by Afterthought ores has militated against satisfactory recovery by the old method.

The company has acquired the Terry Railroad from Anderson to Bella Vista and is surveying for the extension to Ingot. The first six miles have been mapped out and the culmination of the work will soon be reached. The work of construction is planned in the near future and the company expects to be in a position to become a heavy producer within a few months. Lack of transportation facilities has hitherto held back vigorous development of the mines. A small crew is employed at the properties, accomplishing some development work, and keeping the levels in repair. The Afterthought lies in the same belt as the noted Bully Hill group and sufficient ore is stated to be developed to insure the operation of a large smelter for years. Missouri, Arkansas and Southern California people are interested. S. E. Bretherton is manager.

HIGH GRADE PROGRESSING

The camp of High Grade is progressing at a rapid pace, with a succession of discoveries marking the past week. The Sunshine continues to attract premier attention, but the Big Four, Modoc Mines, Consolidated and other properties are coming to the front with a rush. The Lucky Dutchman lease on the Yellow Jacket claim of the Sunshine-High Grade Company is sinking and driving on an eight-foot vien of heavily-mineralized quartz. The rich shoot of auriferous ore recently opened continues to yield high values and display excellent strength.

Under the terms of the lease, the Lucky Dutchman people are obliged to sink 250 feet on the vein. Two other leases on the Yellow Jacket are actively developing promising shoots. On the Sunshine, the company continues to sack rich ore from the easterly portion of the claim, and a shipment will shortly be made to the Selby smelter. Seven leases are active on this claim, with more applications under consideration. Lease No. 6, operated by Sargent, McFall and Nelson, reports the intersection of eight inches of $400 ore in the breast of the new adit. A drift is under way to determine its extent.

The Modoc Mines Company, controlled by William Wrigley, Jr., and associates of Chicago, is arranging to install an engine, boiler, compressor, hoist and machine drills. Most of the machinery has arrived and will be placed in position immediately. Two shifts are crowding down the shaft on a strong orebody. The principal vein thus far opened, shows an average width of three feet, with stringers of high-grade quartz traversing the heavily-mineralized orebody. Numerous shoots have been opened, and the company expects to develop a valuable property. The holdings comprise 250 acres located just south of the Oregon-California line.

The ten-stamp mill of the Big Four Company has been placed in shape for operations and crushing is about to start. A large quantity of milling ore is available, while a considerable tonnage is exposed in the surface workings. Over 75,000 tons of $5-ore are reported exposed on the surface lands. Practically all repairs to the Fort Bidwell Consolidated ten stamp mill have been completed and ten stamps will shortly go into action. A thorough examination of the region was recently made by Jack Hill, and it is understood his report was exceedingly encouraging.

The Guyot lease on the North Star is improving conditions. It is reported San Francisco people are negotiating for the Tamarac group, in the Yellow Mountain section of the district. Developments are under way on the Josephine, Shasta View, Alturas, Mountain Sheep, Colorado, Mountain View and several other claims.

TO ACQUIRE TULLOCH MINE.

It is stated, apparently on official authority, that the Los Angeles people holding a $60,000 bond on the Tulloch mine have decided to exercise their option and to purchase the property. The Tulloch is situated at Albany Flat, near Angels Camp, and is held under bond and option to [illegible] F. Curtis and Los Angeles associates several months ago. Rich ore has been recently intersected and the ore bodies are stated to be showing up excellently. It is planned to sink the shaft deeper as soon as the purchase price has been ratified. The property is located on the easterly portion of the great mother lode auriferous belt.

ACQUIRE BEEBE MINE.

It is announced the Northern Ontario Exploration Company, Ltd., controlled by the powerful Bewick, Moreing Co., syndicate of London, has acquired full title to the Beebe mine, near Georgetown. This comparatively new property is showing up well as depth is gained, the 100-foot shaft revealing a vein ranging from eighteen to thirty feet wide, with ore assaying $5 to $9 per ton. Besides this large main ledge, a small vein of high-grade ore has been encountered. The shaft will be sent to considerable depth and north and south drifts extended to determine the extent of deposits.

WORK AT GOLD CANYON.

The Gold Canyon mine, Alleghany district, will rank among the active producers before the close of August, according to proposed plans of the management. The ten-stamp mill is being thoroughly overhauled and placed in condition, and the water power facilities increased. An air-compressor has also been installed. With the completion of the power line unwatering of the shaft will commence.

The Gold Canyon has been extensively opened by means of adits and lateral workings, but has generally been worked on a limited scale. It has been worked by various companies from time to time and is estimated to have produced about $2,000,000. The property was recently taken under bond and leased by C. C. Derby. It is understood Los Angeles capital is interested.

MINE MAKING GOOD.

The old Robertson mine, at Granite Basin, in the western portion of Plumas county, is developing into a promising property under the colors of Holbrook McQuire of Virginia City, Nev. The Nevadans took a bond and option on the property last season and started vigorous work. A recent mill run on twenty-five tons of ore from the old workings yielded $27 per ton. The shaft is being sent deeper and the vein is reported to be showing constant improvement. Several years ago the Robertson was abandoned as a worked-out proposition.

CLAIMS INTEREST.

The Santa Ana mine, in the Stringer district, is again coming to the front. A shoot of high-grade free-milling gold ore was recently intersected and about twenty-five tons have been sacked for shipment. The vein is showing excellent strength with developments and it is expected to send 100 tons within a short period to the Red Dog mill, near Randsburg. The property has been a fair producer in former years and at present is operated under bond and lease by the Four Ace Mining Company. It is generally believed that the main vein in the Stringer district has not yet been found, and owners of near-by claims are watching the Santa Ana work with much interest.

PARTIAL REORGANIZATION.

Yavapai Metals Mining Company Announce Good Showing on the Lower Levels—New Hoisting Plant.

PRESCOTT (Ariz.) July 27.—A partial reorganization of the Yavapai Metals Mining Company, which owns property near Humboldt, has been effected, and the mine will soon be placed on a paying basis. Z. E. Foster, well known along the Coast and in Nevada as a successful operator, is the new president, while Henry Barkschat, favorably rated as a mining engineer, is secretary and treasurer. Both made a detailed inspection of the claims before closing the deal whereby they became interested, and became highly enthusiastic over the future of the group.

From the grass roots the Yavapai Metals mine has had good ore, and at times it has paid for its own development. There are particularly good showings on the 180-foot and 250-foot levels. At the deeper point the drift is in a copper sulphide ore body five feet in width and of high grade. Nearly two carloads of this ore are on the dump, and will be shipped to Humboldt for treatment. On the 180-foot level a red oxide of copper that runs high in values is in evidence. From this level a forty-ton shipment was made to Humboldt. It gave a return of 35 per cent. copper, $5 in gold and $2.11 in silver to the ton.

New equipment will be installed immediately and deeper development commenced.

A splendid ore body has been encountered in the face of the tunnel being driven at the Fortune mine. The ore body is from three to four feet wide and carries values of $30 a ton in gold, as well as some silver and copper. The total value of the ore is $37.50 a ton.

HOISTING PLANT.

The Commercial Mining Company has completed the installation of a new hoisting plant and air compressor at Copper Basin. Development has started in earnest at the winze in driving to depth on the rich ore bodies exposed where the big strike was made some months ago. Production will be increased from this time on and soon will reach a carload a day for shipment to Douglas. The mine force has also been increased, and soon will total forty men.

This company has also resumed operations on the Snoozer claim of the Senator group with a small force, and shipments are being made to Douglas.

For the purpose of commencing operations on a promising group of claims in the Bradshaw Mountains, the Del Pasco Mining Company has been organized in this city. William A. Thorpe, a wealthy mining man of Detroit, is president.

BUYS GROUP AT SHERIFF'S SALE

The Democrata Mine and Smelter Is Being Operated With a Force of Fifty Men.

DOUGLAS (Ariz.) July 27.—Albert Heffern is now sole owner of the Heffern Mining Company's valuable property. At the Sheriff's sale he bid in the group for $10,500, the amount of the judgment he secured against the company a short time ago. He declares that within the next six months he will start in to operate the property on his own account, if the stockholders do not pay him the $10,500 he has expended.

Reports of increased activity in the Cananea district continue to come across the border. The Democrata mine and smelter, situated in the heart of the Greene Cananea holdings, is being operated with a force of fifty men. The smelter is equipped with one furnace and has a daily capacity of 250 tons. Within a short time a large electric hoister will be installed. The Democrata is reputed to be one of the richest mines in that district, and some good ore bodies are being opened.

NEWS NUGGETS.

Large shipments are being made from the West Cananea, recently purchased by Douglas capitalists. Between thirty-five and forty men are employed.

After striking water at a depth of 200 feet, the Cananea-Boston people have started a new double-compartment shaft some distance from the other workings. It is hoped that this can be sunk to much greater depth before water is encountered.

The Calumet & Sonora is maintaining its usual high average of production and giving employment to 100 men.

The Mexican Metals Company, which recently purchased the Alacran mine, has a force of thirty-five men at work in mine and mill. The mill, a ten-stamp affair, was recently installed, and is extracting a high percentage of the silver, zinc, lead and copper values carried by the ore.

Bad Business.

ANTI-INJUNCTION TO CATCH VOTES.

RADICAL CHARACTER OF THIS LABOR MEASURE.

Will Enable Strikers to Carry Industrial War Into the Homes and Will Hit the Rights of Laboring Men as Well as of Employers Who Provide the Work.

[New York Commercial:] All power to restrain sieges of industrial plants by strikers is to be taken away from Federal courts and judges if the Senate passes the anti-injunction bill approved by the House of Representatives. The bill provides specifically "that no restraining order or injunction shall be granted by any court of the United States, or a judge or the judges thereof, in any case between an employer and employees, or between employers, or between persons employed and persons seeking employment, involving or growing out of a dispute concerning terms or conditions of employment, unless necessary to prevent irreparable injury to property or to a property right of a party making the application, for which injury there is no adequate remedy at law, and such property or property right must be described with particularity in the application, which must be in writing and sworn to by the applicant or by his agent or attorney.

"And no such restraining order or injunction shall prohibit any person or persons from terminating any relation of employment, or from ceasing to perform any work or labor, or from recommending, advising, or persuading others by peaceful means so to do; or from attending at or near a house or place where any person resides or works, or carries on business, or happens to be for the purpose of peacefully obtaining or communicating information, or of peacefully persuading any person to work or to abstain from working; or from ceasing to patronize or to employ any party to such dispute; or from recommending, advising, or persuading others by peaceful means so to do; or from paying or giving to or withholding from any person engaged in such dispute any strike benefits or other moneys or things of value; or from peacefully assembling at any place in a lawful manner and for lawful purposes; or from doing any act or thing which might lawfully be done in the absence of such dispute by any party thereto."

This bill given a certain class in the community license to break the existing law of the land, and takes away from another class the protection of the law. No injunction can be obtained to prevent a strike, a boycott or a picketing. It revolutionizes the procedure of the courts and deprives all citizens of one of the most important rights and means of protection from irreparable injury. Yet the House passed this bill under pressure, after a perfunctory debate because it looks like a vote-catcher in an election year.

Its ostensible purpose is to permit peaceful picketing. There is no such thing. If a man or even a woman tries to pass a strikers' picket line thrown around a mill the peaceful part of the picketing ends right there and then. We have seen that happen on the streets of this city more than once within the past year.

But this bill goes still further. It enables strikers to carry industrial war into the home. This phase of the question was dealt with very clearly in the course of the debate by Representative Sterling of Illinois, who said that "This bill, while it in terms permits peaceful picketing, which is already the law also in terms, admits of another kind of picketing, which is unlawful. I hope no man in this House, on that side or on this, will get the idea, whether he be, as some claim they are, special representative of organized labor or not—I hope they will not get the idea that this bill is aimed only at the employer of labor in this country. It strikes just as fiercely and just as hard at the rights of the laboring men. This bill provides that one or any number of men can go to the home, to the very fireside of another, with or without his consent, for the purpose, as they call it, of conducting a peaceful picket. I say to you that that will do away with the protection that a large majority of the laboring men of the United States now have under the law of injunctions. It is just as much a violation of the rights of the men that labor as it is of the men that employ labor. This bill provides that any number of persons, who happen to disagree with another who desires to work, may go to his home or to the place where he works at the counter or in the shop or anywhere he happens to be, whether he consents or not, to prevail on him to cease work, and that act on the part of these fellow-workmen can not be enjoined under this bill for the protection of the rights of men that seek to labor, the man that wants to labor. It deprives him of the protection of that right as well as the right of the protection of the men that employ labor in this country."

This bill legalizes combination and conspiracies in restraint of trade, weher labor does the conspiring, but it is a crime for capital to do anything of the kind.

This is class legislation that appears to be unconstitutional. No more complete restraint of trade can be imagined than a combination to refuse to work and to prevent others from working in a productive capacity. From the earliest times seduction has been a cause of action at law. Anyone who induces another to leave his employer is liable for damages. This will still be the law should this bill be passed, but labor will be exempt from its penalties.

At the root of the whole difficulty lies the laxity of the offices of the law in maintaining the peace strictly and fearlessly at all times. It is somewhat ridiculous that courts should have found it necessary to issue injunctions against to restrain men from committing crimes or breaches of the peace. The criminal law is in itself a perpetual injunction of the strongest kind against such acts. Prompt arrests backed up by speedy punishment in every case would solve the problem. But the tardy manner of administration of justice and the admixture of politics in police and court affairs have froced the Federal courts to use palliative injunctions because the State and municipal authorities would not apply the cure of criminal procedure.

If local authorities would maintain the peace strictly and protect effectively those who wish to work this anti-injunction bill would not be such a live issue. But experience has proved that the police power is not exercised effectively until after irreparable damage has been inflicted, sometimes in the nature of murder or arson; and for this reason the Federal courts have been justified in issuing injunctions for the purpose for which they are designed, the prevention of irreparable injury.

Wilshire Court

Offers a Rare Bargain in Wilshire Property—

The scarcity of desirable property on Wilshire Boulevard is noticeable. Good residence sites will be hard to secure ere long without paying exorbitant prices. At the junction of Wilshire and Crenshaw boulevards, an exceptionally high class tract, WILSHIRE COURT, is located. It has no peer, and few equals in the entire district—yet the prices are fully

100% Lower Than Surrounding Property

Private streets for the exclusive use of residents, wide parkings, and underground public service connections are but few of the many advantages offered in WILSHIRE COURT. The lots have ample space for the most palatial of homes. Sales have been many of late, and to a class of people who are accustomed to nothing but the best. Prices of $40 to $50 a front foot combined with reasonable terms make WILSHIRE COURT doubly attractive. The building restrictions insure an exclusive neighborhood. Attractive inducements are offered to the builders of the first 10 homes.

IS 8-HOUR LAW NECESSARY?

books and his sports. The question of health is inconsiderable. Our workmen are the strongest in the world; in the trades where the hours of employment have been too long for health, adjustments are taking place every day. That is only in line with human progress. No labor union is necessary to further it.

There is no question but that hours worked in some trades in this country have been too long in the past. The foundry and machine shop proprietors were the first to recognize this fact and reduce them to a reasonable schedule. Actual investigation will show this to be the case. Others have followed suit, and now the work day for practically all trades is very reasonable. In spite of howls to the contrary, labor is getting its reward every day and has every reason to be satisfied. Remember that the leaders of unionism admit that wages in this country are at least double, and in many cases more than double, those of any other country, while the cost of living in foreign countries is nearly, if hot quite, as high as in this country. Compare conditions today with what they were twenty years ago. Has any nation more reason to be proud of its moral development, its happiness and its general prosperity?

Is there any real demand for the eight-hour day? We mean the real eight-hour day, and not the eight-hour day that is but a scheme to further other demands. We doubt it. What man is not willing to work more than eight hours if he benefits accordingly? The union agitators are the only ones really interested. And what is their interest? Simply to keep agitation in the air, to keep the pot boiling; to make themselves strong with their organizations. Remember that union leaders have stated that it is better to sacrifice the workmen in a strike that fails, but makes him restless for further battles, than to have a strike that succeeds, but leaves him comfortable and satisfied. Who is it better for? The sacrificed workman or the union leader? Does not this apply also to the eight-hour day movement?

Mr. Gompers would have us believe that eight hours is necessary for the workman's moral condition. In his opinion, where longer hours are worked, the men find it necessary to resort to spirituous liquors; they spend two days in dissipation in order to recuperate from four days of excessive work. Mr. Gompers probably argues from specific instances that have come to his attention. Perhaps he has been unfortunate in his choice of companions. The rank and file of union men or non-union men do not find it necessary to spend two days out of the week in dissipation. Would the men to whom Mr. Gompers refers, drink more under the eight-hour day or less?

We are not to decry leisure time for the mechanic or day workman. To our mind there is no one who enjoys it more. But if this leisure is to be obtained at the sacrifice of his material comforts, will he enjoy it. Is not one hour under the proper stimulus and conditions better than two under the opposite?

Are we to assume there is no pleasure in work? The union leaders would have us think so, but is it true? Decidedly not. Eliminate the undesirables, and there is no workman, however unskilled, who has not pride in his work. How a man's face lights up when his work receives approval! All pleasure is comparative. The ditch digger digs his ditch straight; the molder makes his casting true to pattern; the machinist follows the most complicated blue print; the engraver puts in the most delicate shading; the professor analyzes the most difficult problem. Are there any greater pleasures than these?

And, in conclusion, does this country want to develop the eight-hour day man? Have men the moral right to insist upon a man working eight hours, when he prefers to work ten? Work never hurt anybody. It is necessary for the development of the individual and the nation. Would Elias Howe have been developed under the eight-hour day? Would Abraham Lincoln? Would Thomas A. Edison? And so all down the line.

Now, to go back to the direct, practical effect of the eight-hour day for the final word. Analyze the situation as best you can and there is but one conclusion; if hours are shortened, prices must go up. You can't get away from that fact; it is as fixed as the law of the Medes and Persians. There is no guesswork about it. Mr. Workman, are you willing to pay from 10 per cent. to 25 per cent. more for your house rent, your clothes, your boots and shoes, your flour, your groceries and every article it is necessary for you to purchase? That is what the eight-hour day will mean for everybody.

WHAT IS MAN?

Scientists Keep Raising Questions Whether He Is an Animal or Merely a Vegetable or What.

[Cincinnati Tribune:] Perhaps you are a dill pickle after all! Or, horrors! Instead of being a lineal descendant from the kings as attested by your coat of arms thoughtfully supplied for a consideration by some heraldist, you may be the thirty-second grandson of a radish. Science keeps snooping around trying to prove that what is is not, and sometimes doing it, and now has attempted to prove that man is not an animal after all, but is a vegetable. Oh, you tomato! The scientist Haeckle started this one. He found there was some doubt about life cells being animal, as we have supposed right along. And as we are made up of some millions of millions of these cells, why, of course, if they are not of animal origin, but bespeak the lowly and humble potato, why, of course, we're a cabbage.

The scientists have wrangled long and loud, as becomes scientists, as to the true nature of germs and bacteria, and seem unable to tell decidedly whether they are animal or vegetable. When the scientists first discovered bacteria they termed them animalculae, which is scientific lingo for "bugs." But science did not stop there; it kept on progressing and has become so progressive that it doesn't know where it is at all any more. Haeckle decided that an easy way out of it was to reclassify the whole affair and create a new "kingdom" to be called "protista," and put therein some of the lower plants and animals that are difficult to classify, including the bacteria. Of course, there are scientists who will not agree. This alone is what saves mankind from being classed as a turnip or a squash. Some pumpkins that!

level is exposing ten feet of $15 a ton ore. With all available old stopes filled with ore, the management is anxiously awaiting the inauguration of milling operations at the Bonnie Claire mill, recently leased, which is now being put in repair. It is expected that the stamps of the plant will be dropping not later than August 10.

LONE STAR.

The shaft on the property of the Lone Star Consolidated has reached the 275-foot point. Changes occurring cause Superintendent Healy to believe that the bore is passing from the andesite into the latite formation. Latite in closely associated with ore discoveries made at depth; therefore, the management is much pleased with present conditions in the shaft.

GOLDFIELD CONSOLIDATED.

Its enlargement from two to three compartment size from the 1300 to the 1000-foot level having been completed, sinking is again in progress in the Grizzly Bear shaft of the Goldfield Consolidated, a depth of 1450 feet being the present objective point. Drifting has also been resumed southwest and northeast in the huge quartz mass on the Grizzly Bear 1300-foot level. Operations there were suspended during the work of enlarging the shaft between the levels named.

A New, Safe, Certain and Highly Profitable Investment for Large and Small Investor

The El Segundo Home Builders Company, a Corporation Arising from an Actual Need

Offers a Golden Opportunity for Investment on "The Ground Floor" Basis

Seldom is the small investor sought on a proposition which lets him in on the ground floor with the original incorporators and investors in any company.

Seldom is he offered such an opportunity in a corporation whose business is so sure and certain of big profits as home building.

And it is the more unusual that he should have this opportunity after all the hard work of organization and the initial business-getting campaign is over and success established.

But just such an opportunity does the El Segundo Home Builders Company offer today—and simply because the actual need of more homes at once at El Segundo and the demand upon the El Segundo Home Builders Company for them makes the increase of its capital to $1,000,000 absolutely necessary!

Now then, if you are a man or a woman with $10.00 or $1,000,000—listen, for it will certainly be to your profit.

The Standard Oil Company, at the inception of El Segundo, informed us that they were desirous of having all their employes live and own their own homes at El Segundo where they would be close to the refinery, believing that a home-owner makes the most contented employe.

In consequence, the El Segundo Home Builders Company was organized on the 9th day of November last, by some of the heaviest stockholders of the El Segundo Land & Improvement Company—the purpose of the organization being the erection of homes in El Segundo, to be sold on easy term payments to those people who intended taking up their abode there.

The company was formed merely to handle expeditiously the erection of houses in this giant tract adjoining the Standard Oil Company's new refineries.

But El Segundo took like wild-fire!

As soon as investors got wind of the Standard's operations they flocked to El Segundo, seeking real estate investments of every kind, and many investors began immediately the improvement of their properties.

The El Segundo Home Builders Company, although operating solely in El Segundo, was soon swamped with building business so much in excess of the amount they could take care of that an increase of the capital stock from $50,000 to $1,000,000 had to be arranged immediately, simply to take care of the business in hand and already in sight!

The company is just seven months old. It has made an actual net profit of 30% in this time.

This profit is still in the business and will remain there until the capital has been increased and future dividends are declared.

Every cent of money put into the company (except, of course, running expenses, which under our method of operation are comparatively small) goes into actual building operations—and no money is invested until the purchaser has been secured, contract signed, lot paid for and all his personal, home and business interests pushing forward for and with the progress and development of El Segundo.

From these facts, it is easy to see that the El Segundo Home Builders Company will make money—safely, surely and in splendid proportions to the money invested.

Now then, how will your money be handled? Will it have an equal chance with the first investors?

Will a small amount receive as much consideration as a big amount?

In a proposition so colossal as El Segundo (an industrial city whose future, business-men predict, must be counted in population up into the thousands between the 15 and 20 mark; whose industrial wealth will be represented by millions and whose building is along lines as nearly ideal as has ever been conceived for an industrial city of the kind anywhere in the world) diversified interests are best for quick, substantial development—the employer, the worker, the merchant, the clerk, the minister, the school-teacher, the father, mother, relative and friend, all should have a vital, and better, an actual financial interest in El Segundo.

This has been our aim in seeking the real estate investor—this is our aim in seeking investors now in the El Segundo Home Builders Company.

To accomplish this, we must offer the small investor an equal chance and equal profit with the largest.

On this basis we offer a chance for your dollar to count equally with ours and the dollar of every other investor in the company. There is not one penny of promotion stock nor watered stock nor financier's rake-off in the company—its stock has bed-rock value as representative of actual cash value as were it a bond issue of the most rigid sort.

One dollar in cash has been put into the treasury of the company for every dollar's worth of stock issued to date, and this will continue to the very last certificate delivered.

The price at which this stock is offered represents even less than the price paid by the present stockholders, and the undivided profits to date — profits which still remain in the company so that any stock bought now will represent even more for your money than the original stockholders got!

The first block in the new issue of the El Segundo Home Builders Company stock will be offered for sale beginning Monday morning — the advance demand already indicates that it will go in a few days!

If it is sold out rapidly some of the stock remaining will undoubtedly go at a premium—to be sure of getting El Segundo Home Builders stock at first price, buy at once.

And don't listen to old friend Procrastination, letting even Monday pass without giving the El Segundo Home Builders Company careful, thorough, earnest investigation—for good things don't come often and the chance to invest in the El Segundo Home Builders Company is one of those good things that comes but once in a lifetime and doesn't stay long at that!

PAYING WAGES TO CONVICTS.

A Praiseworthy Movement for the Benefit of the Families Deprived of Support by Legal Penalties.

[Case and Comment:] Some States allow their convicts, if good, a penny a day; others a plug of tobacco; others pay for overwork. All States allow the convict's innocent family to suffer. Imprisonment of the bread winner generally leaves those dependent upon him destitute and compels them either to endure bitter want or to become a public charge.

Recently a prisoner detained in a county jail in Indiana on a charge of petty larceny was detected passing a bundle to his wife, who was a daily visitor. The jailer examined the package and found that it contained the prisoner's food allowance, which he was turning over to his wife to keep her from starving. When the incident became known the prisoner's release was secured and work was obtained for him.

Starting on the theory that it is the dependents of those confined in prisons who do the real suffering, penologists have for some time been endeavoring to work out a correction of this situation.

Many gubernatorial messages have called legislative attention to the question. During 1911 the legislation enacted discloses a spirit of greater liberality on the part of the States toward convicts and their families.

The prisoner received compensation for labor in six States—Florida, Kansas, Michigan, Nevada, Rhode Island and Wyoming. His dependent family was given assistance in five—Colorado, Maine, Massachusetts, Missouri and New Jersey.

In the latter State prisoners' families dependent on charity are relieved by the commissioner of charities at the rate of 50 cents for every day the prisoner works, but this relief fund is limited to 5 per cent. of the value of all goods produced.

Kansas City is making an interesting experiment in the problem of supporting the families of convicts. The judge of the Juvenile Court of Kansas City has power to give pensions for the aid of such families, to wives or widows of convicts residing in his county. For one child under 14 years of age $10 a month is granted; for each additional child, $5 a month. The pensions are given only when by their aid the mother is enabled to remain at home with her children instead of going out to work, leaving the children uncared for and in danger of becoming delinquent.

WATER-DRIVEN ELEVATORS.

Passengers Raised Twenty or Thirty Stories on a Rigid Column of Water That Pushes Up a Piston.

[Cleveland Plain Dealer:] Passenger express elevators that are shot out of the bowels of the earth by a gigantic syringe and that literally float their passengers to a height of twenty or thirty stories on a rigid column of water, may seem like a fancy of Aladdin. Yet millions of people who go in and out of our skyscraper hotels and office buildings in our big cities travel in this sort of elevator every day.

There is nothing new about these elevators; on the contrary, the first elevators ever constructed were of this type, which, instead of consisting of a cage suspended by wire cables, consists of a cage that is pushed up or down by a giant piston, reaching deep into the ground.

The propelling machinery of this kind of elevator is child simple, for it works on the principle of a pair of cooking pans nested into each other. When water is poured into the outer pan the inner one floats and rises and if water is withdrawn from the outer pan the inner one settles. The sole difference in the principle as applied to elevators is that instead of pans there are two enormously long, hollow cylinders, closed at the bottom, one sliding inside the other and both reaching into the ground to the height of the building. The outer cylinder, into which water is forced under the tremendous pressure of 250 pounds to the square inch, is stationary, of course. The inner cylinder, the upper end of which is bolted to the floor of the elevator cage, rises or falls, according to the water that displaces it. Literally, therefore, passengers in the car are floated hundreds of feet into space to the top floors of skyscrapers. Any high speed desired is obtainable, being controlled instantaneously to the fraction of a second inch by car levers that admit or exhaust at the will of the elevator man.

Not more than a generation ago, when the invention of elevators made the modern skyscraper possible, the forerunner of the present standard type of plunger elevator was the only elevator thought possible. Architects argued that although the public would consent to ride in an elevator which literally could not fall because it actually always remained in contact with the ground, when it came to expect people to take chances of hovering several hundred feet between heaven and earth at the mercy of wire cables, few would be willing to take risks of a frightful death or a serious injury. Today not a man in a thousand that steps into an elevator gives a second thought to the fact as to whether or not his car is of a type that is supported from beneath and which, therefore, cannot possibly fail.

The Indiana Language.

[Indianapolis News:] An Indianapolis public school teacher some time ago received in her room a small boy from the Kentucky-Tennessee borderland, and she set about teaching him the intricacies of addition. She found he could run up or down a column of figures readily, but she could not make him understand how to "carry" from one column to another when the total was more than nine.

Finally the teacher called on one of the little girls in the class and told her she would give her a dime if she could make the newcomer understand the process. Next day the little girl called to claim the money.

"How did you make him see it so quickly?" inquired the teacher.

"Oh, I told him when he got a number of two figures to put down the one on the right and tote the other across, and he knew what I meant right away."

NEW USE FOR POTATOES.

Germany grows nearly five times as many bushels of potatoes as the United States. The average acreage is two and a half times as large and the yield is twice as much an acre, a writer in the Scientific American says. In America potatoes are grown exclusively for human food, but in Germany immense quantities are grown for industrial purposes, and used for manufacturing starch and denatured alcohol, or are dried and used for stock food. The market quotations are given regularly for potatoes for eating purposes and potatoes for manufacturing purposes, and the price of the latter, as a rule, is about two-thirds that of the former.

The development of the potato drying industry, which has sprung up and grown to large commercial importance in the last ten years, was the result of overproduction and low prices. Formerly farmers in years of overproduction were at the mercy of potato merchants because the potatoes were perishable and could not be carried over from one year to the next. But for somb years Germans had been drying the sugar beet pulp from the sugar factories (after the sugar had been extracted) and using it for stock food. This gave rise to the idea of drying potatoes, which is now done in potato drying factories that are rapidly increasing in all parts of the empire. In 1907 there were only 118 such factories and last year there were 404 in operation, notwithstanding the fact that in that time the potato crop of Germany was the poorest for many seasons and that the price was unusually high.

Two types of drying apparatus are used, one of which shreds the potatoes into pieces about as thick as a small lead pencil, called "schnitzel," and the other of which produces flakes or "flocken" by passing them through hot rollers. The "flocken" is preferred as more digestible and of the 404 factories in operation last year 314 were equipped to manufacture "flocken." This predominance may be partly due to the fact that it costs less to install a "flocken" plant, though "schnitzel" can be manufactured more cheaply after a plant is installed.

Though the dried potatoes in both forms may be used for cattle, sheep and swine, as a matter of fact they are used principally at the present time for swine. Experiments and experience have shown that dried potatoes may be used almost entirely to replace the corn ration, and this is of decided advantage to Germany, since all the corn that is used has to be imported. The extent to which potatoes are dried depends on the crop. In years of short crops, such as last year, the culls and potatoes that are not suitable for human food are principally utilized in the drying process. The drying of surplus potatoes not only puts them into a form in which they can be stored from frost, but reduces about three-fourths the cost of transportation plus of one part of the sent to another without pense.

NEW AUTO FACTORY IS ABOUT TO BE LAUNCHED.

Norman Church, Walter E. Flanders and Other Big Automobile Men Have Formed a Company to Get Out a New Low-Priced Car—Will It Bear the Name Flanders?—H. O. Harrison's Contract.

BY BERT C. SMITH.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

DETROIT, July 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Foundations for another large automobile plant are soon to be laid. Thousands of cars, the designs of which are now only in the minds of men, will soon be turned out. One of the biggest deals ever planned is soon to be consummated.

Walter E. Flanders, who made the Flanders car, is back of the deal. Flanders has severed all connection with the car that bears his name. He will have a new car. What the name of the machine will be no one can even guess.

Norman W. Church of Los Angeles, one of the biggest automobile dealers in the West, the man who made the Stoddard-Dayton famous on the Pacific Coast, is here and was in conference with Walter Flanders all day. The deal was not closed, but the details already made public give evidence of the immense project that is soon to be born. Will the car bear the Flanders name? On this question hangs a settlement which means much to the motor world.

BIG MEN CONCERNED.

The Studebaker corporation is dropping the names E.M.F. and Flanders. Will these names be grabbed by the new corporation and will Norman Church have the Pacific Coast rights for the output of the new concern? Three men who made the name E.M.F. one of the best known to the motor industry are concerned in this deal. Barney Everett is a controling power in the automobile industry. He controls large blocks of stock. His co-operation in any deal causes the wise ones to wonder what will happen next.

William Metzger is another man concerned in this proposition. Metzger left tonight for Boston, where he will join some of the most prominent automobile dealers. With Everett, Metzger and Flanders all interested, the conference today proved one of the most important of the year. It means a low-priced car and it means a new factory with the low-priced leaders vitally interested. It is stated tonight that E. Maguire, who has just resigned from the Ford factory, is interested in the deal. Maguire could not be located in Detroit tonight. It was stated that he has gone to Cleveland, another automobile manufacturing center, on business.

CORPORATION NAME.

Church said tonight that the name of the new concern will be the Flanders Motor Company. It is a legal question as to whether the name Flanders can be given to the new car. There is one Flanders car on the market and even if the name is dropped by the Studebaker people, the name, applied to another car, might be confusing. The Everett car is to be manufactured by the Everett Motor Company. The concern, formerly the Metzger Motor Company, has changed its name. The six-cylinder Everett car 1913 is one of the handsomest productions of the new season; one entire plant will be given up to the manufacture of the Everett.

H. O. Harrison will come into his own as western representative of the Everett. He has closed a contract which places him in a stronger position than he ever has occupied. Harrison is regarded here as one of the leading automobile dealers in the West and in certain circles his word is law. He has made a name for the Everett on the Pacific Coast and he is to be given more latitude in order that he may develop some of the plans he has outlined to the manufacturers here.

"TIMES" REPRESENTATIVE BANQUETED IN DETROIT.

BY BERT C. SMITH.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

DETROIT, July 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Times Ocean-to-Ocean special was honored at a dinner given last night by prominent automobile dealers. The account of the ocean-to-ocean journey, a transcontinental car, was given in detail and when the tale was told Mrs. Paul Smith, wife of the vice-president of the Everett Motor Company, told of having seen The Times special in Las Animas.

"Oh, how I tried to find the name of that car," said Mrs. Smith. "I looked all over the machine but had to give up. The crowd around the car made it hard for me to distinguish the lines, but I knew I had never seen a car like it, then I decided to call it The Times car. It was good enough for the people of Las Animas and was good enough for me."

Mrs. W. E. Flanders took a special interest in the account of the ocean-to-ocean journey.

Leroy Pelletier said the automobile manufacturers will have the strongest boosters for a national highway. Every manufacturer in Detroit has heard of the trip of The Times car and every factory man is ready to help mould public sentiment in favor of the plan for a national highway to be built by federal and State aid.

C. S. Anthony, the Regal dealer from Los Angeles, is here and has closed the 1913 contract with the Regal factory.

Phil Procthero, the Cadillac man, and Ed Breniger, both of San Francisco are here on business. Important deals are in progress but the Los Angeles dealers need not worry as each seems firmly planted on his agency. There are no rumors that need worry them.

The first news that Earle C. Anthony is the father of a baby boy was given out at the Packard factory today. The Packard dealer of Los Angeles has a host of friends here.

CHAMPIONSHIP PROGRAMME FOR DEL MONTE GOLFERS.

BY ALMA WHITAKER.

THE FINAL programmes for the two big golf weeks to be held on the links of the Del Monte Country Club from September 7 to 21 inclusive, are now ready.

The first week will be the Del Monte annual event with a variety of competitions for both men and women, and the second week is the Pacific Coast championship tournament, in which competitors from any part of the Pacific Coast will take part.

Both events will be managed by representatives from both the northern and southern golf associations, the south being represented by Sumner P. Hunt, chairman, and Edward B. Tufts, both of the Los Angeles Country Club, and Raymond Hornby of the Redlands Country Club.

The north will be represented by Vincent Whitney of the San Francisco Golf and Country Club; Percy Selby of the Burlingame Country Club and H. Spens-Black of the Claremont Country Club.

The first week will be devoted to scratch play competitions for both sexes, constituting the Del Monte championships. Also to handicap match play competitions for men and women, with trophies and cups for both winners and runners-up. Trophies for qualifying rounds and prizes for each flight of sixteen men or eight women. Prizes also for the defeated sixteen.

Mixed foursomes will be a feature of the first week, one of the most popular items for which partners are already being booked up. North versus south team matches, consolation handicaps for both sexes, bogey handicaps all find a place in the programme. Saturday, September 14, will be devoted to driving, putting and approaching contests in the morning, and a tombstone tournament in the afternoon.

The Coast Championship.

Monday, September 16, will see the qualifying round for the Coast championship. Thirty-six holes, eighteen in the morning, eighteen in the afternoon. The best thirty-two will qualify for the championship. Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday the 17th, 18th and 19th, will see the first, second and third rounds match play in the mornings, and a series of north versus south team matches in the afternoons.

The winner of this tournament will be the bona fide champion of the whole Pacific Coast, and will receive the gold medal of the Pacific Coast Golf Association. He will have his name inscribed on the championship cup, which will be held by his club

NO ARROW ABOUT THIS.

Pierce Man Cut Capers That Astonished Plaza.

Brake or Not to Brake Is Beginner's Problem.

Local Agent Tells of First Try As Driver.

BY W. E. BUSH,
Pierce-Arrow Agent.

W. E. Bush,
Pierce-Arrow Agent.

In driving my first motor car I believe I had demonstrated to me something that is brought to the realization of almost everyone driving their first car. I learned that two objects could not occupy the same spot in the street at the same time.

Of course this was years ago. It seems like the dark ages, but in reality it was hardly ten years. At that time I was assisting in the building of the Tourist, a Los Angeles made car. The plant was on North Main street and while I was an experienced gas engine man, I had never driven a motor car. I was told that I should be able to operate a machine, and one fine morning I climbed into the seat of one of the two-cylinder cars and started on my trip of adventure. I naturally wanted to get away from the congested district as rapidly as possible, so turned north on Main street.

As the car had a planetary transmission and only two speeds, I got into the high without serious trouble and was soon booming along, but not with a smile of confidence on my face. I confess that I was frightened, and when several Mexicans tried to cross the street in front of me I did a figure eight all over the Plaza.

But I never stopped. That is one of the peculiar things about a man or woman driving their first automobile, stopping seems to be the last thing they think of. They will dodge and twist and wind in and out of tight places, but never a thought of stopping and getting out of a pinch the easiest way. In this particular I was no different.

All went well until I reached the railroad crossing near the iron works. A large wagon-load of lumber was moving along and instead of taking the middle of the road I decided to squeeze through between the wagon and the curb. About that same instant a man driving an express wagon in front of the lumber team decided to turn over toward the curb, and suddenly there loomed up before me, the rear end of a wagon.

Right there is where I held up the reputation of the novice. If I had slammed on the brake and stopped without damage, there would have been nothing to tell. The minute that wagon turned in front of me I turned pale—I must have done that for remembering the way I felt there could have been no other result. I grabbed the wheel and instead of shutting down gave the throttle a shove and went into the end of that wagon full speed. I—bounded back and came forward for a second crash.

Needless to add there was not much left of the front end of that motor car. Excepting for giving the horse a hard jab in his tonneau end, I did little damage to the wagon.

The wrecking crew hauled me in and my ambition to drive was cooled for several days. But after a rest, I decided to try a car at night when there was little travel and less likelihood of meeting lumber wagons. I invited Mrs. Bush for a ride. She displayed her bravery and decided to go.

I really surprised myself the way I ran that two-cylinder car. We skimmed along the road and finally I ventured down town. I was running along Broadway near Tenth street when suddenly a car loomed up in front of me. That was easy, I had learned how to stop, and without a moment's hesitation I slammed on the brake.

Then something most unusual happened. Instead of stopping as heretofore that car began to turn round and round at the speed of an express train. I felt like I was sitting on a top. I did not know at that time that you should not apply your brakes suddenly on a wet street. Mrs. Bush immediately alighted and said she preferred to return home in a street car.

I am glad to say I have improved and believe I understand the operation of a Pierce. But then cars are easier operated than they were in those days.

Surveying the rapid progress of this great motor industry we must acknowledge that "the world do move."

Jay Cooke's Studebaker Bears.
Pasadena automobile man has pair of tame Bruins well trained in automobiling and they are strong for touring.

It's a Bear; It's a Bear!

BRUINS MONOPOLIZE STUDEBAKER TONNEAU.

When the big traffic officer encountered a regular blockade on Spring street, between Fifth and Sixth, last week, he came near turning in a riot call; but he only smiled and sang, "Its a bear; it's a bear"; when closer investigation revealed Jay Cooke of the Pasadena Studebaker agency with his two tame bears in the tonneau of a Studebaker E.M.F. "30" entertaining the interested crowd.

The bears are regular bears—of the cinnamon variety. About a year ago, one of Cooke's friends, who had purchased a Studebaker machine from him a short time before, was touring up in Toulumne county when he came across two cubs, with no protecting mother in sight. It was but the work of a minute to load them in the tonneau, and not much more work to transport them to the Crown City.

Cooke was wished on to the parentless bears as foster father. He had to spend a lot of money for bottles and milk, but the result is well worth his care as his two cubs are now a year and a half old and everywhere they go are the center of attraction. They are tame as bears can be, and have abandoned nipple and milk for more substantial stuff of the vegetarian variety.

Cooke claims his bears are the champion automobile tourists of the bruin family—and there is none to dispute him. In their year and a fraction of captivity the cubs have traveled something like 7000 miles in Studebaker automobiles, and apparently they like it. At least they crawl into the tonneau on every occasion, and any time their master tries to "roust" them a near approach to bad temper is immediately apparent in otherwise peaceful cubs.

GASOLINE NOT HIGH.

Lower Here, Declares Regal Man Than In Almost any Foreign Country.

R. M. Lockwood, head of the foreign department of the Regal Motor Car Company, claims that the American motoring public does not appreciate the fact that in reality a very low price is paid for gasoline in this country.

There is a great deal of complaint heard in this country about the high price of gasoline, but in certain parts of Europe and in the Orient, the Regal man states that he has known the price to be as high as sixty cents a gallon.

Motorists of England are up in arms over the increased retail price of gasoline, which is now selling for thirty-two cents a gallon. According to reports from the Royal Automobile Club of London, indignation meetings have been held in various parts of the country and consternation is in evidence everywhere.

"The difficulties which the motorists of England face should make us thankful of two things," says Lockwood, "first that the price of gasoline in this country is much lower, and second that the cars manufactured here in America are more economical in the consumption of gasoline."

The movement of gasoline prices during the first half of 1912 was a continued rise. The year opened at 10 cents a gallon for tank wagon lots of automobile gasoline of .68 to .72 S. G. This price advanced to 11 cents late in January, a month later to 12 cents and thence practically 1 cent every thirty days, until it is now 15 cents. An obvious reason for this advance is the ever-increasing demand for automobile fuel which stands face to face with a limited supply. This latter is regulated by the production of crude oil, the supply of which cannot be so increased as to easily fill the demand for gasoline without an overproduction in other petroleum products. To balance the increase in oil stock necessitated by a larger gasoline output, the oil producers have increased the price on petroleum steadily during the past half-year.

The manufacture of automobiles requires more than a million bales of cotton annually, of which 400,000 bales are used in the manufacture of tires and protectors; 50,000 bales are used for the manufacture of "leather" seats and cushions; 10,000 for the stuffing and upholstering, while the remainder is used up in making motor clothing, slip covers, insulating wires, tool bags, tool rolls, waste and mercerized rain clothing. For simply filtrating automobile lubricating oil alone millions of yards of forty-inch ducking is used annually, to say nothing of the vast number of cotton or canvas covers made to put over cars while standing in salesrooms or garages. All this uses up cotton, so that the motor vehicle uses more cotton than the railroads and other allied industries. It has helped to increase the world's demand for the commodity by more than 5,000,000 bales in the last five years.

Every car has some speed at which it operates most economically. In most cases this is very close to twenty-five miles an hour. The reason for this fact is that each unit in the car has some speed at which it reaches its maximum efficiency. The speed of the car which coincides closest to the speed at which a majority of these units are acting at their best efficiency is the most economical speed. 48 Engineers Built This Car as a Four-Cylinder Masterpiece

Howard E. Coffin and His Specialists Now Offer the HUDSON "37"

It Is Here Now—Come, See It

These 48 Engineers—Gathered From Everywhere—Have Had a Hand in Designing Over 200,000 Cars of 97 Well-Known Makes

There are more high salaried, widely experienced automobile engineers on the HUDSON Engineering Board than in any similar organization in the world.

At the head of this body—now 48 in number—is Howard E. Coffin, America's leading designer and builder of six famous cars.

No one disputes his pre-eminent position as the leader of automobile engineering progress.

His associates have been gathered from nearly every important automobile engineering organization of the world.

There are men on this Board who were the chief engineers of leading concerns. Every automobile building nation has its representatives here.

There are representatives from Germany, France, England and Italy, as well as from America.

Combined they have had a hand in building more than 200,000 cars of 97 well-known makes.

They Are Specialists—Every One

No one man can ever hope to know as much about automobiles as these men, working in unison, know.

Each is stronger for being associated with so many other experts.

Each is a specialist. Each possesses a knowledge and an ability not possessed by his fellows.

In the same way that a base ball manager in building a strong team chooses specialists who excel at certain kinds of play—at pitching, catching, batting, and base running—so Howard E. Coffin, four years ago, set out to organize the strongest body of automobile engineers to be had.

The world was his field. If a man had shown that he could get more power out of a motor than any other man had been able to get, or if one proved he could simplify work others had more crudely begun, he was induced to join this organization.

Still, there are men here who know nothing about automobile chassis designing but who know everything about creating beautiful body lines. Some who know how to make comfortable seat cushions and backs with soft upholstering that will retain their easy qualities and not break down, were added to the organization.

Never before in any other car was so much thought given to these important items of comfort. It is a dominating characteristic of the New HUDSONS.

Worked Two Years

The result of two years' work—the master work of all these men—is shown in the New HUDSON cars.

As the experimental cars were completed, they were sent with a corps of experts and drivers who knew all road conditions, over every imaginable kind of road.

The cars were tried out last winter over roads practically impassable to other vehicles. Snow and mud and the worst weather did not interrupt these tests.

Officers of the company rode on these test trips. They demanded more emphatically than any owner can ever demand, that the quality of the New HUDSON cars should be thoroughly known to them.

The Allegheny mountains became our testing ground.

No road was too rough, too steep, too dangerous or too long for these cars to be driven over at maximum speed.

A driver—winner of many road races in America and abroad—who knows no fear—drove at top speed up rough mountain paths, through bottomless roads of mire and over every conceivable surface that a vehicle can be sent, to prove that the car has the stamina, the power and the comfort to do the work and do it with minimum fatigue to the passengers.

Consider the Stake

In reading the claims which are made for this car, consider how much is at stake on it.

The HUDSON Company has millions at stake. The future of the HUDSON will depend entirely on this car's performance.

Howard E. Coffin, now the leading American designer, has all his present prestige and future fame tied up to the car which represents his idea of perfection.

And 48 engineers in the front rank of this industry have all agreed that the HUDSON "37" represents their highest accomplishment. The future of all of them depends on this car's making good.

There was never a car on which so many men had so much at stake as the HUDSON Staff has on this. There was never a car of which so many big men said, "There is no part of this car which we know how to build better."

Consider these facts when you read the claims we make for this, the latest of the HUDSON cars.

Every HUDSON a Success

Such a body of experts render mistakes next to impossible. A dozen men check every move of each individual.

Your knowledge of American automobile history tells you that every HUDSON car of each model has been a brilliant success.

There is not the slightest question about that. The secret of such constantly increasing quality as has been shown each year in HUDSON automobiles is due to the fact that the best engineering brains in the world are used in their building.

We regard it as the most essential part of an organization. Forty-eight experts are bound to think faster, are bound to create more new features, are bound to build a more thoroughly proportioned car than any one man can ever hope to do.

No one man's personality, no one man's experience, can overshadow that of either of the other 47 except in the details which he knows better than the others know.

Such is the pedigree of the New HUDSON Cars. It is nothing short of a romance of engineering achievement. No other automobile ever so completely represented what many trained men could do. None other ever bore such unmistakable evidences of advancement and quality.

STEARNS MAKES RECORD RUN.

Nearly Four Hundred Miles Covered in Day.

George Adair Races Across the Mountains.

Soledad to Los Angeles Trip Tested Car and Man.

One of the most sensational runs of the season and the nearest approach to a record run for many moons, was the trip of 375 miles in one day made last week by George Adair in a Stearns.

The run was the result of sickness in Mrs. Adair's family. He was ten miles out of Soledad in the mountains at 8 o'clock in the morning, and at midnight turned onto Broadway in Los Angeles. He was accompanied by Mrs. Adair on the entire run, and she displayed rare nerve, even when the car was being shot over the mountains at a record-breaking clip.

Adair had been to Portland, and was driving back at easy stages. Ten miles from Soledad is a pleasure resort in the hills, and here he directed the car. For several days the Adairs rested under the trees, and all this time the telegraph operators in every town along the Coast were trying to locate the Stearns and its party.

At 8 o'clock in the morning he started for home, and after running about 130 miles, rolled into Paso Robles for luncheon. The clerk at the hotel, remembering the telegram which had been sent there several days before, told Adair of it and a search was made, but on account of the inability of the telegraph companies to locate Adair the wire had been returned to Los Angeles. A telephone call was put in for Los Angeles and at 1 o'clock Adair learned that their presence was necessary in Los Angeles; so, jumping into the Stearns, they started for Los Angeles.

Adair has driven over the coast road several times on record runs, and he knew it well. He was on the car that made the Los Angeles-San Francisco record. To secure herself, Mrs. Adair was partially tied in the seat, and the rush over the mountains began.

In an hour San Luis Obispo was reached, and without stopping, the car shot along through Arroyo Grande and on into Santa Maria.

Another hour was gone and there was still almost 200 miles to go. Several bad stretches of road were encountered, and when Los Olivos was reached a stop was made for dinner, as Adair did not expect to stop from there in.

In the early evening he was again away, and although the car had not been prepared for such a drive, he sent it over the road at top speed. There was many a bump, but Adair never stopped, and was soon in the mountains.

On previous trips, Adair has always gone over the San Marcos Pass, but at both Santa Maria and Los Olivos he was advised to go by the Gaviota, as the San Marcos is badly cut up. Adair found the Gaviota in poor shape.

Santa Barbara was reached at 20 minutes after 8, and after a stop to take on gasoline, the car went into the night to tackle the Casitas. His run from Santa Barbara was very fast. Just out of Santa Barbara he encountered about ten miles of rough road, which proved a hard strain on the car, but he kept on and crossed the mountains in good shape. From there in it was almost a boulevard, and the last end of his trip was his fastest.

Not only is such a trip a terrific strain on the car, but it is a hard test on a driver. Two hundred miles a day at an ordinary touring gait is considered a hard drive, but here was a man who went almost twice that far, at a record-breaking speed.

Adair has been driving the Stearns without having made a single adjustment since the trip began. He had no trouble with his Goodyear tires.

GASOLINE PULLMAN.

U. S. Truck Will Convey Hotel Passengers From Depot—Can Carry Twenty.

Hart Brothers, have ordered a U. S. Truck from the Western Auto Body Manufacturing Company of this city, agents for King Motor Cars and the U. S. Truck, to be used for the Rosslyn Hotel train service.

When finished, this hotel bus will be one of the largest on the Coast. The president of the Western Company says the bus will be a gasoline Pullman, with seating capacity for twenty passengers.

WHITE COMPANY DROPS YEARLY MODELS.

The yearly model idea is a thing of the past, with the manufacturers of the White. This information was given out by the local White agency last week and hereafter, instead of announcing and bringing out new models at a certain specified time each year, the cars will be known by their letters, and a model will continue, without reference to date, till it is found advisable to make changes.

At that time a designation will be dropped and a new one applied to the new model.

Changes will be made in the White line whenever it is found advisable, instead of waiting for the opening of a season, and for this reason there will be no 1913 White announcement

HAMLIN MAKES CLEAN-UP.

Delivers Four Cars to Four Brothers at Oxnard and Then Gets Brother-in-law.

R. C. Hamlin, the Franklin agent, has another record to his credit, and is as proud of it as he was of some of the honors of the old bicycle days.

He has sold four Franklin cars to four brothers, and, not having any more men in the family to sell Franklins to, went after the brother-in-law and delivered a little model G touring car as a result.

J. D., J. H., T. F. and R. H. McGrath are the four brothers and James Leonard is the brother-in-law. All five of the new Franklin owners are wealthy ranchers of Oxnard, where they have made fortunes raising beets and beans.

Ralph Hamlin has delivered three of the cars, and will deliver the other two within a week if the railroads do their share in the transaction.

Big Business.

AUBURN STAFF ON THE JUMP.

NEW MODELS PROVE POPULAR WITH MOTORISTS.

New "Thirty-three" Has Pretty Lines, With All Levers Inside. "Forty" Has Lower Frame Than Last Year's Model—"Big Six" Will Remain Unchanged in Design.

The new 1913 Auburns kept W. J. Burt and his staff on the jump all last week. New models have been added to the Auburn line and many improvements and finishing touches have been added to the models of the past season.

One model which is attracting special attention is the Auburn "Thirty-Three." The chassis is the same as that of the 1912 model, but with a new long stroke Rutenber motor. The same heavy rear axle of last year is continued, but the body is wider and the levers are all inside, leaving the lines without a break.

Another model quite similar in construction is the "Thirty-Seven," but the "Forty" will set lower than last year's model, having a double drop frame.

The star of the line, according to Burt, is the "Little Six." This little forty-five-horse-power Auburn is very popular and already W. J. Burt has four orders in for this model with deposits paid, notwithstanding the fact that delivery cannot be made till September 1.

There has been no change made in the fifty-five-horse-power "Big Six." This model remains the same as in 1912. "We could not figure out any improvements for this car, so let the model stand as it was," said Burt upon being asked about the new models.

WOMAN DRIVER.

Mrs. Bulckley Drives National to Ventura in Fast Time of One Hour and Forty-five Minutes.

In company with Leigh Guernsey, owner of the car, and Mrs. Guernsey, Mrs. Jeanne Bulckley made the run from Los Angeles to Ventura in a National "forty" in the fast time of one hour and forty-five minutes last week.

That Mrs. Bulckley is an expert driver, goes without saying, and from the start a fast pace was set. Guernsey, however, is a lover of fast going, and he made no objections, and after a very short distance had been traveled, he realized that he and the car were perfectly safe with the clever woman driver at the wheel.

The run was made at a time when the roads were practically deserted and the car was slowed down at every town, so no desperate chances were taken. Mrs. Bulckley exercised special precautions on the grades and at every turn.

On the boulevard, after leaving Ventura, the car was opened up and if the pace torn off for a few miles had been continued on into Santa Barbara, the present Los Angeles to Santa Barbara record would have been threatened.

LOCAL MOTOR RUMBLES
BY AL. G. WADDELL.

William R. Russ, who has been at the Pope-Hartford factory for the past few weeks, is on his way home and is expected to arrive in the city next Wednesday.

The National "Bluebird," which won the Phoenix road race last year, was out on the road last week under the command of Jay Boothe. The veteran No. 11 was driven up to Porterville, where Boothe had certain matters of business to attend to and where he incidentally sold three Nationals. The return trip was a near approach to a fast run.

A private operative has been on the trail of a certain Mr. Fillmore, who commands a division of the Ford Motor Company's following and more is known about light heavyweight Ford salesman's love affairs than he knows himself, and some interesting society news is being prepared for early publication.

Oscar Werner, proprietor of the Simplex training camp, won the ninety-horse power boxing championship on three cylinders, over Dick Carlson at the L.A.A.C. last Friday night. Walter Keating played the Eyton role and Van Court held the ticker.

The fatal wallop in the second stanza broke Carlson's red gasoline tank and he has been missing badly ever since.

Bill LaCasse and his all-star company of high-powered salesmen are looking for the man who sold the Studebaker Flanders to Bill Jones of Tonopah, Nev. Grif. knows, but he'll never tell and the commission has been claimed by Lord Ollier.

Jerry Woodill of the Hawley King forces is expecting a present from the Simplex agency, but it is a long time to wait till Christmas and Dick is looking for the shipping receipt.

J. J. Canavan has taken to society rather strenuously during the absence of Warren Vance and has developed into a real social lion.

A. M. Young is planning to visit the city of Santa Monica next week for the first time since the Santa Monica road race. "Where we love and linger, there we suffer most." (Thomas Service, Special Dispatch.)

If anybody ever says that "Pete" Grimm is a woman hater contradict him. On one occasion he refused to take a girl on a moonlight tour and after sizing up the field, proceed to beat the time of the press agent. If it had not been for the long distance back to the city, the Moon would have been one passenger shy on the return trip, but "All Things Work Together for Good," and a blonde is as good as a brunette.

Barry Cool of the Hudson has had his "non skid" removed from his upper lip, but he has an indistinct recollection of seeing a Simplex pass a Hudson in the moon (light) and has notified Buxton of the fact.

The barons of the "Row" thought that Roger Stearns was going to apply for his aviator's license when he hit the crossing at Eleventh and Olive streets, Thursday afternoon, he went so high. It is rumored that he made a figure "8" and a perfect landing.

A free picture of Freddie Pabst with every Motor West. Yea Boo.

J. Jay Vandergrift, the bosom friend of James Louis O'Shea, has had the left valve of his Mercer ground, and the little "Yellow Peril" Mercer now resembles a canary bird. He is thinking seriously of having Coleman and Bental build a special detachable taxicab body for his "race-for-joy" model.

M. E. Allard wants to know why "Peg" Love claims the record for the quick get away stunt. It happened last Wednesday night.

The Buick "40" of Imperial Valley road race fame is in the city, and will be overhauled by Frank Howard's crew while the Lyons boys are in the city. It is reported that this old racer will be in the Phoenix race.

Charles Yeager of the Grundy Museum has "underslung" more Americans on his page of the logbook than any other salesman of the Grundy Motor Sales Company staff. The reason for this is that he was born in America, has crossed the Atlantic thirteen times and is still here. Most of Yeager's sales are made on Cole days.

The reason for the universal joint between Ralph Hamlin's watch and trousers, is not fear of newspaper men with slippery fists, but he lost a perfectly good air-cooled Waterbury on a fishing trip last summer and has learned a lesson.

Guy Irwin of the Franklin has a new air-cooled pipe. The castings were made in Europe. It is a one explosion affair, but a perfect success.

A Big Question.

PURE RUBBER GOOD ENOUGH.

AJAX TIRE COMPANY CAN'T "SEE" SYNTHETIC MATERIAL.

Prospect of Manufacturing Artificial Tires that Will Do the Work Looks Good to European, but It Is Not Likely that the New Produce Will Cut Much of a Figure.

Although Europe is again a-flutter over the prospect of commercial success in the manufacture of artificial rubber for automobile tires, it is stated that the plans of the Ajax-Grieb Rubber Company to extend its manufacturing facilities by the establishment of a factory in Europe, make no provision whatever for the development of synthetic rubber.

For a number of years there have been reports of new processes by which synthetic rubber will be made, to take the place of the natural plantation variety, but while manufacturers as well as motorists have shown great interest in the process and the product, it is not expected that it will make any inroads on the tire industry for some time at least.

While the question is being asked as to whether or not artificial rubber will ever rival the Para rubber in quality as well as price, the Ajax manufacturers announce that their tires will continue to be made of pure Para rubber only.

NOT THE ONLY ONE.

Rubber is the same as many other natural products which have been imitated by chemical processes—notably food products. Some progress admittedly has been made with tires but there are complications to be overcome.

The elements contained in rubber have been ascertained by analysis and these elements have been artificially built up until a manufacturing compound was reached. The exact proportion of each element is but the beginning of the chemist's difficulties. The material that has been used invariably has cost more than the plantation article.

Starch is the base of the new rubber compounds and if they ever prove successful from a commercial standpoint it may not be impossible to produce tires as well as alcohol from the starch of potatoes.

German scientists were first to discover the production of "rubber" from isoprene treated with sodium. While there have been single instances of satisfaction from cars fitted with these artificial tires, the single cases do not prove what can be done in a general way. The isoprene is obtained from amyl dichloride which, in effect, is amyl alcohol with a chloride added to facilitate its conversion into isoprene. This amyl dichloride is obtained by treating fusel oil with hydrochloric acid and the fusel oil itself, in common with acetone, is obtained by fermenting pulp or mash made from potatoes, maize or any other grain producing a starch base.

HOW THEY DO IT.

Fusel oil and acetone, by the way, are valuable by-products which command ready markets and high prices. After fermentation of these two products they are separated by a simple process of distillation and the fusel oil is passed through various stages of conversion into isoprene. When the isoprene stage has been reached the liquid is treated with sodium, which slowly renders it thicker and thicker until, finally, after patient treatment and washing, a material resembling the latex, or milky juice, of the natural rubber plant in obtained. The process of manufacturing which follows is similar to that applied to natural rubber.

Professor Perkin of Manchester University has been a leader in synthetic production of "rubber" and the knowledge which he and other scientists have added to this recurring industry has compelled great respect, but not yet given assurance of commercial value from the standpoint of practical manufacturing, wearing qualities under the brutal usage to which tires are subjected and the reduction of tire costs.

A long time will be required to prove these qualities and it must be borne in mind that it took years to build a good motor car tire from natural rubber, to say nothing of a chemical compound

EVERYONE VACATIONS IN EXCLUSIVE AUTOMOBILES.

WHATEVER did poor society do in the barbarous pre-automobile days? Each year the pesky things make themselves more indispensable and the social elect would as soon travel without their dressing case as without an automobile.

The only fashionable way to take a holiday is, of course, the automobile tour and if you live anywhere that does not require an automobile to get to, you cannot be conscientiously regarded as socially exclusive.

This year everybody is automobiling with that comfortable string of luxurious California hotels all along the Coast to make things really simple. This is what is known in plutocratic circles as the "simple life," and it can be strongly recommended as doing away with all the nasty plebeian complications of holidaying.

One of the jolliest automobile tours I have heard about is that of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Chase of Riverside, together with Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Chase. They started by doing California first and spending a few cosy, golfy days at Del Monte and Santa Barbara. Thence on to San Francisco, and several interesting northern points. Now they are probably speeding for British Columbia, with Vancouver as their destination from whence they will explore surrounding beauty. Then back to Del Monte in time for the September golf meeting and afterwards, Heigho, for merry England. Mrs. Martin is one of the most daring and capable lady motorists.

Of course Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Braly go everywhere by auto, and their luxurious cars contain all sorts of tricky arrangements for comfortable travelling and stowing luggage on board. They recently hied them to Long Beach and later up to Del Monte, but, of course, since they never travel any other way, it's hardly worth mentioning. I am confident they will go to Europe on that machine next time they make the trip.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Jevne have also elected to make their vacation an automobile one. Theirs is a Packard, I believe, but anyway it has taken them far, far north without mishap and will shortly bring them back again.

The Faust family—Mr. and Mrs. W. H., Mr. H. H. and the Misses Wilma and Marguerite—are touring California in their Winton car—they took in Del Monte, of course, on their way north, as also did Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Blackstone of this city, who are extending their tour over several weeks, with long stays at happy spots.

Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Cory and their family—isn't Mr. Cory a nice important person at Fresno?—are likewise automobiling, and a certain Mr. J. W. Byrne, one of those fortunate males who get themselves described as "popular clubmen," was among the happy throng. Mr. Byrne hails from San Francisco and the Pacific Union Club is one of those that earns him his title.

Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Robertson broke their tour at Del Monte on their way to Canada, and another party, bound for Matilija, included Mr. and Mrs. John D. Reavis, the hosts, and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Wright.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lee Buttner of Riverside and their young daughter, Miss Dollie, motored to Coronado, and Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Waite of the same city, went by automobile to Laguna, where also Mr. and Mrs. Harry B. Stewart and Misses Cunningham motored down, to make that place their headquarters for a month. Laguna, too, was the destination of Mr. and Mrs. Lance, whose party on their Chalmers car, included Mr. and Mrs. William Swift Daniell.

Miss Eleanor Morgan has created something of a stir since she has pinned her faith to an electric, which she considers capable of great things. Hers is a gem and she takes it with her everywhere—by train on long journeys and by road where possible. She would as soon go without it as without her toothbrush and at Del Monte recently, she attracted any amount of admiration by the skillful way she handled it.

Mr. and Mrs. Silas R. Burns of Alhambra have gone with their entire family by motor to Idylwild, where they will stay all the summer and make auto trips through the surrounding country.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert J. Goudge of Alhambra make such frequent tours on their Buick car that it is difficult to know which they consider their vacation. Their most recent trip was to Ventura, in which city they have hosts of friends.

Those are all family parties, but the automobile holiday is equally popular with bachelors and grass widowers. Dr. S. D. Block and half a dozen of his male friends have a great weakness for gliding off on mountain trips in his luxuriously-equipped Packard. Besides the carefully-thought-out camping impedimenta, these wily bachelors invariably pack a Japanese cook somewhere in the chassis.

Then there are the two brothers, Parker of the San Gabriel Country Club, Jim—pardon, James, of course—and Edmund, both of whom possess lovely machines and would scarcely consider it respectable to travel without them. It is quite dreadful to think of what would happen if either of them ever had to go on a street car. They even object to trespassing on each other's cars—sort of thing of which one must have the exclusive use, don't you know, like a brush and comb or a handkerchief! In fact there's a little story about that, but I'll save it for another time.

And talking of bachelors, there is one house at Riverside which boasts a regular store of automobiles, each owned by some care-free, handsome unattached male. Lieut. Holden owns one, the envy of all Riverside. Martin Redmayne, the polo player, owns another, almost if not quite as beautiful. Frank Disney Hudson, the golfer, owns another, renowned for its maidenly reserve, and Roy Holland, another, not renowned at all. An automobile apiece is absolutely essential to their well being and as for making their vacations an automobile trip—why life is one long glorious vacation for unattached bachelors, surely!

Around the Bay.

AMERICAN UNDERSLUNG CAPTURES THE RECORD.

ACCORDING to a telegram received from San Francisco by the Grundy Motor Sales Company, Southern California distributors of American motor cars, the record for the around-the-bay run was shattered by Marc Bunnell in an American car last Friday.

The time made by Bunnell over the eighty-nine-mile course was 1hr., 43m. [illegible], against the former record of 1h., 50m., and 19s., which had stood against many attempts to break it for a period of thirteen months.

This course is from San Francisco to Oakland, by way of San Jose, and the telegram stated that the American encountered forty-five miles of very bad roads.

Bunnell, the man who made the record run, is a representative of the American Motors Company, and an amateur driver, but his performance Friday stamps him as one of the top-notchers of the road-driving clan.

The American "Underslung" has been particularly active all over the country during the past few weeks. Ralph D. Earle of Philadelphia won the "Wildwood-by-the-Sea" reliability run in New Jersey last week, with an American.

An old 1906 American "Traveler," which had run over 50,000 miles, was entered in the recent Pine Tree run in Maine, and made a remarkable showing, finishing in safety after a spring had been snapped, within sixty-four miles of the finish of the 440-mile course.

The activity in the north gives color to the rumor that an American "Underslung" will be entered in the Los Angeles to Phoenix race in October. This will be the first appearance of the American "Underslung" in Southern California racing circles, and if the local agency decides to enter a car, its performances will be watched with great interest all over the country, on account of the trying conditions encountered on the unique Phoenix road race course.

The local American distributors are elated over the record captured by their car in the north and predict that it will stand for a long time.

Called for Another Rescue.

[Toronto Mail and Empire:] Edmund Lamy, the skating champion, said the other day at Saranac Lake:

"Skating on thin ice is very dangerous. I heard two sisters—daughters of an aged millionaire widower—talking the other day about it.

"'Did you hear about poor pa's heroism?' the first sister asked. 'That beautiful young chorus girl, Tottie Tights, broke through the ice this morning, and pa plunged in and rescued her.'

"The second sister bit her lip.

"'Well,' she said, 'how dreadful! Now we'll have to rescue pa.'"

SECOND-HAND CAR BUSINESS BOOMING.

W. S. Rhodes, who has charge of the Studebaker Corporation's second-hand department at Tenth and Los Angeles streets, has moved fifty second-hand cars in less than a month, a pretty fair start for a record, no?

One of the problems of the automobile industry has always been the disposal of second-hand cars taken in on new models, and the Studebaker Corporation has solved it by establishing a department where these machines are handled exclusively.

Rhodes takes these used cars as fast as they are taken in at the retail house, and the fact that he has put out fifty in so short a time proves that the separate establishment is a paying proposition.

Coming Here.

LONG ALCO RUN WILL FINISH IN THIS CITY.

RAND AND CHANDLER, Southern California agents for the American Locomotive Company, have received word from the Alco manufacturers to the effect that the transcontinental Alco truck trip will end in Los Angeles, instead of at Petaluma, as at first planned.

After delivering the three-ton load of soap and silk to the Carlson-Currier Company in the northern city, another cargo will be taken aboard, consigned to a local concern, which will extend the trip 500 miles or more and bring the greeting from Mayor Blankenburg of Philadelphia to Mayor Alexander of this city.

The great interest displayed in this city, over the long trip of the Alco, resulted in the decision to extend the trip to Los Angeles where the crew of the truck will be accorded a fitting demonstration.

At present the truck is in the State of Colorado, working its way westward consistently. The latter part of next month is the time set for the arrival of the truck on the Coast and judging from the time made so far on the journey it should arrive on scheduled time.

This is the first delivery of freight by motor across the continent and all along the route much interest has been shown in the trip. Public officials everywhere have shown their share of interest.

Mayor Wolz of Fremont, Neb., personally piloted the truck a part of the distance across the State and arranged for pilots for the rest of the way while within the boundaries of the State.

The truck is being driven by Frank Morin of New York and Walter Dick of Philadelphia. Both these men are well known in motor truck circles and have figured in several record breaking runs made by Alco trucks.

ELGIN RACES NEXT MONTH.

New Management Has Revived Interest in Classic.

Field of Famous Drivers Is Lined Up for Dashes.

Four Events to Occupy Two Days of Racing.

The Elgin road races will be run August 30 and 31, and notwithstanding the fact that the project was abandoned by the original promoters early last month on account of a seeming lack of interest, the Elgin Automobile Club has come to the front and taken hold of the affair and the events of this year promise to surpass all others.

With the Elgin Automobile Road Racing Association co-operating with the officials of the automobile club, the four events should take on the form of a classic. Two races will be held on each day of the racing carnival. On the first day, the sixteen-[illegible]-mile event, for non-stock cars of 231-300 cubic inches piston displacement and the 203-mile race, for cars in the 301-450 division, will take place.

The free-for-all and the race for cars under 600 cubic inches piston displacement will be held on the second day. The distance of the free-for-all will be 306 miles. The winner's cut of the purse will be $1760, with $500 and $250 going to the second and third place men.

Were it not for the prominence of the members of the Chicago Automobile Club, in automobile circles, it is a question as to whether or not the club could successfully promote the races, but with such men as David Beecroft, F. E. Edwards and even Fred J. Wagner, who has volunteered to personally solicit entries, at the helm, the success of the race is a certainty.

FOREIGN CAR ELIGIBLE.

It is believed that there will be more entries this year than last and that the field will be faster, as the races are for non-stock cars instead of the stock type. Foreign cars will also be eligible this year for the first time in the history of the Elgin races.

E. E. Hewlett of this city has been asked to enter the three Fiats which Tetzlaff, Oldfield and Bragg drove in the Santa Monica Road Race, and it is reported in the East that their appearance is expected.

Ralph De Palma has announced his intention of driving the Mercedes at Elgin.

Mulford, who won the Elgin trophy in 1910, and the Vanderbilt cup in 1911, will be in the Elgin classic, and Erwin Bergdoll of Philadelphia will drive a Benz.

J. Alex Sloan, manager of the Case racing stable, has promised to have two Case racers at the tape for the start, and Joe Nikrent and Louis Disbrow are slated to do the driving.

Hughie Hughes is expected to be in the running with his yellow Mercer. The promise of two Stutz cars has been obtained, and it is expected that Barney Oldfield will take to the dirt track and with his partner, Lou Heinman, will be in the race with either a Cino or Benz.

Bob Burman in the Cutting, Harry Grant in a Berkshire, and Lee Fryer, are all expected to enter the races.

Early Bird.

FIRST ENTRY FOR PHOENIX.

Don Lee Puts Cadillac in for Desert Race.

Beaudet Is Slated for the Place at the Wheel.

Bramlett May Also Drive in Great Road Classic.

BY AL G. WADDELL.

Don Lee, California distributor for the Cadillac, took the first Los Angeles-to-Phoenix road race honors when he handed a certified check to John S. Mitchell, official representative of the Maricopa Automobile Club, yesterday afternoon and the Cadillac was declared to be the first car entered for the great road classic.

Although the car entered yesterday, a 1913 Cadillac, has not as yet arrived on the Coast, Lee has seen the new models at the factory and feeling confident of a top-heavy chance for the 1913 car, jumped to the front with his entry fee before the official entry blanks had been printed.

At the meeting last Wednesday, when the ocean-to-ocean highway course was decided upon, George Purdy Bullard announced that although the entry blanks were not out, no one would be denied the privilege of entering, and John S. Mitchell would be glad to take the checks of any entrants at that time.

Those at the meeting did not seem to be very crazy about putting up the money, however, and when the meeting adjourned Mitchell was still holding the empty hat; but Don Lee, who had not attended the meeting, phoned to Mitchell at the Hollenbeck the next day and wanted to know when the entries would be received.

CHECK ARRIVES.

When informed that checks would be accepted although the official blanks were not out, Lee said:

"I am the little fellow to start the ball rolling and will have my check for the entry fee in your hands tomorrow." The next morning the check was there all right, but it was turned down by the president of the Ocean-to-Ocean Highway Association and the entry was not filed.

For a few hours there was a chance some other enthusiast would beat Lee out of the first place on the entry list, but he was at last located and informed that his check was post dated and that his entry fee should either be cash or a certified check.

John S. Mitchell is very particular and while Lee had a good excuse for dating the check 1913, on account of having the 1913 Cadillac on the brain, it could not be accepted and a new slip was called for, which was forthcoming in a great hurry.

Between the 1913 models and the 1915 fair, Don Lee has a very hard time keeping his dates straight, but the car is entered and will be out for the race, although no public announcement has been made regarding the 1913 Cadillac.

BEAUDET TO DRIVE.

T. J. Beaudet, who is now in San Francisco, has been picked by Lee to pilot the car in the race and it is practically assured that William Bramlett, one of the best-known road drivers in the West, will drive his own Cadillac over the desert course.

The California agent is enthusiastic over the coming race, and while he expects to see the Cadillac come in for honors in the upper class, says that he is looking upon the race as a sportsman's affair and will get his share of sport out of seeing his car compete with the other racers. The excitement attending such an event is worth a great deal to a real sport and while Lee is counting on seeing Beaudet drive over the finish line with a good share of the glory, he will not consider it a poor investment if the car fails to come up to the expectation of its backers.

The 1913 car is to be more powerful than previous models and with two such clever road drivers at the wheels as Beaudet and Bramlett the pair of Cadillacs should make wonderful showings.

Bramlett holds the Los Angeles-to-Bakersfield and Fresno records and the Los Angeles to San Diego round-trip record. All these record runs were made in the Cadillac.

Beaudet and Bramlett were both on the car which established the Los Angeles to San Francisco record and Beaudet also holds the Los Angeles-Santa Barbara record and a great number of records in both Northern and Central California, including the San Francisco to Del Monte record.

To Be Nifty.

MANY FEATURES FOR NEW CHALMERS MODELS.

The Western Motor Car Company announced the 1913 Chalmers "Thirty" over a week ago and has been demonstrating the car for several days, but the announcement of the new Chalmers "Six" and the "36" was not made till last Friday morning.

Perhaps the most unusual and most important feature of the announcement is the price of the "Six" which is several hundred dollars lower than reported in early rumors which flooded automobile circles.

The 1913 Chalmers cars have fifteen notable features which should be of interest to every motor car owner regardless of make or model. These [illegible], electric lights throughout, eleven inch upholstery, Turkish cushions, nickel trimmings, flush side doors, improved easy riding springs, [illegible], long stroke motor, improved speedometer, demountable rims, long wheel base, four speeds and reverse, big wheels and tires, dual ignition system and carbureter dash adjustment.

Earl C. Anthony claims that the Turkish cushion is an original Chalmers feature which will add greatly to the easy riding qualities of the car. The deep Chalmers seat with eleven inch upholstery with the Turkish cushion will undoubtedly prove exceedingly popular.

According to the local Chalmers agent, the "36" demonstrator will arrive in the city some time during the week and the "Six" will follow within two weeks or less. The six cylinder car is calculated to create a sensation and Anthony is looking forward to its arrival with great interest.

This model will come in all types from the two passenger roadster to the seven passenger touring car. There will also be limousiness and coupes in both the "36" and the big "Six".

The Ordeal of Handshaking.

[Chicago Inter-Ocean:] Six hundred thousand handshakes were given at Fort Worth, Tex., when 400 converts in recent Baptist revivals were given the hand of Christian fellowship by 1500 church members lined up on a Broadway street. The converts pressed down the line and were given a hearty shake by every one of the army of 1500 and toward the last, according to the converts, the welcoming became almost an ordeal. The unique ceremony lasted an hour and a half. Music was furnished during the handshaking. The battle scarred church members extended in a line three blocks long.

The Laziest Man.

[New York Journal:] Mr. Weeds, after serving a customer with bread, returned to his van.

As he put his basket aboard he noticed a poorly-dressed man standing with one hand on the van wheel.

"What d'ye want?" he asked.

The man made no reply as he held up his hand, disclosing a match.

"What are you going to do?" asked the puzzled baker, slightly alarmed.

The man yawned hard, pulled himself together, and then, with a frightened effort, spoke.

"'Solright," he said, in a tired voice, "I'm only holding this match to your wheel so that when you start it'll strike."

ANTHONY PLANS EASTERN TRIP.

Alarmed Over Scarcity of Packards.

[illegible] that All 1913 Cars Have Been Contracted for Puts Local [illegible] on Mettle—May Have to Go to Factory and Also Negotiate With Agents to Fill Orders.

Earl C. Anthony may find it necessary to make a flying trip to the Packard factory within the next week or [illegible].

With only a small number of his 1913 deliveries made, the 1913 Packard allotment is almost exhausted and Anthony is keeping the wires hot and writing long letters in an endeavor to secure additional cars, and he says that if he does not get assurance within the next ten days that more cars will be shipped to Los Angeles, he will go back to the factory and use every effort to secure more 1913 Packards.

It is reported that the entire 1913 output of the Packard factory has been contracted for, but Anthony has not given up hope and will get into touch with every Packard agent in the country if necessary and make attractive offers to relieve them of all the cars that they can spare.

While the salesroom is not finished, the company is now housed in the new building at Tenth and Hope streets. [illegible] of the establishment are now in commission and the Packard service department in operation and in a position to do better work than ever before.

DE LUXE BODY FOR THE NEW SIMPLEX MODELS.

Arrival of the 1913 Simplex has aroused much interest among motorists. The Simplex is made in three models for 1913: Thirty-eight horse power, fifty, seventy horse power and ninety-horse power. All models are equipped with electric side and tail lights, speedometer, and electric horn. The Simplex is mounted with the latest style de luxe body, which is the vogue in Europe and in the East.

It is noted for its exclusive appearance, harmonious lines, and fourteen-inch upholstering, which makes it a most comfortable body for long tours. The doors are very wide, a feature appreciated by women.

The fifty-horse power and ninety-horse-power models remain practically unchanged. The chains are now made by the Simplex factory and are practically noiseless. The Simplex is very noiseless in operation and has the smoothness and flexibility of a steam engine. The wheel base is optional 127-inch or 137-inch on any model.

The steering post sets real low and with the fourteen-inch upholstering adds greatly to the perfect control and comfort of the driver.

The brakes on the new Simplex are of the most powerful type but they do not jar or slide the wheels.

The thirty-eight-horse-power shaft-drive model has been improved in many minor details, giving it additional power, silence, and reducing the attention it requires to the lowest possible degree. All universal joints are running continually in a bath of oil. Its motor has a bore of 4-7-8, and an unusually long stroke of six and one-half inches, developing eighty-five-horse power and all models are equipped with self-starters.

One of the cleverest feats of the taxi driver is to cut his steering efforts in half by running on car tracks. Unfortunately street car rails are so spaced in many cities as to provide a ready track for automobiles of standard tread, and with the wheels once on the rails, very little work on the part of the chauffeur is required to keep them there. Such treatment obviously results in a decrease of tire life. If the tires were inflated to 70 or 80 pounds' pressure, they would be hard enough to run and remain round in running on the edge of a street car rail. But since most taxicab drivers keep their tires at an average pressure of about 65 pounds, if not less, the casings and tubes adjust their shape to the edges of the rails on which they are traveling, and with the full weight of the car pressing down on the tires, the rail edges act like dull knives, tending to break the portions of the casing fabric which bear against them. It may be safely stated that at least one-fifth of taxicab tire cost is due to the cars being run on the rails of the street car systems.

JOE BERGER SLATED FOR THE "BIG SHOW."

Los Angeles Shortstop Picked as the Best Player Who Has Ever Performed in the Coast League—Chances Are He Will Break Into the Majors and Stick Next Year—Tells Why He Didn't Make Good With Reds.

KEEP your eye on Joe Berger, the crack shortstop of the Los Angeles team.

A bunch of old-timers were "fanning" at the ball park yesterday afternoon, and Berger was the topic of conversation.

"This bird is not only the best shortstop in the league, but he is the best No. 6 man that has ever played on the Coast," said one. "I don't care how far you go back. Name the name, and I will show you that Berger has got it on him."

The Angels certainly landed a prize when "Lim" was obtained from the White Sox. His fielding is one of the best assets that the Angels have, and his share in the winning of games is a large one. Joe covers more ground and accepts and gets away with more hard chances than any other shortstop in the league. And the way he does it makes it look so easy. He is here and there and everywhere and is able to throw accurately from every conceivable position. His unusual ability not only is invaluable to the team, but the men on the mound and in the field, knowing that there is a stone wall about the shortstop berth, have added confidence in themselves and in the team as a whole.

Joe is the center about which everything revolves in the Angels infield and the other players are inspired to equal the pace that he sets.

"THERE" WITH THE WILLOW.

But after you tell about Berger's classy fielding you're only half done. He is running well over .300 in the batting table. Batting averages sometimes do not mean a whole lot, but in Berger's case it's different. He not only hits the ball; he hits it at the right time—which counts. He has a rather bad place—second in batting order and following Howard—but he usually comes through when it is time to start something.

Berger came to the Angels last spring from the White Sox. The local management was unable to purchase him outright. Comiskey reserved an option on him, which must be exercised before this year's drafting season begins. The price is fixed—if the White Six want Berger all they have to do is to send the money to Berry and the Angels will have to give him up. Berger cost the Angels $6000. He was involved in the same trade by which Delhi went to Chicago. Delhi was valued at $5000 and Berry gave Delhi and $1000 for Joe. So it doesn't take much figuring to learn that Joe was valued at $6000.

From the way in which Berger has been working since he came to the Coast, it looks as if he will be back in the "big show" to stay next year. If Comiskey doesn't take him and Berry doesn't sell him to somebody else, it's a cinch that there will be a scramble for him as soon as the drafting season opens. But he will never be drafted—Berry will get a big price for him from somebody.

THE DOMINATING TYPE.

Berger is of the type of ball player that is dominating the national game today. He is a clean, intelligent chap who has adopted baseball as a profession and is ambitious to reach the top of the ladder. Playing baseball is what he is specializing in, and he is trying to improve himself every day. He said yesterday that during the six years he has been playing in organized ball, he has only been unable to play in two contests in which he was expected to play. This is a remarkable record. He has never been injured or sick. Nor has he ever been thrown out of a game for crabbing. Joe has made a study of how to play hard and yet escape being injured. He has exceptional control over his body.

In the spring of 1911, Berger was bought by the Cincinnati Reds, and went south with them on their training trip. But he wasn't retained by the team. He has a good story to tell, which, he says, explains why he isn't in the "big show" today. And it was a bunch of hard luck from start to finish.

A couple of days after striking the training resort, Joe overslept and when he got down to the dining-room of the hotel, the doors were locked. So Joe went out to morning practice on an empty stomach. He was nearly famished when the bunch got back to the hotel at noon. Joe led the rush for the dining-room, but when he got down the corridor a way, two young women jumped up and exclaimed, "Hello, Joe,"

"They were two girls from my home town," says Joe. "I stopped to talk with them and got so interested that before I knew it, I saw the head waiter shutting the doors. The girls continued to talk, and, well—I didn't get any dinner."

THINGS BREAKING WRONG.

So Joe had to go out to afternoon practice without any dinner. Of course, he wasn't in shape to do very much and nobody knew any better than he that he wasn't making a very favorable impression. But he fought it out and swore he would make up the lost ground the next day. When he reached the hotel late in the afternoon he was ready to eat horse meat. He dashed upstairs to change his clothes. Somebody had taken a fancy to his shoes. He couldn't find them. He searched all over the second floor. Nothing doing.

Finally he went downstairs wearing his baseball shoes. The dining-room door was locked. However, he succeeded in getting the head waiter to open up. The "coon" said he would see "if anything was left." He went into the kitchen and came back shortly, saying that he had been able to rake together a little stuff and that he would bring it in a few minutes.

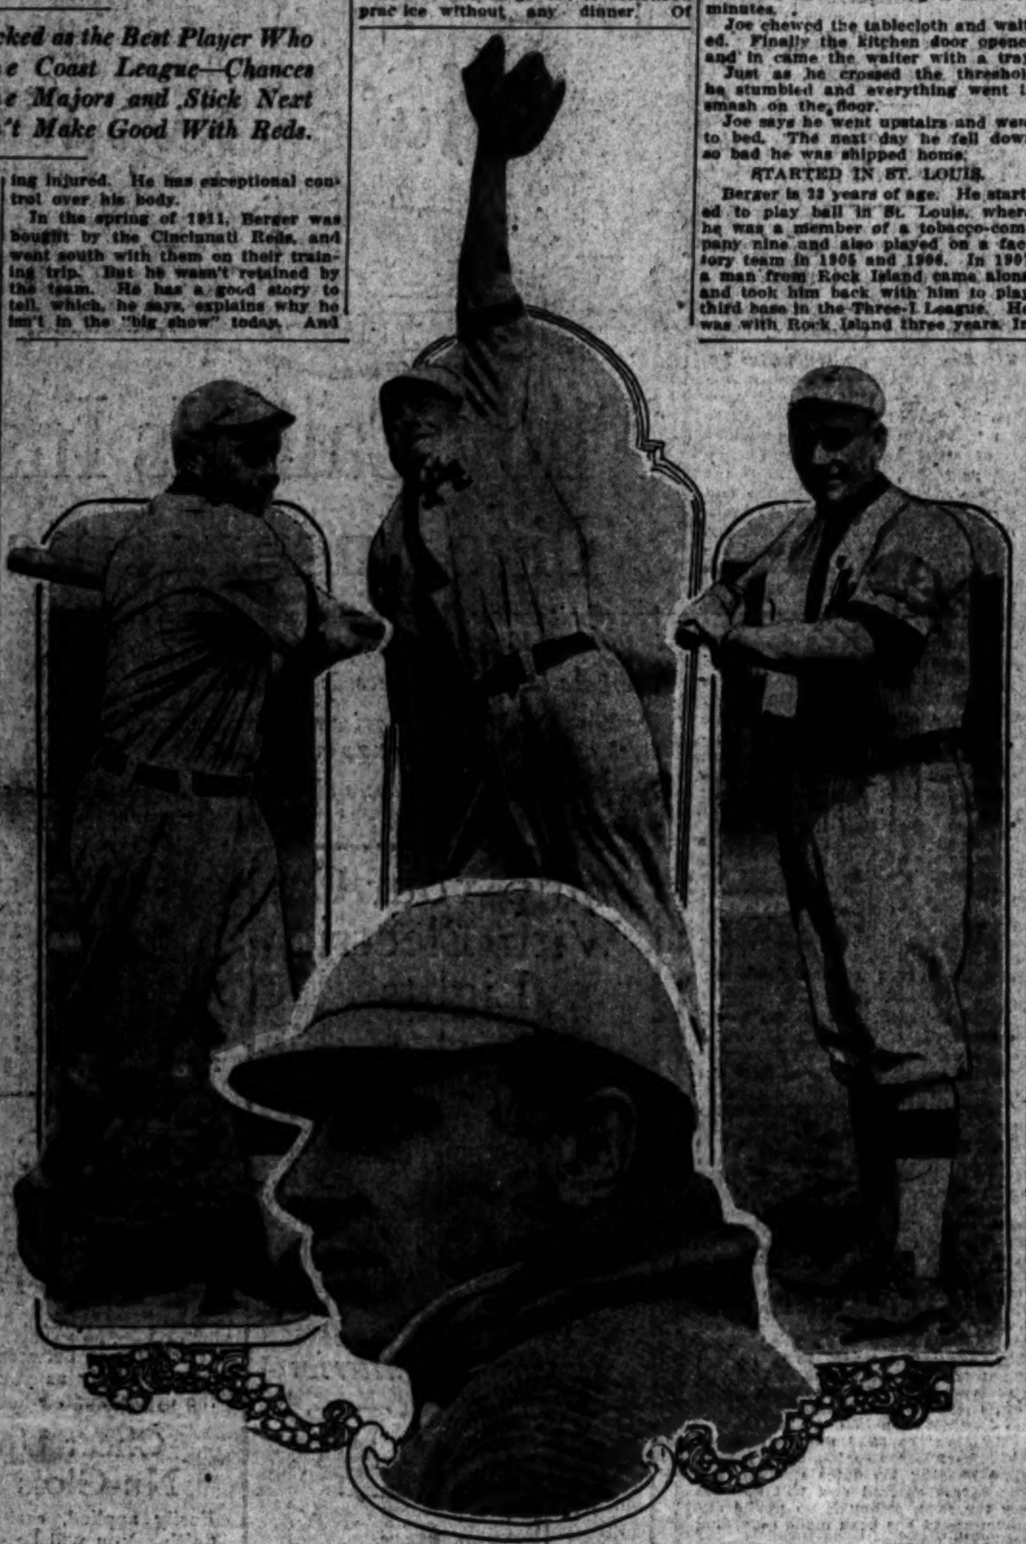
Joe chewed the tablecloth and waited. Finally the kitchen door opened and in came the waiter with a tray. Just as he crossed the threshold he stumbled and everything went to smash on the floor.

Joe says he went upstairs and went to bed. The next day he fell down so bad he was shipped home.

STARTED IN ST. LOUIS.

Berger is 22 years of age. He started to play ball in St. Louis, where he was a member of a tobacco-company nine and also played on a factory team in 1905 and 1906. In 1907 a man from Rock Island came along and took him back with him to play third base in the Three-I League. He was with Rock Island three years. In 1910 he went to Mobile, in the Southern League. He only batted .235 down there, on account of the hot weather, he says. Cincinnati drafted him and he was given a trial in the spring of 1911. The Reds sent him out to Wichita, where he played last year, batting .309 and fielding .925.

He joined the White Sox last spring, but with Weaver doing so well at shortstop, Comiskey had nothing for him, so he was sold to Los Angeles, the White Sox retaining an option to re-purchase him.



Joe Berger, the Angels' Big League Shortstop,

Who pulls off all kinds of fancy stuff in the field, and is "some pumpkins" in wielding the willow. This is Lim's first year in the Coast League, and probably his last—for some time, anyway—as the major league scouts are after him. Keep your eye on this live boy. He is the type of ball player who reaches the top and stays there.

The Ammunition.

MANY BALLS ARE "SWIPED."

How Many Are Used in the Average Coast Game?

Hen Berry Says You Will Not Believe the Truth.

Make a Guess and Then Read What "Boots" Says.

"Scholars, stand up."

"Willie, how many baseballs are used in the average Coast League game at Washington Park?"

"Five."

"Go home."

"Johnnie, how many?"

"Forty."

"Nix."

"Well, how many, teacher?"

"Thirteen!"

Yes, thirteen, and in the average game at Vernon eighteen or nineteen balls are either rendered unfit for further use, lost or "swiped"—principally the latter.

When a ball is knocked over the fence the chances are about seven to one that it is a "goner," that is to say, although anyone who retrieves a ball may enter the grounds and take two others with him—three to a ball—about seven persons out of every eight decide to keep the ball and they make away with it if they can.

"Boots" Weber, who exchanges pasteboards for coin at the ball park, says that the cost of balls is a bigger item in the expense of running a ball team than most people realize—and it is.

WHERE THEY GO.

"Some time ago—before the season was half over—Mr. Berry was figuring out how much we had spent for balls this year and he discovered that we had used seventy dozen—840. He found that we were using thirteen a day at Washington Park and that at Vernon five or six more were among the missing. We are using twice as many this year as we did last season and we can't discover the reason.

"Where do they go? Well, principally into the pockets of the 'kids' outside the grounds. Unless a 'kid' gets hold of a ball early in the game he usually figures that the ball is worth more to him than getting into the grounds with two companions, so he 'beats' it. We have three ground men, one on the outside whose sole occupation is to look after balls that go over the fence and while he gets some of them, there are a big bunch he doesn't get.

"The 'kids' at Vernon are certainly bad ones. When a ball goes over the fence there we kiss it good night. There is no chance in the world to get it. The 'kids' out there seem to be unusually fast in getting away.

"We lose more balls than any other team in the league. At Sacramento they only lose on an average of one ball a game. They have a man on horseback outside the grounds and a fellow on top of the grandstand. As soon as a ball goes over the fellow on the roof signals the mounted guard and he dashes after the ball or the SPARK PLUG M'CLOSKY.

Has a Grouch, Caused by Adverse Criticism of His Opinions on the Baseball Situation. Hen Berry's Peeve.

"WELL, I'm the regular little devil tonight," said "Spark Plug" McClosky, drawing off his gauntlets. "My wagon's been chartered to take some of them paroquettes from the chorus down to the beach; they want to jump in the ocean."

"As a favor to me, jump in after them and drown yourself," said the baseball editor, savagely.

"Spark Plug" sat down suddenly. His astonishment was so great that the tobacco slid in a thin golden stream from the paper he was rolling to the floor. "Well, what d'you think of saucy Clarence?" he said. "Ain't he got an awful disposition? Certainly, Miss Hortense, I'll jump in and drown myself if it would interest you. But, just to show there's no hard feelin', you might tell me why."

"You certainly have queered me out at the baseball park," said the baseball editor. "You and your looney remarks about Dillon. You must think you are Detective Burns detailed on the case. Who cares what you think about Dillon, anyhow?"

"Ain't I the popular little guy, though?" said "Spark Plug," resentfully.

BERRY'S SORE.

"Hen Berry's sore; he won't hardly speak to me," continued the baseball man.

"Hen Berry sore!" ejaculated "Spark Plug," indignantly. "What fer? 'Cause I said he had a championship baseball team?"

"He says you're trying to disrupt the team," said the baseball editor. "He says the players are all sore. They hardly spoke to me today when I went down there on the bench."

"Spark Plug" yanked his feet down from the copy desk and let his chair down on four legs with a bang.

"Well, on the level, can you beat that? Honest, can you BEAT IT?

"Here I am, tellin' all you newspaper wops that the Angels are playing like big leaguers, an' are going to win the pennant, maybe. Then this is what I get back. Gee, but I love this world."

"Spark Plug" slapped his knee moodily with his gauntlets.

"Ain't that the way?" he said. "If I had a lit on their ear and said they was lobsters and bums and bushers, they would a told each other they knew one thing I had forgot to call 'em and they'd been happy all day long. But here I give 'em a boost and this is what they hand me."

EXPECTED LOVING CUP.

"What did you expect?" asked the baseball editor. "Did you think they were going to pin roses on your tires?"

"You know, I was thinkin' that after that big boost I give them Angels that they might want to—y' know." "Spark Plug" hesitated, visibly embarrassed.

"Fact is, I didn't know but what the boys might want to give me one of them lovin' cups after my public statements in their behalf."

"I suppose you were going to accept it with appropriate remarks," snapped the baseball editor.

"Spark Plug" was too far gone to give him more than a reproachful glance. "No," he muttered, "I had m' mind all made up to say: 'No, boys, I only done what I thought was right; I only done what you deserved'—just like that."

THE IRISH-GERMANS.

"That was great stuff you said about the Angels being an Irish team," continued the baseball editor, bitterly. "They are surely a great collection of Irish—Heitmuller, Lober, Metzger, Berger and Chech."

"Sounds like the roll call at a sangerfest—Ja?" said "Spark Plug" with a shadow of a wan smile on his face.

"STOP," SAID "SPARK PLUG."

"Berry says that all the players came to his office and told him they considered Dillon the best minor league manager in America."

"Oh, mercy, Clara," said "Spark Plug."

"And I'll tell you what they said about you," added the baseball editor, witheringly.

"Stop," said "Spark Plug," warningly, "you don't need to tell me about it. This morning I run into a traffic policeman going over a corner and, take it from me, kiddo, I know all about myself. I got a birdseye view of my whole character. He didn't leave nothin' out. All he left me was my girlish laughter."

"Then you take it all back about Dillon?" asked the sporting editor with a grin.

"The rest of what I got to say will be withdrawed from circulation," said "Spark Plug." "Dillon don't seem to be my most popular lecture."

ABOUT BERGER.

"Spark Plug" got up with great dignity, and started for the door. He turned and said, "If Nellie over there will hide his head, I'll tell all you regular fellers what makes that baseball team go like this. It's that long tow-headed Swede, Berger.

"Say, but that Dutchman is THERE," he added, sitting down again. "Berger makes every other shortstop in this league look a strikin' longshoreman. Bert Delmas give the Angels a strangle hold on the fringe of that pennant when he shook 'em to seek new honors in Modesto.

"What I can't figure is how Hen Berry came to pry this bird loose from Charley Comisky. Can you figger a manager having a fielder like Berger on his pay roll and giving him the dinky dink? I ain't heard of Comisky being signed for the dip circuit yet; but this was enough to get him a foolish ticket for life."

"I suppose Berger doesn't make the whole team, does he?" asked the baseball editor.

"No, he don't, Patrice," said "Spark Plug," tartly, "but he is the universal joint of the machine all right. One wise old girl don't make the front row of the merry-merry, either; but, if she's there, the songs get over.

"I used to drive a boat fer a big league baseball manager, and he allus told me that the skeleton of a baseball team is the catcher, short stop and second baseman. And, believe me, the short stop is the backbone of the skeleton. This big rope-haired Swede standing there in the infield like a torpedo netting, grabbin' off everything that comes within an acre of him and shootin' 'em to first like it was a bowling alley, is worth all the captains you could get into the State of Kentucky fer makin' a team git up and scratch the dirt."

"Spark Plug" got up to go. "Goolby, little Sunshine," he said to the baseball editor.

BERRY COMES TO DEFENSE OF CAPT. FRANK DILLON.

BY HENRY BERRY.

IT looks to me very much as though some of the newspapers in this town had made up their minds, for some reason, to force Frank Dillon out of the Los Angeles Ball Club. The injustice of this makes me sore.

It seems pretty rough that after struggling along through three or four hard years to build up the team that Dillon should have the hour of his success spoiled by knockers.

The people who sit up in the grand stand do not always know what goes on inside of a ball team.

Dillon has no instinct for theatricals and is no grand stand player. Therefore his good work does not show to the public. But I am in a position to know the cause of the increased efficiency of the Angels. The cause is Frank Dillon.

Those who complain that he is a quitter should consider whether or not a man who struggles with the disheartening experiences of a losing team and, undismayed and undiscouraged, brings it out a winner, is a quitter.

A Grand Lodge.

[Chicago Inter-Ocean:] William Frank March, the Lawrence banker, who knows or is known to nearly every student who has attended Kansas University during the past twenty years, is also a well-known lodge man. He is Grand Commander of the Knights Templar of Kansas and holds several other titles, present and past, in the Masonic order. He was helping a reporter get a list of the officers and other details of the meeting of the grand commandery in Kansas City, Kan., and laughed when the reporter quizzed why every lodge officer's title was preceded by the word "grand."

"You make me think of my wife," he said. "I left home one night to attend a meeting of the grand commandery in another city. A neighbor woman saw me leaving with my uniform and sword, and asked my wife where I was bound.

"'He's going to some Masonic affair,' she answered. Then the neighbor asked what office I held in the lodge. 'I don't know the name of it,' was the answer, 'but I know it's a grand one.'"

SPORT SLANTS

BY OWEN R. BIRD

Hogan's Good Luck.

Many fans think it is remarkable because the Tigers, with Patterson and Brown out of the game, are still topping the list. One of the belated San Francisco players, who came south in the middle of the week and saw two of the Vernon-Oakland games, has this to say:

"The reason Vernon is still winning is this. Litschi is a better shortstop than Hosp; Hosp is a better first baseman than Patterson and Agnew, is as good, if not better, than Brown behind the bat.

"Hogan's men are playing better ball now than ever before."

The above may not be entirely true; however, it's a cinch that the crippling of the regular players hasn't slowed up the team a bit.

"Bug" in New Role.

Hildebrand, the Coast League umpire, who, with "Cy" Townsend, is officiating in the Los Angeles-San Francisco series, has got the auto "bug," according to those on the inside, and if there is any truth in the report he is playing tricks on the local dealers. One of the players tipped us off yesterday that "Hildy" has been visiting about 'steen different dealers and working them for free rides, in the guise of a prospective customer. Well, maybe he is going to buy one; who knows?

Beats a Tartar.

Hal Braly met defeat in the tennis tourney at Chicago, but before he went down he put a lot of good ones out of the running. From his showing on the Onwentsia courts, he will be a big card in all the tourneys farther East.

* * *

Gabby Street Skidding.

The backsliding of Gabby Street is a surprise to the big crowd of eastern ball fans. When once a ball player starts to go back there is no stopping him. Gabby, after being traded to the New York Americans by the Washington Americans, last spring, was sent to Providence of the International League.

As a Highlander, Street was a rank failure. He may come back from the "bush" at Providence, but you could not get much money on that up in New York.

Cubs Hot After Rixey.

President Charles W. Murphy of the Chicago Nationals has gone to New York to see the Cubs in the next three games, and incidentally make another effort to induce President Fogel of the Philadelphias to part with Pitcher Eppa Rixey, the sensational young collegian who blanked the Cubs in the last series between Philadelphia and Chicago.

"My offer of $10,000 and another pitcher for Rixey, still stands," says Murphy before leaving. "In addition, I will give anybody who will persuade Fogel to sell Rixey an extra $10,000 bonus.

"All we need is one more pitcher of the caliber of Rixey to win the National League pennant. We need a crack left-hander, and Rixey is the best young left-hander in the league, with the possible exception of Marquard. I believe I'd rather have him than 'Rube' in a pinch."

It is believed in Chicago that Murphy will raise the price to $15,000.

* * *

Hard Road Ahead.

Philadelphia Jack O'Brien believes he has at last started his younger brother on the right road to the lightweight championship.

He has secured a match with Leach Cross at the St. Nicholas Club of New York on August 7.

"If we defeat Cross decisively," says Jack, "we will be in a position to demand matches with the best boys in the country."

* * *

Parlez Vous Claim.

La Boxe, the Parisian ring paper, quotes Dan McKetrick to prove that the French bantam Le Deux, "La Petite Sam Langford," is world's champion. Says La Boxe:

"The little Dan gives these excellent reasons:

"Coulon never won his title. He simply took it, and, curiously, there are people who think this enough. Terry McGovern was a veritable champion of the world. After him the authentic holder of the title was Harry Forbes. He lost it in his match with Frankie Neil in San Francisco, and at the National Sporting Club in London Neil handed it to Joe Bowker.

"Bowker was then the genuine champion. Coulon never met him. It is Le Deux who is holding the true bantam championship of the world, because he knocked out Bowker in eight rounds."

Le Deux, who is said to be a wonder at his weight, is coming to America to challenge and fight Coulon.

To Invade France.

Al Lippe, the New York fight promoter, is taking four sparring graduates to Paris. He hopes to bring back a part of the Bourse with Jeff Smith, the Bayonne middleweight; Frankie Burns, the Jersey City bantamweight; Frankie Papke, an amateur lightweight, and his brother, Billy.

The Extremes.

The news of the postponement of the Mt. Baker hill climb on account of a snowstorm must have interested a bunch of people in the East these days. That undoubtedly was the first time a sporting event was ever postponed on account of snow, in this country, at this time of the year.

Raised in a Flat.

HEINIE ZIMMERMAN WAS CORNER LOT PERFORMER.

THE proudest men in the Bronx today are those who can look up from the baseball extras and again regale their young hopefuls with the tales of the time when Heinie Zimmerman was carrying plumbers' tools and earning $2 a day. Every citizen of that sequestered section of New York who can faintly remember the occasion when Heinie repaired a leak in his bathtub today refers to the sensational hitter of the Cubs as one of his boyhood friends.

The old theory that all sturdy men come from the country is knocked into a cocked hat in the case of Heinie Zimmerman. He never lived in the country in his life—doesn't know the difference between a plow horse and a roadster. He was born and brought up in a New York flat, lived like any other city boy, and today has the strongest pair of arms and shoulders in the National League.

Zimmerman is six feet tall in his stocking feet, weighs 180 pounds and never had a day's illness in his life.

"AFTER THE COIN," SAYS ZIM.

"What was your idea in going into baseball?" I asked Heinie in the Cub clubhouse. He looked at me as if stunned at such a question.

"To get the coin, of course," he replied.

"While playing a Sunday game for a semi-pro New York team, Jim Robinson, captain of the Wilkesbarre team, in the New York State League, saw me and told me he would give me $100 a month to go to Wilkesbarre. That looked like easy money and I signed as a pitcher. I was considered a good hitter, and had to substitute for Robinson when he was not playing first base. Soon I got to be a regular infielder. Later they moved me to second base, and that was my job when I was bought by the Cubs."

HIS REAL CHANCE.

Heinie's real chance resulted from the death of Jimmy Doyle, the regular third baseman, who succeeded Harry Steinfeldt. After Doyle's death Chance was badly in need of a third sacker, and decided to take a chance on Zimmerman. Once in a regular job, Zimmerman began tearing the cover off the ball, and today he is a dangerous candidate for the hitting honors of the league.

"Have you saved up any money?" I asked him.

"Sure!" he answered. "And if I add a little more to it this fall something is going to happen that might give you fellows a little note for the paper."

"Who is she?" asked Joe Tinker, who was standing near.

"Never mind who she is," said Heinie, sheepishly. "But she is the finest girl in the world, and if nothin' happen you'll see old Heinie married before Christmas."

THE 'FRISCO METHOD.

"In San Francisco they lose few balls, principally because the management has anybody who tries to swipe a ball 'pinched.' It is likely that we will have to resort to the same thing.

"A good many balls that are batted into the bleachers are never recovered, although we do get the greater number of them. There is one thing in our favor. If a fan tries to pocket a ball, his fellows 'bawl' him out and he is usually jollied into disgorging.

"We seldom get back a ball that drop into the adjoining lumber yard. Who gets them, I don't know."

A bunch of "kids" were spotted from the press box yesterday making away with a ball. A foul went over the grand stand and landed in Washington street, rolling under an automobile. Four boys ran after it. They made a bluff at not knowing exactly where it was and one of them crawled under the auto and lay on the pill, stealthily slipping it into his pocket. He then crawled out, looking as if he hadn't found it. They then continued the mock search, looking under other machines and edging toward Grand avenue. After they had got near the corner they up and hot-footed it out of sight.

CHESS NOTES.

The setangular master's tournament at Budapest, wherein only Schlechter's variation of the queen's gambit declined was played as an opening, resulted in a tie between Marshall and Schlechter, with points each; another tie between Duras and Maroczy with two and one-half each; and a third tie between Teichmann and Vidmar with two each. In view of Schlechter's recent repudiation of P-K4 as an opening because of its alleged drawing tendencies, the scores of this tournament are instructive as a comparison.

Of thirty games played, but six were decisive, the remaining twenty-four being drawn. Marshall and Schlechter each won one and drew four; Duras and Maroczy each won one, lost one, and drew two; Teichmann won none, drawing four, and losing one; Vidmar alone risked decisive finishes, winning two and losing three. These figures indicate that in seeking an opening unproductive of draws, Schlechter has not found a satisfactory substitute for the old reliable P-K4. The appended game demonstrates his own failure to build incisive positions.

Harry Leipsic of Redlands is taking the month's vacation allowed him by the rules of the third Southern California correspondence tournament, and is utilizing a part of the time in cross-board brushes with the San Diegans. Prof. O. T. Johnston of Los Angeles, has returned from his eastern vacation and resumed his games. Scores of points won and lost in the tournament at present stand as follows:

Pearsall, 8-2; Leipsic 6-0; Hart, 6-3; Adams, 5½-2½; Williams, 5½-2½; Frazer, 5½-2½; Hazen, 4½-1½; Johnston, 3-3; Wickersham, 3-3; Schantz, 0-11; Olson, 1-10; Smith, 2-9.

Asher and Ruth are reported on the eve of drawing their game in the finals of the second Southern California correspondence tournament, though the game may run for many moves on its merits. This game disposed of will leave only the five games Dr. Smith against all the section winners to decide the tournament, in which the scores now stand:

Ruth, 3-0; Pearsall, 2½-1½; Asher, 2-1; Hazen, 1½-2½; Smith, 0-0; Woodbury, 0-4.

Games decided in the fourth tournament have been credited as follows:

Pearsall, won three, lost none; Hafford, Ruth and Spooner, Won none, lost one each.

Iron Man's Harness.

Jack Coombs, when pitching, wears as many chains, straps and trappings as the Empress Josephine on the day she and Napoleon were crowned, one differences being that Josie's gewgaws were in full view of the populace, while Jack's are concealed. Jack has to be hitched in this way to prevent further injury.

FORE!

BY ALMA WHITAKER

"I tell you I won't be called Baby Dimple. I won't, I won't, I won't," cried the Cherub indignantly. "How dare you call me Baby Dimple?"

And I trembled as his five-little-pigs-went-to-market stamped imperiously on the floor, the while the building tottered in alarm.

Wherefore we will satisfy ourselves by remarking what a sad little affair that was in which Dashing Frank was so hopelessly dashed by Lord Edward Tufts. Just fancy F. H. Edwards being eclipsed at his own bad naughty stunts.

After the tie, most of the party repaired to the pavilion in the evening for dancing and it was observed by a shocked assembly that Dashing Frank drew his fingers ominously across his neck in a menacing attitude every time he came within sight of Lord Tufts. The latter was observed to be wearing one of those large inscrutable smiles that boded ill for the morrow.

In the play-off Dashing Frank declined to bet. Said he hated to take money from the pocket of a Baby D.—of course, I mean from his opponent. So after that what could the hero do? He just rolled the balls in and at the last two holes calmly asserted his intention of doing both leisurely in five, since to try for less might spell disaster, and anyway, he was not crowded. Dashing Frank's defeat will go down to history, and Lord Tufts stands forth a veritable St. George.

Two New Stars.

E. H. Wilkes of San Gabriel has also been showing off and his win of the qualifying round with 39 and 36 was a very fine score.

And then there is Glittering Jack's achievement in making a new record at Annandale—his 70 is certainly something to be proud of, especially as J. V. Eliot had become associated more intimately with placer mines than golf during the past few weeks.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Eliot will go to Del Monte—in fact it looks as if Monterey is to be the hub of the universe in September.

The whole of the forty-two competitors in last week's tournament have sent off their bookings en bloc, and this is but a handful of the golfers who are going from local country clubs.

Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Armstrong are due to arrive at Del Monte next week and will remain until the end of September. The champion triplet should be feeling as if Del Monte is almost his own private course by the time the tournament date arrives.

The Two Champions.

There are, by the way, two Coast champions at present. Mr. Neville of San Francisco is the recognized holder of the title—by the North. E. S. Armstrong is the recognized holder of the title—by the South. This state of affairs was the outcome of the championship meeting being held up North where few southerners were able to compete, so the latter considered the Del Monte meeting the Coast championship in much the same manner as the professionals of Germany call Baden-Baden the championship affair.

This year all doubts will be set at rest, all unkind feelings abolished—little birds will in their nest agree. For Del Monte is a nice half-way course, easy of access to both north and south, and everyone is satisfied.

The Team Matches.

One of the most interesting items on the programme is the team matches, both for men and women, from both the north and south, to be held during the second week of the tournament, September 17, 18 and 19. On these days competitors in the Pacific Coast championship event are only called upon to play eighteen holes, so they will have plenty of time for the team matches. The management has put up two very handsome trophies, which must be won by the same club three times for permanent possession. These North vs. South team matches will therefore become an annual event and are likely to meet with plenty of support.

Mr. Hunt's Little Lark.

The recent tournament called for new handicaps and Capt. Goodall, F. D. Browning and R. H. Ingram were constituted Handicap Committee. Seemed simple enough. All we had to do was have a medal round and fix the handicaps on that. Goodness me! what a lot of poor players we were to be sure! Mr. Hunt hovered near the hundreds on one side or the other, I know, so, of course, they had to give the poor man 18 handicap. In the tournament they played on half club handicap so our friend started with the comfortable allowance of 9. (He gets 5 at home, but he made no moan!) Then he came in artlessly with 37 for the first round and 42 for the next—net 70—and they do say he has not stopped laughing yet. Never mind, Lord Tufts's score of 72 net was honest as the day, for he had but two strokes handicap to help him through. They do say he wears that gold medal around his neck night and day.

The Midwick Country Club.

Things are beginning to get interesting out Romona way and there is hopeful talk that the new course will be ready for play this winter. It seems too good to be true—so far the only thing that has actually been accomplished is the piping of the course.

It will be a 6332 yards course, No. 5 the longest hole with 550 yards, and No. 16 next with 500 yards.

By the way, what has become of the Altadena Country Club that opened with such a fine flourish? It gave him much promise and this winter should see it in full swing if only we get our legitimate portion of rains. There is plenty of room for good new country clubs, most of the established ones have their complete membership, vacancies through deaths and removals being the only hope of entry.

The National Championship.

The date draws near for the national amateur championship to be held at Chicago, September 2 to 7, for which Harold Hilton will come over to defend his title. It does not exactly clash with the Del Monte meeting, as the first week at Del Monte is a purely local affair, and the Coast championship event does not commence until September 14. That leaves ample time for men like McLaughlin of Denver to get here in time if they are patronizing both events.

Golf Debutantes.

Three young and very charming maidens have been taking golf lessons lately, and will be most decorative and popular additions to the ranks of lady golfers. Miss Marjorie Tufts, Miss Lucile Ballard and Miss Louise Hunt teased their fond male parents into initiating them into the mysteries over at Catalina, with excellent results.

FAMOUS COME-BACKS.

It is proving a great year for the comeback in baseball, and among the most prominent is our own Bill Shipke, who is now filling the place of utility man on the Omaha team, and playing as great ball as at any time in his brilliant career.

A lot of veterans who were thought to have had their day, and a number of players or managers who had actually adopted other lines of activity than those at which they made their reputations are back strongly in the game, and are making the biggest kind of successes.

Perhaps the most important of the comebacks may be said to be Jake Stahl, first baseman and manager of the Boston-Americans, now leading the American League race.

Year before last Stahl announced his intention of giving up baseball, and made good his threat by taking a place in a bank. The lure of the game proved too strong for him, and after being out of it during all the season of 1911, he is back one more with the Boston-Americans, and is not only playing a fine game himself, but is directing the team with such generalship that it has been converted from a negligible factor into a well-rounded combination that is giving the world's champion athletic club all that it can do to catch up.

The New York roster includes two come-backs, one an outfielder, the other an infielder.

Another American League manager, Clarke Griffith, can be classed as a comeback, for he is getting out of down-trodden Washington the first baseball speed ever showed. On the recent trip West, Washington accomplished the notable feat of winning sixteen games in a row, a record for work on the road. Winning the first game on the home grounds, Washington's total of straight victories was brought to seventeen.

Not since 1904, when New York lost the pennant on the last day of the season in a double-header with Boston, has Griffith shown a pace like this. He had several unsuccessful years with the New York-Americans and at last quit the team after leading it into the cellar.

His failure with the Cincinnati Nationals further affected his fame, and no very confident predictions were built on Washington's hopes after he assumed the managership. But Griffith has astounded all the critics.

Pittsburgh has a come-back in Mike Donlin, who has been keeping a place close to the top in the National League batting averages, a demonstration that he can still clout the ball as in the days when he was the best hitter in the National League. This is not the first time Donlin has come back, for in 1907 he was out for a whole season, returning to the Giants in 1908 as good as ever.

The above illustration shows a Columbus Electric Colonial type coupe at the summit of Lookout Mountain.

To the Summit of Lookout Mountain in a Columbus Electric

—an easy trip for a Columbus—but this particular car was driven to the summit by a recent lady purchaser the second time she had ever driven her car alone.

The same car, in the hands of a new driver, is running from 90 to 100 miles every time it is charged.

It is the latest model Colonial type Columbus Electric Coupe and sells for $2500.

Compare it with Colonial types of other electric machines selling for $300 to $900 higher in price.

We say, with knowledge whereof we speak, that this car is absolutely the best electric car value in Los Angeles.

We carry the largest stock of electrics in Los Angeles, and regardless of price, we offer, the best electric that money can buy—the "Columbus."

We are better equipped to take care of our customers than any other dealer in Los Angeles, and if you will visit the Society Garage you will verify this statement.

Don't you know, Mr. Buyer, that it is some satisfaction to deal with a firm where every one from the President of the Company to the sweeper will get out of bed in the middle of the night to look after your smallest requirements, as quickly as to sell you a complete car?

Further, don't you know that it is some satisfaction to buy a car when you know that, no difference what may happen, that the parts are all carried in stock in Los Angeles?

Did you ever stop to consider that there is only one car sold in Los Angeles, THE AUBURN, where the agents have a complete factory equipment for the purpose of giving you the service you desire?

You must not lose sight of the fact that every Auburn car, all models, are propelled by a Rutenber motor, conceded by every one to be the equal of any motor in the highest priced cars in America. The Start of the Pratt "Forty's" Economy Run.

J. L. Von Blon, city editor of The Times, sealing the gas tank preparatory to the start for Santa Barbara, where the city editor of the Morning Press broke the seal and measured the gasoline. R. C. Fike, local agent for the Pratt "Forty," who drove the car, is on the front seat. H. M. Singleton, also of the Pratt agency, and "Bill" Cornett, a well-known member of local sporting circles, are in the tonneau.

Economy.

PRATT "FORTY" ON ANOTHER.

This Time to Santa Barbara on Little Gasoline.

Fike and Singleton Do the Driving at Night.

Bill Cornett Goes Along and Gets Left.

R. C. Fike and Harry Singleton of the Pratt Motor Car Company, accompanied by William Cornett, of sporting goods fame, and H. A. Gill of this city, made a record run to Santa Barbara in a Pratt "Forty" last week.

There will be no warrants issued for members of the party by officials along the way, however, as the speed limits were not molested at any time during the journey and the test made was for economy in gasoline consumption only.

An average of 20.5 miles to the gallon was made for the entire distance of the round trip from this city, a distance of 249.5 miles. This is a creditable showing, to say the least, as the roads to Santa Barbara are not in the best of condition and the grades are a trying test alone.

TANK IS SEALED.

The start of the run was made from First and Broadway, where the city editor of The Times filled and sealed the gasoline tank. This seal was not broken till Santa Barbara was reached. There the editor of The Press opened the tank and measured the gasoline. It was reported that on the run of 116.4 miles, an average of over twenty-two miles to the gallon had been made.

Without taking on additional gasoline, the tank was again sealed and not opened until the Pratt arrived in Los Angeles.

A different route was followed on the return trip and a side trip was made through the farming country below Ventura. As it was very dark in the canyons, the wrong road was taken once and a few miles had been covered in the wrong direction, before Fike realized that he was out of his way.

Altogether, this traveling added almost twenty miles to the total and brought the distance for the round trip up to within a fraction of 250 miles.

It was almost 4 o'clock when the party in the Pratt turned out Sunset boulevard. The engine was running perfectly and by dark Calabasas had been left far behind.

AN OLD-TIMER.

Cornett, who is a pioneer of Southern California, kept Fike and Singleton, who alternated at the wheel, informed on the roads and explained every turn, pointed out every landmark and gave the history of every ranch that was passed with the energy of a sight-seeing guide.

No stop was made at Ventura and the lunch which Fike had been thoughtful enough to bring, was missing before the Casitas was reached. Hunger was making the members of the party peevish and an attack on the first orchard seen, was being planned when the road came to a sudden stop, right in the wildest section of the Casitas.

The neatest kind of an obstruction had been placed across the road. The theory was advanced that it might be a hold-up game of some sort and it was thought that the road might have been washed out beyond.

After much consultation, Singleton and Cornett investigated and found that an oak tree, perched well up on the mountain side, had torn itself away from the loose earth and dropped to the road below, blocking the pass. It required must exertion on the part of Fike and Cornett, but the heavy trunk was finally pushed to one side and the Pratt continued on.

NOT BOILING.

Just once during the climb, had Fike, who was driving at that time, been compelled to fall back into the low. The car went up in elegant style and at the summit was not even hot.

It was a hard matter to make the guests believe that the water was not boiling and "Bill" Cornett had to get out of the car and see for himself. After that long climb, there was no place on the hood, where it was too hot for the hands to rest.

While in Santa Barbara, the Pratt "Forty" was driven around town as the members of the party were anxious to see the sights. Cornett had some friends in the city whom he was anxious to see and left the car.

Eight o'clock Wednesday night was the time set for the start of the return journey and the place of meeting was decided upon, but when 8 o'clock came around, there was no "Bill" Cornett. After a wait of an hour the car made a tour of the city streets in quest of the lost one, but to no avail and the Pratt left Bill on his uppers.

A misunderstanding was the cause of the trouble and while Cornett was patiently waiting at one place, the car was making fast time in the direction of Los Angeles.

Thursday morning Cornett came in on the train and it required a strong line of talk on the part of the other passengers on the Pratt to convince him that it was not a put-up job, to give him the slip and leave him there.

While 20.5 miles to a gallon is good, R. C. Fiske is not satisfied and is planning another run on which he claims that the Pratt will get an average of twenty-three miles out of every gallon of gasoline.

No special preparations were made for the run and the car used was a stock model Pratt "Forty," taken off the floor of the Grand-avenue salesroom less than an hour before the start.

"Ee-Yah."

IS JOHNSON DRIVING HUGHIE JENNINGS OUT?

THE more or less brilliant career of Hughie Jennings, with the once terrible Detroit Tigers, furnishes a fitting illustration of the vicissitudes of fickle fandom as well as the fleeting breath of fame. The man who for three years—while he delivered American league pennants to the City of Straits—was hailed universally as one of baseball's greatest managers and idolized by the supporters of the Royal Bengals appears in line for Byron Bancroft Johnson's official guillotine. In other words, Hugh Jennings is slated to pass out of the young major organization if reports from the West are to be credited.

Jennings is in very bad favor with Frank Navin, president of the Detroit club, and the whole American League in general. He is blamed for the unprecedented strike of the rank and file of the Felines following the indefinite suspension of Ty Cobb for striking and assaulting a spectator at the Hilltop grounds in Gotham during Detroit's first visit of the year there.

TOOK NO ACTIVE PART.

Hugh Jennings took no active part in the rebellion; indeed, at least to those on the outside, he gave every evidence of loyality to the league and his employers. If he was in with the athletes as most American League magnates insinuate, then indeed is Hugh an adroit cuss whose diplomacy should be commended highly rather than frowned upon. Of itself, the baseball strike of Detroit was but a sputter and the malcontents were forced to swallow a bitter dose. Yet it is the future rather than the past, over which the moguls are apprehensive. Following fast upon the heels of Tiger insubordination, have been instances of individual treason, most recently, that of Hub Perdue, of the Boston Nationals. When this great pitcher tore up his uniform and declared he would never again play for the City of Culture so long as Johnny Kling remained at the head of the Braves, he but reechoed the general sentiment of his fraternity that it is due time for the profession to strike for certain due rights heretofore denied.

TO BE MADE GOAT.

Wherefore the American League has found a seasonable excuse of open blame to Jennings. He is to be made the "goat." And if Ban Johnson had his way, Hughie would doubtless be driven out to the barren wastes beyond the pale of organization. Certain it is, that the big Pooh-Bah of the American League has been lying in wait for Hughie's scalp ever since the world's series of 1911.

Ban Johnson converted his henchmen to the belief that Jennings was guilty of heresy against the circuit he served because Hugh had the nerve to express an opinion that the Giants had a chance to take the measure of the Athletics. Doubtless the wish was father to the thought and the subsequent utterance. For Hugh is a bosom friend of John McGraw while a vowed enemy of Cornelius McGillicuddy. Some American League "progressives" went so far as to charge the fiery thatched leader of the Jungaleers with treason. They said he tipped off McGraw to the weakness of the Athletics. Personally I believe such an assertion a bald-faced lie. And it would go if the humblest player rather than a man of Jennings's proved integrity were under suspicion. For, in the belief of the writer, baseball is honest and straight, simply because the players are above treachery. In all the history of national commission, not once has an instance been recorded where an athlete even fibbed. And in the history of the squabbles, turmoil and strife which has characterized government and organization, few indeed are the occasions when some magnate has not bid or resorted to trickery.

NATIONALS WOULD WANT HIM.

But, getting back to Hugh Jennings. He is to be congratulated if he gets out of the American League. There is plenty of room for him in the National and it is not likely that Tom Lynch will stand in his way. Johnson drove George Stallings out of New York after the "Big Chief" had built a joke tail-ender into a real contender. The joke baseball that has characterized the local American League pastime ever since proves conclusively that B. B. Johnson is no oracle. Lynch has said that Stallings is welcome to put his feet under the National League table any time he so desires.

And so may Jennings, you may be sure. He is one of the greatest drawing cards in organized baseball today. More New Yorkers go to see him coach than to see Tyrus Cobb play. To question his ability as a manager is ludicrous. Didn't he win three pennants in a row with a club that was a hopeless second-division proposition when he assumed control? He would undoubtedly have beaten the Athletics last year had not Gainor been put out by a broken wrist when the Tiger were spread-eagling the field. And he would have done it with a team far, far inferior, to the Athletics in playing strength.

NAVIN IS CRITICAL.

Frank Navin is quoted as saying that Hugh Jennings had no qualifications for leadership except the personality to maintain harmony and fellowship that develop full playing power. This personality, Navin further infers, has been lost and as a consequence the grand machine to which Jennings fell heir through the creative genius of Mr. Navin and Bill Armour has consequently fallen into bad days. Mayhap Mr. Navin does not look upon his kindly ministrations as pure case of handicapping his manager through direct interference. One does not have to go as far as Detroit to lay his finger on similar conditions when American League franchises are discussed.

To a man up a tree such a winning personality as that of Jennings must cover a multitude of sins. After all, it seems about three-quarters of genius. Hugh Jennings will have no difficulty finding a berth if the National League asks waivers on him. That goes whether or not there is truth in the report that Hugh is to succeed Johnny Kling as leader of the Boston Nationals. Surely Navin's reported antagonism toward Hugh seems the height of ingratitude toward a man who, no matter what his faults, has done wonders both for Detroit and the American League. No matter where he may go, Hugh Jennings will carry the respect, esteem and good will of the sport lovers of the limited States, Frank Navin, Ban Johnson and the whole caboodle of American League club owners, notwithstanding.—[Oregon Journal.

BREEZES FROM A FAN.

CARELESSNESS is losing a great many games for San Francisco which might be won. The Seals often make enough runs to win, but their slip-shod manner of playing the game in the field throws runs to the opponents. What the team really needs is the cleaning-out of some of the old timers. Trade them for other men and a change will come over the club.

Carlisle has developed into a way-from-home star. On the present trip of the Tigers, he has been playing phenomenal ball. "Home-run Carlisle" has become a part of the score almost daily and a majority of these homers have been at opportune times. Two and three hits a day have been the rule. Keep it up, Walter, and roll over as many times as you like.

One of the peculiar features of the games in San Francisco is to hear the fans rooting for Hogan. That old feeling of San Francisco people against Oakland has never disappeared and all last week the bulk of the rooters were with Vernon.

Another free-swinger and fence-buster has come to the Coast. Del Howard, the Seal's new giant, looks like Roy Brashear and while he hits from the left side, he takes a good healthy wallop, and when he lands the ball sings.

It is to be regretted that the league lost Umpire McGreevey. He knew his business and seemed to handle the players better than any of the other "umps." He made the men tend to their knitting, but at the same time did not earn their dislike.

This is the season when the wise manager begins to scout for the youngsters. The scouts are watching the semi-professional teams and the bush leagues. Both Hogan and Berry have been on the job and if conditions permit, a few youngsters may be tried out during the last of the season.

Some excitement if the Tigers and Angels fight it out here for that pennant and it certainly looks as if that will be the outcome. With the fire-eating Vernon rooters lined up along side of more conservative Angel element, it will be a wise idea to call out the militia. It is also suggested that those Klaxon horn fiends be placed in the guardhouse before the fight starts.

Excepting our own little squabble for the leadership the most interesting thing in baseball today is the bid Washington is making the American League. Boston is holding to the lead, but the Senators are sticking to it in a manner that demonstrates that they are in the fight to the finish. Either a Boston or Washington victory will be a boom to baseball in the East.

A double defeat today for Oakland would just about finish the Commuters. Here's hoping. Hap.

This has been a peculiar year in the Coast League. Not one star has been developed. No pitcher or infielder or outfielder stands out as the find of the year. Berger has been a sensation at short, but he was not one of those wonders who sometimes bob up from nowhere.

Wicked Wastes in Tires

Costs That None Need Pay

Every rim-cut tire is a needless waste. There are tires that never rim-cut.

Every blow-out due to overloading can be saved by proper oversize.

The most popular tires in the world today are No-Rim-Cut tires, 10 per cent oversize.

They end rim-cutting, and avoid overloading. These patent tires have for legions of users cut tire bills right in two.

Used on 200,000 Cars

No-Rim-Cut tires are not an experiment. Over 1,250,000 have been used on some 200,000 cars.

They are the final result of 13 years spent on Goodyear tires.

Now they far outsell any other tire made. Our monthly output is about 100,000.

The Savings

The No-Rim-Cut feature saves an average of 23 per cent on tires. For statistics show that 23 per cent of all ruined clincher tires are rim-cut.

10 per cent oversize, under average conditions, adds 25 per cent to the tire mileage.

You get both these savings in No-Rim-Cut tires.

Patent Tires

We control by patents the only way to make a practical tire that can't rim-cut. That is why the demand for this new type centers on Goodyear No-Rim-Cut tires.

That demand has become overwhelming. It doubles every eight months. You are bound to join these hosts of users when you once prove out these tires.

Our 1912 Tire Book—based on 13 years of tire making—is filled with facts you should know. Ask us to mail it to you.

DeWitt Van Court's Great Fight Series—Number Two.

Van's Reminiscences.

HEN I SECONDED JEFF AGAINST SAILOR SHARKYE

De Witt Van Court Tells the Inside Story of the First Fight Between Jim Jeffries and Tom Sharkey. Big Jim Was a Wonderful Man in His Training Methods.

BY DE WITT VAN COURT.

This is the second of a series of memoirs by De Witt Van Court, who has taught some of the world's greatest fighters to box.

This will be followed by the inside stories of some of the other great fights he has witnessed from the inside.

The first Jeffries-Sharkey fight was [illegible] one for both men.

[illegible] trained at the Reliance [illegible] Oakland and Sharkey in San [illegible]. Sharkey was trained by [illegible] and Spider Kelly, two [illegible] cleverest men in the game. [illegible] handled by Billy Delaney [illegible] by myself, and had his [illegible] Jack and Jack Stelzner as [illegible] partners. This was the most [illegible] match that Jeffries had [illegible] to that time, and it proved one [illegible] hardest he ever engaged in. [illegible] time Jim had a lot of [illegible] his legs that was a handicap [illegible], so we got a pair of un[illegible] made of blanket cloth [illegible] and that and the sweaters [illegible] were weighed thirty [illegible].

[illegible] the most wonderful fellow [illegible] that I had ever seen at [illegible]. It was the usual thing [illegible] travel over the roads with [illegible] following and pacing [illegible] a bicycle. I saw him on [illegible] run 100 yards with [illegible] clothes on in 11s.

[illegible] something terrible with his [illegible] partners. Both Jack and [illegible] were put out of commission [illegible] training, and on one occasion [illegible] gave his brother Jack two [illegible] in one day. But [illegible] fight him all the time.

[illegible] was not stuck on fighting [illegible] time and his manager, [illegible] and Alex Greggains, [illegible] running the club, had an [illegible] to get Tom to consent to [illegible]. It was rumored at that [illegible] the only way they got him [illegible] fight was to tell him that [illegible] fixed for him to win.

[illegible] entered the ring in per[illegible]. Sharkey weighed [illegible] and Jeff 225 stripped. I [illegible] more perfect men in [illegible] at the same time.

[illegible] in his early days was al[illegible] cautious fellow and had not [illegible] confidence in himself. This [illegible] for Jim by Delaney, [illegible] believed in taking a [illegible]. I had many arguments with [illegible] this score.

[illegible] that as Jeffries was so [illegible] and stronger than any [illegible] ring, and could take so [illegible] punishment without it [illegible] that he could afford to [illegible] kinds of chances. But this [illegible] would not agree to. I also [illegible] to fight as he boxed in [illegible]. He would drop Jack [illegible] without half trying and [illegible] hardest thing to convince [illegible] they were not faking those [illegible] to get out of their work.

[illegible] who was always a sus[illegible], could not have had any [illegible] to handle him than Kelly [illegible]. Tom was as much a [illegible] as Jeff, so it made it easy [illegible] both in shape.

[illegible] a lot of interest taken [illegible] and a big crowd was on [illegible] at Mechanics Pavilion in [illegible]. But at the last min[illegible] nearly became declared [illegible] house was full.

[illegible] the first preliminary be[illegible] Baker and Jack Stelzner [illegible], a whole section of the [illegible]. This nearly caused a panic, [illegible] it was found that no one [illegible] hurt, the captain of police allowed them to go on with the show.

Jack Jeffries and myself were seconds to Stelzner and just after we entered the rng. the other section fell. If we had been a minute later, we might have been killed, as we had just passed under them. This caused another long delay, but after the preliminary was over Jeffries and Sharkey entered.

I walked over to Sharkey's corner, as the usual custom is to watch the tieing on of his gloves.

This was evidently a new thing to Tom, and he gave me several savage looks and finally said to Spider Kelly: "What the hell does he want over in our corner."

"Oh," said Kelly, "he is watching us tie the gloves on you."

"What the hell are you talking about, does he think that I am going to put a chunk of iron in them?" It is needless to say that I beat it back to our corner as soon as possible.

* * *

The fight itself was almost each round a repetition of the other, with the exception of the last five.

It was a pretty even thing up to that time.

Sharkey was, as usual, the aggressor from the start. He would rush at Jeff and swing both hands at his face, with an occasional right and left to the body.

Jim would meet him with solid counters on the face, but they seemed to have little effect on him.

Once in a while he would land an extra hard one that would stagger Tom, but he was always right back for more, and fighting every inch of the way.

Sharkey, being the smaller man, naturally had the sympathy of the house and many were pulling for him to win.

In the second round Jeff caught him a punch that nearly turned him around, and some of the fans in the gallery hollered for him to be careful.

Sharkey stopped fighting, took a couple of steps back, looked up into the gallery, held his hand up to the crowd and hollered back to them, "It's all right byes, it's all right," and started fighting again.

There was very little clinching during the whole fight. It was rush and hit all along, and very fast for big fellows.

Tom was a very fast fellow on his feet, but not so clever with his hands, but was always a dangerous fellow.

After every second round, I offered Jeffries a drink of water and he refused every time and never drank a drop during the whole twenty rounds. This was the first and only time I ever saw a fighter go such a distance without taking anything to drink. This proved the perfect condition his stomach was in.

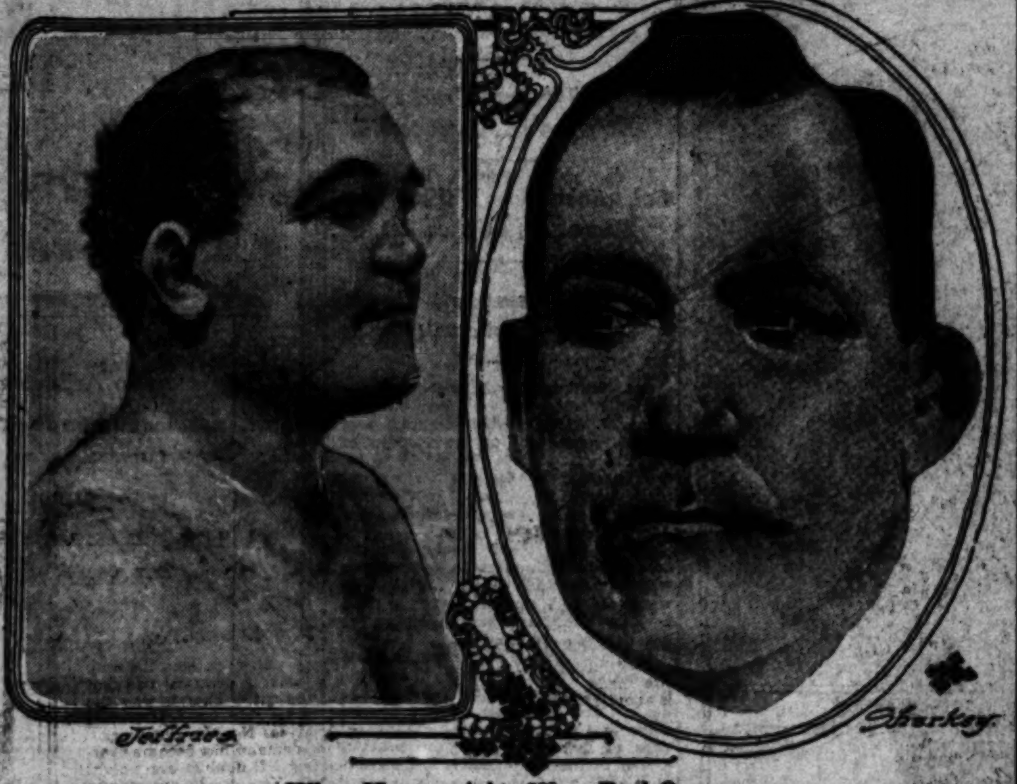
At the end of the fifteenth round it looked like an even thing to me and I felt afraid that the sympathy of the crowd would have some affect with Alex Greggians, the referee, so jumped in and gave Jeff a pretty stiff talk about waiting so long.

I had been arguing with Delaney for several rounds before about Jim's waiting so long and he finally consented to my way of doing. I then advised Jim to play as strong for Tom's ribs as he could for the remainder of the fight, he did so and come very near stopping Tom in several rounds.

It was a hard, clean, and tough fight for both and one that will be remembered by all who saw it.

The second one at Coney Island was almost like the first, only Jeffries played for Sharkey's body from the start and Tom was never the same man since.

This fellow Sharkey was as tough a proposition as I have ever seen in the ring and would make many of these heavyweights take to the woods if he was fighting today as good as then.



When Heavyweights Were Real Ones.

YACHTSMEN TO HAVE BIG TIME AT SANTA BARBARA.

BY PAUL JEFFERS.

THE YACHT RACE to Santa Barbara, which is to start from the end of theb reakwater at noon August 10, will begin the foremost yacht racing regatta held in Southern California waters. The cup for this race is offered by the commodore of the S.C.Y.C. The rest of the races will be held at Santa Barbara and the prizes are offered by the Santa Barbara Yacht Club.

The Santa Barbara regatta is held yearly. This regatta is so popular among local yachtsmen that as a rule there are more local boats entered than in any local race.

The yachts that leave the breakwater, a week from Saturday will arrive at Santa Barbara some time during Sunday afternoon or evening. Monday morning at 11 o'clock a swimming race will be held, open to any amateurs, for prizes offered by the yacht club. Monday evening at 8 o'clock a reception to the visiting yachtsmen will be held at Hotel Potter. This reception as a rule is a resailing of the race up. The skipper who has been fortunate enough to win tells how he did it and the rest tell why they didn't.

Tuesday morning there is to be a race for speed launches, which promises to be better this year than ever before, as San Diego will probably be represented by the Eclipse, owned by Z. E. Callahan. Tuesday afternoon the race for the Santa Barbara Club perpetual challenge cup will be held. This cup is the most beautiful prize offered during the regatta. It stands about twenty inches high. This cup is never allowed to leave Santa Barbara, but the winner is given a heavy gold medal to show that he has won it. The second and third prizes are medals suitable for watch fobs. This race is open to boats of all classes.

Wednesday afternoon will see the class races. Three prizes are usually offered for this race, one for the class N and P sloops, one for the class Q and R sloops, and one for the yawls.

Thursday afternoon the arbitrary handicap race will be held. In the races held on the preceeding days the boats are handicapped according to their rating under the universal rule. For this race the handicaps will be determined by the performanc of the boats in the other races. This gives everybody a chance to win, especially anyone who has had hard luck in the other races. The first prize for this race is a large perpetual cup and for the past two years has been won by Warren Wood in the Mischief I. Second and third prizes will be offered for this race.

Friday morning there will be rowing races and in the afternoon the visitors will be taken in automobiles to Miramar, where they will be entertained with a smoker and band concert. Friday evening the prizes will be presented in the lobby of Hotel Potter. After the presentation of prizes, the yachtsmen will adjourn either to the ball-room or to the lower floor where, the prize cups are filled and emptied.

The people of Santa Barbara are very enthusiastic about this event and are very generous in giving their automobiles for the use of the entertainment committee.

Last year two San Francisco boats were at Santa Barbara during the regatta and their crews were so pleased with the way they were treated that more northern boats are expected this year.

Boats representing the S.C.Y.C. and Sunset yacht clubs will be entered so that quite a large number of boats is expected.

LYNCH SAYS MERKLE IS WONDERFUL PLAYER.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, July 13.—A strange world, indeed, this little sphere of ours, and stranger still that portion of its inhabitants which ramps and raves six months of the year over our national pastime. Say one cold, cruel word against "Rube" Marquard to any citizen of Manhattan or environs and then get ready for a punch in the eye. Whisper a scandal against the fair name of Fred Merkle if you are contemplating suicide. Yet a brief spell back, the enthusiasts who now worship at the shrine of this grand pair were denying them with oaths and curses.

We will deal just now with Merkle's case. Marquard has been exploited heretofore; anyhow, his wonderful record this spring is praise enough in itself. Marquard was a failure for two seasons simply because during that time he had lost confidence in his ability. It was never a cuestion of class with him. He always packed the goods; he couldn't deliver them, that was all. But with Merkle—ah, how different. Here is a tribute paid him recently by Tom Lynch, president of the National League.

"Merkle," said Lynch, "I consider one of the most wonderfull men that ever broke into baseball. He is a man in every sense of the word. His heart is as big as that of an ox. Otherwise he wouldn't be in the major league company today. How many professional baseball players, do you think could have stood the panning and roasting and the abuse heaped upon the head of this young gentleman after he failed to touch second base in that memorable game of 1908? I'll tell you. Not one in ten; no, not one in fifty.

ONE OF THE BEST.

"You cannot find many better first basemen today than Merkle. Why? Simply because he realized his mistake and decided to live it down by deeds of worth. He didn't sulk. He didn't slouch. He held a high head and kept a stiff upper lip. And instead of worrying over that one mistake, as most fellows would have done, he profited by his experience and let it stand as a warning. His game improved. He was a far better first baseman in 1909 than in 1908; far better still in 1910. This year he is among the best in the game. I take off my hat to Merkle. He's the proper stuff. He'll be better still in 1913."

Tom Lynch comes pretty near to knowing what he is talking about before he ever expresses himself. It is very doubtful if there is a first baseman in the game more valuable than Fred Merkle. There are flashier players, Hal Chase and Jack Daubert, possessing more natural advantages in that they throw left-handed, appear a bit more graceful, perhaps.

Yet it is doubtful if either has anything on the Giant as a fielder. Merkle is not showy. But he is wonderfully sure and as expert in making pickups of mean bounders as even the great Chase. He covers as much ground as Hal, is as skilled a base runner and a more dangerous hitter. He is a trifle less agile and cannot go so high for strongarm pegs, nor is he so dexterous with the mitt hand. Yet Merkle is the only right-handed first baseman who can break up a sacrifice hit play almost as cunningly as either Chase or Daubert.

NOT WHOLLY TO BLAME.

No one versed in baseball will deny that Merkle ranks among the first three of baseball's first base guardians. That is an honor, indeed, for a youngster that the fans were trying to hound back to the brush four short summers ago. But then he was unfortunate; simply the victim of circumstances. Had Mike Donlin, Arthur Devlin or the great Matty been on first when Al Bridwell knocked out the clean single that should have won the game little would have been thought of the veteran's oversight. The fact that it was a recruit gave the knockers a chance. Or if New York had won the playoff with the Cubs, as they should, Merkle's lot would not have been so hard in 1909.

As a matter of fact both McGraw and Mathewson were as much—yes, even more—to blame than Merkle. He was a raw recruit, in the big show for the first time. He had come up to one of the craftiest managers and one of the best teams in the profession from the then obscure Southern Michigan League. Most of the season he had spent on the bench, studying Fred Tenney's style of play. When Tenney's under-pinnings went to the bad the "Kid" was called upon. Now, when Merkle pulled his oversight Matty was coaching at first base and McGraw at third. When Bridwell went to bat with two out, Merkle on first and McCormick on third, there was identically the same situation as the one at Pittsburg 10 days previousy when Johnny Evers and the Cubs tried to win over the Pirates on the same sort of technicality. Indeed, if the subsequent play had been rehearsed it could not have been better played into Chicago's hands.

THE PITTSBURG CASE.

Chicago lost its protest over Pittsburg's victory because Hank O'Day, who was umpire-in-chief that day, had failed to note whether or not the runner did touch second. Now, Chicago had certainly tipped its mitt by the ruction it raised over Pittsburg's triumph. What excuse, then, could New York offer for not being on the alert? Is it not reasonable to suppose that the coachers, McGraw and Mathewson, were caught napping just the same as was Merkle? It is quite true that the Giants were entitled to the pennant save for a little technicality. Yet technicalities have lost Empires as well as pennants and ball games.

That was a painful afternoon for McGraw, Mathewson, the Giants and in particular Fred Merkle. Yet in the case of Merkle it perhaps was one of those rare blessings in disguise. McGraw stuck by the boy and gave him every encouragement.

[Youth's Companion:] The incumbent of an old church in Wales asked a party of Americans to visit his parochial school. After a recitation he invited them to question the pupils, and one of the party accepted the invitation.

"Little boy," he said to a rosy-faced lad, "can you tell me who George Washington was?"

"Iss, sir," was the smiling reply. "'E was a 'Merican general."

"Quite right. And can you tell me what George Washington was remarkable for?"

"Iss, sir. 'E was remarkable 'cos 'e was a 'Merican an' told the truth."

FORD CAR HAS SHOOTING BUG.

At Least that's What Graves Solemnly Swears.

Will Run to Range With Very Little Gasoline.

Climbs Hills and Takes Curves that Look Bad.

BY EDWARD C. CROSSMAN,

Secretary Los Angeles Rifle and Revolver Club.

Undoubtedly in your experience you have seen a well-trained bird dog that would sit up on his haunches and whine and get excited and beg to be taken out whenever he saw a gun in his master's hands. There's a Ford Model T car in Los Angeles that has even the anxious dog backed off the map for its love of guns and shooting in general.

The Ford belongs to B. L. Graves, general agent for the Ford car in Southern California, and its behavior is this:

If you turn the radiator of the car in the general direction of the range of the Los Angeles Rifle and Revolver Club, near Glendale, where the Ford man puts in his spare moments, the little car will hum along, nearly cracking the elastic speed limit, with the gas throttled down until the engine is getting but a trifle over two sniffs per mile. Turn it away from the range and it insists on having a drink of gasoline for every explosion like any other car under normal conditions—at least this is the tale of its owner.

HAS THE "BUG."

Graves has had the shooting "bug" in more or less virulent form ever since he was old enough to steal his grandfather's old Kentucky gun and get the usual strap reward for his peculations. In his pilgrimages around the country, where he has done his share in bringing 100,000 satisfied folks into acquaintance with 100,000 Ford cars, this Ford agent has toted a shooting iron of some sort or other and used it whenever local conditions in his jaunts offered a chance at game.

When he came to Los Angeles he became enraptured with the sporting model of the government new Springfield, owned by Stewart Edward White, had one built and joined the Los Angeles Rifle and Revolver Club. Then the shooting bug, its teeth freshly honed, took a good deep bite and Graves has the disease in its incurable form.

Every Sunday and at times during the week when time permits and he can get away from the plans for the big new Ford assembling plant down on Santa Fe avenue, the trim Model T Ford buzzes out to the range in Sycamore Canyon, with the motor cops eying doubtfully the black streak that passes them. There, with his sporting Springfield, as trim-lined and substantial as the vanadium steel car it rides in, he demonstrates to the service guns of the club members that the fancy clothes of the rifle do not interfere with its bullseye-getting ability.

INTO THE WILDS.

At times the touring car is abandoned and a modification of the Ford roadster is taken out into the wilds to scout for the deer and the birds that are fate to see the business end of the Ford man's gun when the season opens. It will be hard for the birds, and even for the deer, to trek back far enough into the wilds to be safe with the Ford hunting car on their trails. With the rumble seat stripped off and a generous-sized box on the rear deck, the roadster becomes an ideal outing car, its light weight and surplus power taking it anywhere, while the short wheel base allows it to sneak around figure 8 curves that would bother some of the more capacious cars. The exploits of the "Toad" Ford that crept down into the depths of the Grand Canyon and out again show what the enthusiastic Ford sportsman can expect of his special hunting car. To demonstrate what even the touring car could do on mountain roads, Graves drove his Model T with five people to the top of Lookout Mountain near Hollywood, the other evening, never stopping for curves where the big cars have to do some artful sidling to get around.

THE ODD JOBS.

Out at the range the little car often does emergency work in gathering up a barrel of blue rocks or some ammunition, forgotten by the club until the last moment. A policeman on the Main-street beat is still wondering who the boob was that drove up in front of a sporting goods house at the hour of midnight Saturday night, seized a barrel of blue rocks and made off with it in his car.

The Ford man's strongest hold is with the shotgun, although his work with the rifle on flying objects is the best done on the range. With the double gun he is certain and sudden death to the artful blue rock that attempts to fly over his head at such speed that the shot cannot connect. Few of them ever get accelerated enough to turn the trick.

The highest ambition of the motor car man is first to get hold of all the cars he can sell, second to hit every blue rock that flies out of the trap and third to kill a genuine, fire-breathing, man-devouring grizzly bear.

LOCAL PLAYERS HAVE CHANCE FOR CHALMERS.

Baseball fans all along the Coast are showing great interest in the Chalmers trophy, which will be awarded to the best all-around ball player in the Pacific Coast League shortly after October 15, 1912, and it seems almost certain that the Chalmers "36" will come to Los Angeles, with either Johnny Kane of "Hap Hogan's tribe or Joe Berger of the Los Angeles club, behind the steering column.

At the close of the season, each member of the Pacific Coast League Chalmers Trophy Commission will vote for six men in the league, placing them in the order that in his opinion they should occupy on the ballot according to their merit. The official ballots will then be returned to the chairman, who will credit each player with points according to his location on the ballots.

The points to be considered in the balloting are batting, base running, aggressiveness, aid to team play, fielding, conduct on and off the field, quick thinking, respect of discipline and time of reporting at the club quarters.

Undecided.

Doubtful if Auto Trucks Will Be Used in Maneuvers.

Col. Schrieber Willing but There Are Difficulties.

Practical Value of Trucks Not Questioned.

Col. William G. Schrieber, commanding officer of the Seventh Regiment, N. G. C., which will take part in the maneuvers in the vicinity of San Francisco, from August 10 to 23, is undecided as to whether or not motor trucks will be used by the companies of his regiment during the practice campaign.

Orders have been issued for the company commanders to get bids on wagons and mule teams for the two weeks of field service, but it will be a difficult matter for the officers to get the wagons needed.

It is known that motor trucks could be rented for much less than the wagons and mules, and some of the dealers are willing to make a special offer to the militiamen for the purpose of demonstrating the practicability of the motor truck in field service.

At first the members of the companies were enthusiastic over the prospects of the trucks, but the colonel said yesterday that it would not be practical for one of the companies to use a truck and others to use wagons and mules.

MIGHT RAISE CAIN.

It was not the fear of the truck not making good on the road and in the field, but he was afraid that the mules or horses, whichever were used, might become frightened at the truck and cause trouble in the marches.

The officers and members of Troop D are anxious to take a truck to camp with them, and the troop commander has taken the matter up with the adjutant-general.

This command is a part of the First Brigade, N.G.C., but is not under the command of Col. Schrieber, and as they are a separate body, so to say, from Los Angeles, they are anxious to make a good showing and the use of the motor truck is calculated to reflect great credit upon the organization.

Almost every military organization in this section has used the motor truck at one time or another, for some "stunt," and some of the demonstrations have attracted a great deal of attention all over the country. The motor truck is a great problem before the officers at the present time and the use of power wagons during the "Siege of San Francisco" would be very interesting to say the least; and would prove a thorough test of the efficiency of the machines.

EVERITT AND MOON MOTOR CARS MAKE SOCIAL HIT.

Grimm and Allard Entertain With Novel Party at the Beach—Jolly Crowd Passes Up Theater and Dance for Automobile Frolic — Chaperon's Voice Is Sad Noise—Pretty Girl Changes Tires.

BY AL G. WADDELL.

CHAPERONED by Mr. and Mrs. C. Shapira of West Ninth street, "Pete" Grimm and M. E. Allard, two prominent young men of the local gasoline colony, entertained a party of friends with one of the most unique social affairs of the summer season, in which the motor car scored a tremendous hit, last Wednesday evening.

The affair was given in honor of Stowe Knox, who was to leave for Las Vegas, Nev., on the following day, and the others who enjoyed the combination of a seventy-five-mile automobile ride with a midnight "bark" bake on the beach several miles north of the Long Wharf were, Mr. and Mrs. C. Shapira, the Misses Carolyn Lockwood, Theadora Rogers, Bertha Haase, Benetta Whipple, Dr. John Lynch, Harry Love, "Pete" Grimm and M. E. Allard.

From the start, which was made from the Shapira residence, to the return, some six or seven hours later, it was one continual and uninterrupted round of "jolly good fun" and the members of the crowd unanimously declared that the automobile had brought about a reconstruction of the social system, as they were bidding "bon swiggle" to their hosts.

Without the automobile, such an evening's entertainment would be impossible, and the popularity of the motor car is evidenced by the fact that the party passed up the dance at Ocean Park and the theater in Los Angeles to enjoy the ride along the beach.

Grimm, who is associated with the local Moon Motor Car agency, of course drove a Moon car and Allard had one of H. O. Harrison's cars, a big 1913 Everitt "Six." Both young men are considered clever drivers and they certainly upheld their reputations Wednesday night.

On the way out to the beach the two cars were kept close together, but at Venice, where there were hundreds of other cars, the "Full Moon" lost itself and the crew of the "Ever It," spent an anxious fifteen minutes looking for their friends.

The joy army was mobilized again on the speedway, however, and it was decided that none of the attractions were strong enough to break in upon the programme. So Ocean Park was turned down and the cars were driven out along the beach, far beyond the entrance to Topanga Canyon to a quiet spot where the sand was not covered with peanut shells and discarded soda pop bottles.

The drivers of the cars had provided robes, which were promptly mustered into the service and a commissary station jumped into existence in less than two minutes. A fire was kindled and under the careful nursing of Grimm, was soon burning brightly, in spots and smoking horribly all over.

Near dried seaweed proved to be poor fuel, and the party, with the single exception of one much-sought young woman, who found a comfortable spot on one of the robes, deployed and gathered wood.

Allard took charge of the gas works and with the wood that came in from all sides had a real fire of the camp brand burning in short order. Most every member of the party took a turn at the fireside with tempting seasickness preventors on long sticks decorating the heat.

Enough food was cooked to feed an insurrecto regiment in about twenty minutes and the fire had spread from a neat little bed of coals to a long line of flame. There was enough sand mixed with the first course to build a cement walk, but the second round brought a collection that would have passed muster with the pure-food mechanics.

After the jolly crowd had dined superfluously, the campfire scene was staged. A spattering of song, stories of exciting croquet games and a few stunts of the almost but variety, filled the time.

The shimmering lights down the coast had been dimmed, but still the moon, not Grimm's Moon, but the silvery moon this time, danced out on the waters and the guests on the sand were extremely sorry when the stern voice of Mrs. Shapira broke the mooney spell and announced that it was time to break up the party.

Although the jollification on the beach had ended, the fun was not over for another hour or more. The return trip was made over the race course route and the best part of an automobile party is the stunt of the host returning his guests to their homes. It was little to be wondered at then that there was a sleepy-looking young man on the job at H. O. Harrison's establishment, and that L. C. Buxton had to get along without the services of a valuable man the next day.

On the way back to the city the cars separated out near Westlake and the guests were delivered to their abodes by the shortest routes. The last seen of the Everitt "Six" was a cloud of oil smoke going up Sixth street and the Moon was still out when the sun came up.

The aftermath came the next afternoon when Grimm was enjoying a little drive with Miss Carolyn Lockwood. A piece of broken glass which had escaped Louis Schwaebe's "help the other fellow" broom, caught a tire, and the pretty little girl played the leap-year role strong, changing the tire all herself.

Of course, no mention was made of the time required, but it must be remembered that Miss Lockwood wore dainty white gloves and had not figured on performing the duties of a mechanician.

Manager Wolverton of the Yankees is gradually getting a team together that will be a credit to the American League. By his own hard work and personal efforts he is fast rounding the team into shape so that before the season closes it is expected that the Yankees will be in good fighting trim and will make their opponents hustle some to win.

CUT OUT TOWELS AND SWINGERS.

[Jockey Maynard in the Denver Times:] According to reports from New York, the boxing commission has made a ruling that will eliminate the towel swinger in a boxer's corner during a bout. This is one of the best moves ever made by the commission, and will, no doubt, meet with the hearty approval of the majority of the patrons of the boxing game.

The practice of swinging a dirty towel in a fighter's corner between rounds has always been a bad one in my mind. The towel swinger is no benefit to a fighter and many times is harmful. Towel swinging has driven many fans away from bouts, especially when they happened to have a seat in one of the corners.

All the air that a boxer needs during a bout can be given by the use of a palm-leaf fan, which is much more sanitary than the towel. The fans will not throw rosin all over the spectators as is now done by the towel users. Nine out of ten fellows who go into the ring to swing a towel do more posing than anything else.

Some of them get so that they can track the towel while they are swinging it, and instead of paying attention to the boxer they are looking around the house to see if they are being looked upon. The average towel swinger knows little about the fighting game, and is generally in the way of a second. In getting in and out of the ring they generally knock over the water buckets or hold the ropes down so it is hard to get the chair in the corner.

Three men in the corner is sufficient for any boxer. One man to do the advising, one to fan and the other to attend to the buckets and bottles. This thing of having five or six seconds in the corner should be stopped, as it is harmful to the game. Some of these fellows will stand up during a bout and obstruct the view of several spectators.

Another practice that should be prohibited is that of blowing water from the mouth on a fighter. Nine times out of ten when a second tries this most of the water goes all over the spectators at the ringside. It is a filthy practice, and does no good. A light rub with a wet sponge is much more beneficial to a boxer. If a second wants to use water to shock a fighter catch him with a sponge as he is coming to the corner and throw the water on the boxer instead of the spectators. The fans do not attend the bouts to obtain a bath.

FREE TRANSPORTATION IS PITCHER'S VALUE.

Among the summer madnesses in Chicago is a sentiment for baseball legislation which shall prevent a pitcher passing a batter intentionally. Heine Zimmerman, they say, loses many opportunities for three-baggers and such things. On the other side of the fence Meyers is passed more often than Zimmerman.

It would not be good baseball to have such a rule, anyhow, says the New York Post. The bases are a pitcher's safety valve. They are there for him to use as best he can. To hiss a pitcher passing a batter is a fair exhibition of being an idiot. Nine times out of ten, under the circumstances which call for the play at all, it is heady ball to give a his base. Roger man I know of use this play.

SEALS FINALLY CHECK ANGELS.

Baker Is Unsolvable by the Local Sluggers.

"Bill" Tozer Is Touched Up for Hard Swats.

Eddy's Men Display a Big Reversal of Form.

San Francisco, 6; Los Angeles, 1.

These figures may seem like fiction, but they are not. The Seals came to life yesterday and toyed with the Angels at will. Baker, who pitched for the visitors, was an unsolvable enigma and the Angels' .300 batters were mowed down like tender spring grass.

The fans seemed stunned by the sudden reversal of form shown by the Seals, but as the game progressed an appreciation of high art in baseball came to the fore, and the visitors were applauded for their finesse.

Tozer pitched for the Angels, and he was anything but effective. Eleven hits were garnered, and it might have been worse.

San Francisco began its run getting in the second inning and kept it up intermittently until finis was written. Gedeon was out on the fast work of Berger and Moore, and he was succeeded by Corhan, who singled to center and stole second. Wuffli hit to Berger, who threw to Metzger to nail Corhan at third, but both runners achieved their goal. McArdle flied to Heitmuller, Corhan scoring after the catch. Wuffli took third, but his effort was lost, as Shea went out, Howard to Moore.

In the fourth Gedeon again started proceedings by an infield single, and Corhan sacrificed, advancing Gedeon. This unruly Seal then stole home in full view of the audience, while Smith and Tozer trifled with the ball. McArdle flew to Heitmuller.

The Seraphs scored in the fifth, and that's all. Smith started it with a single to right, and Tozer followed with a single to center, putting Smith on third. Angel Howard flied to Gedeon and Smith scored after the catch. Berger went out, but Tozer took second while the deal was being negotiated. Daley walked and Heitmuller fanned ingloriously.

Del Howard started the sixth with a single to center and Hartley followed with a single to right, enabling Howard of the north to arrive at third. He scored when Gedeon singled to center. Incidentally, Hartley advanced a notch, and when Corhan sacrificed, all runners advanced. Wuffli singled to center, scoring Hartley and Gedeon. McArdle flew to Daley, who threw to Moore, nailing Wuffli off first base.

McArdle flew to Daley in the ninth and when Shea followed with a long [illegible] to Heitmuller, it seemed that the agony was approaching the end. But Baker doubled and Mundorff singled and the situation again became acute. Smith threw wild to second and Baker scored and Mundorff took third. Del Howard went out, Howard to Moore.

The Angels made a brave effort to start something in the ninth, but Baker was unrelenting, and they went out in one, two, three order without hitting the pill, although the batting order was shaken up to shake the nerve of the wonderful Baker. Score:

SUMMER GOLF PLAY AT CORONADO CLUB.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

CORONADO BEACH, July 27.—For the first time in the history of sports at the Coronado Country Club, a men's summer championship golf tournament is announced. The tournament will open August 10 with members of all recognized golf clubs eligible to entry.

J. Douglas Brown, the new professional at the club, has been engaged for full year service and the new eighteen-hole golf course, recently completed, has been placed in excellent condition. An unusually large and handsome cup, mounted with the club crest, is offered for the summer tournament, to be thrice won for possession. A smaller cup will be awarded the winner of each tourney and a silver medal will be awarded the runner-up. A gold medal also will be given the holder of the lowest score.

Play for the A. B. Daniels' trophy by local golfers as well as the weekly handicap competitions will be completed by August 1, allowing a ten-day respite before the new championship tournament.

MONEY RAISED FOR AUSTRALIAN RUGBYISTS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, July 27.—Financing the tour of the Australian Rugby Union team, which will come to California in October, was completed here last night by the California Rugby Union. The Antipodean players are scheduled to leave Sydney September 12, and arrive here October 3. They will play fourteen games, dates for several of which have not yet been secured.

The University of California has subscribed $3000, and will play three games with the visitors, turning over to the union any excess over their subscription taken in at the gates. Stanford subscribed $2000 and will play two games on similar terms.

The Barbarians of San Francisco subscribed $500 with one game; Santa Clara University and St. Mary's College, $250 each with one game. The Olympic Club has not yet subscribed, but it is believed will contribute $1000 and receive a Saturday game.

DYAS-CLINE TEAM TAKES ANOTHER GAME.

Dyas-Cline's Rainbows continued their winning streak Saturday afternoon by defeating the Los Angeles Y.M.C.A. boys on the Y.M.C.A. field, 9 to 3.

John Hargitt, the Rainbow slabster, proved too much of a puzzle for the association boys, letting them down with four scattered bingles.

Nelson, who relieved Hargitt in the sixth, also performed well, getting by without letting the Y.M.C.A. boys get a semblance of a hit. Errors and a wild pitch in the second enabled two of Cromwell's boys to mark the rubber. The Rainbows garnered eight of their runs in the first two innings, Shanholtzer failing to get started.

Olympiad Financial Failure.

NEW YORK, July 27.—[By Cable and A. P. Wire to The Times.] According to advices received from officials at the Olympic games in Stockholm, the Swedish Olympiad probably will prove to have been a failure financially. Newspapers in Sweden and elsewhere, before the games printed stories of the prohibitive prices which would be charged at Stockholm and frightened away many thousands of the visitors who otherwise would have come into the games.

Hard to Beat.

BUNDY WINS IN FINALS; MAY SUTTON IS VICTOR.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LAKE FOREST (Ill.) July 27.—Thomas C. Bundy of Los Angeles defeated C. Inman of New York in an uphill contest 5-7, 2-6, 6-1, 6-1, 6-2 in the finals of the western tennis championship tournament today and will meet Maurice E. McLoughlin Monday afternoon in the challenge round.

W. T. Hayes and J. H. Winston defeated Alex Squair and A. L. Green, Jr., in the final round of the men's doubles, 6-1, 6-3, 6-2, thus earning the right to represent the West in the preliminary national doubles next week.

Miss May Sutton of Los Angeles won the western women's tennis championship by defeating Miss Mary W. Browne of the same city, 6-0, 6-3.

The contest between the two Los Angeles girls was the first of the final matches played. Both played brilliantly, Miss Sutton, however, excelling in accurate placing. Her drives to the distant part of the court kept her opponent continually on the defensive. Miss Browne did not appear to be playing her best game, particularly in the first set, when she missed several easy shots.

Notwithstanding the apparent one-sided score, the contest was stubbornly fought and was productive of a stellar grade of tennis.

Bundy defeated Walter Hayes of Chicago in the semi-finals round 6-0, 6-0, 6-4.

The Illinois State title-holder was outclassed. The first set was a walk-away for the Californian in the six games played, only eight points going to the Chicago man. Hayes could not solve Bundy's puzzling twist service and the Coast man followed up this advantage by superior net work, combined with slashing drives along the side lines.

The second set was equally easy for Bundy, the fourth game being the only one to go to deuce. Hayes was weak on his backhand, being unable to return the cut strokes of the Californian, who annexed six straight games.

In the third set Hayes started to take the net, and won his first game of the match. Bundy took the next three, the fourth game of the match being hard fought. Hayes grabbed the fifth, and a keen battle began, although the outcome was never in doubt.

The Californian led at 5-3, his backhand and forehand drives to the far corners keeping the State champion on the run.

Hayes won the ninth game, but Bundy was not to be denied, and won the deciding game of the match 6-4.

Submerged.

MANY STAR PLAYERS ARE WITH POOR TEAMS.

AN EXPENSIVE pearl in a cheap setting is no more out of place than a star ball player with a tail-end club. The pitiful part of it is the hopelessness of his situation. There is a chance for someone to buy the pearl and have it reset; there is no chance for a tail-end club to part with a star under any consideration. At times this almost leads one to doubt the wisdom—at least the justice—of the reserve clause of organized baseball contracts that binds human property to club owners indefinitely.

One does not have to look around very far to find plenty of baseball idols worthy of pity. Two of the greatest pitchers the game has ever developed have for years hidden their lights under a bushel, said bushel being support not fast enough to get out of the way of a truck.

Nap Rucker of the Dodgers was king of the southpaws of the National League until "Rube" Marquard dethroned him. If this pair swapped clubs, how about it then? Do you think that Marquard, brilliant as he is, could go day after day throughout a whole season to a brilliant record with a club that was as likely as not to boot away the only run of the game in the ninth inning?

Walter Johnson, the speediest pitcher since Rusie, has won about half Washington's games during the last several years. Until this season his case was identical with that of Rucker. Johnson has a better club behind him this year and a better lot of slabmates. The result is Washington's sensationally unexpected fight among the top notchers.

In New York we may find a few examples. There are three or four with Wolverton's Highlanders. Russell Ford, "Birdie" Cree and Harry Wolter would look bad on any championship club, wouldn't they? With a club that finished sixth in 1911, Ford won twenty-two and lost eleven games. In 1910, his first season out with the big show, "Russ" pealed off twenty-six victories against six defeats. This year, with a club that is in the dumps, he seems destined for little better than average rating. Cree hit .350 last year for a club that went about its work "every man for himself." He was also one of the best base runners in the big show, and this with no assistance from his mates. Wolter laid up a great deal through sickness, was, nevertheless, one of the best all-round gardeners in the national pastime.

Hal Chase, like Ty Cobb, has established such a reputation for himself that he would come in for his lion's share of glory if he were to play with a class Z outfit. Chase has come to be regarded as an institution. There is no doubt that he was one of the greatest diamond sensations of the age.

As a kid breaking in, he made "Jiggs" Donohue and Fred Tenney look as if they were rooted to the ground. Chase played the greatest ball of his career in 1911 as manager of the Highlanders. This spring he has been very backward in striking his gait owing to a long spell of sickness. When he does get right, and as long as he stays right, Hal Chase will be the king of all first sackers. But the moment he lets a foot slip he will find a new monarch on the throne.

DAUBERT NEW SENSATION.

Many will tell you now that Chase ranks second to Jake Daubert. And here we are getting back to our theme of stellar performers not fully appreciated because of environment. Certainly the boosters of the Brooklynite have every reason just now to assume this attitude. Next to Chase, Daubert is the finest fielding piece of works in organized baseball.

He is every bit as handy at killing off sacrifice hits, though he is not so quick. He has a wonderfully accurate throwing arm, and is much surer in both his pegs and his clutches. While Hal pulls more sensational stuff than any two contemporaries, he also muffs more easy tosses than any other three.

The hardest sort of wild chucks he nails with one hand and simply eats up apparently impossible pickups. Daubert has neither the reach nor the range of Chase, consequently his infield takes a trifle more care in throwing than do the Yankees.

Where Daubert lays it all over Chase this year is in hitting. Jake has been going along at a terrific clip and after more than two months of the fight has been left behind finds himself well above the .350 mark. He is a pretty shifty fellow on the paths too, and if with a club that was encouraged to use its speed would undoubtedly be a base runner of more than the average ability.

Daubert is a far better ball player this season than he was last, and in 1911 he was fifty per cent. better than in 1910. He'll be better still in 1913, for he is learning all the time. He has to learn, for he is not a genius like Chase. But he'll wear Hal's crown if the latter doesn't wake up pretty soon.

"ONE-ROUND" HOGAN READY FOR RITCHIE.

[By Federal (Wireless) Line to The Times.]

SAN FRANCISCO, July 27.—[Special Dispatch.] "One Round" Hogan is ready to box Willie Ritchie on Labor Day. If the San Franciscan wins from Tommy McFarland next Wednesday night, he will be only too anxious to tangle with the crack young lightweight, who has been creating such a stir in the world of pugilism lately. The following communication was received this morning from Gil Boag, manager of Hogan:

"According to reports, all the lightweights are dodging Willie Ritchie. Well, here's one that isn't—"One-Round" Hogan. He not only isn't dodging him, but is ready to mix at the word, as Coffroth will confirm, inasmuch as I accepted for Hogan for the Fourth of July and Ritchie was one who wouldn't or couldn't go.

"Now, it's up to Willie. Coffroth again offers a Labor Day date for a Hogan-Ritchie match and I believe accepted on behalf of Hogan. If Willie says it won't draw, I will guarantee him as much money as he ever received for a contest. This is fair, isn't it?"

BIG TENNIS TOURNEY AT VIRGINIA ON DOCK

The annual tennis tourney for the championship of Southern California is to open on the courts of Hotel Virginia at Long Beach, tomorrow morning. The entry list is very large and the matches will hold forth all week, the finals in the various events being scheduled for Saturday.

Although several of the best California racqueters are in the East, the playing at Long Beach promises to be interesting and there will be a chance for some of the younger players to show their mettle.

EDDIE GRANEY IS IN THE HOSPITAL.

[By Federal (Wireless) Line to The Times.]

SAN FRANSCISCO, July 27.—[Special Dispatch.] Eddie Graney, the well-known referee and boxing-club promoter, is quite ill at the St. Francis Hospital. He is threatened with pneumonia.

Graney has been ailing for some time. It was only when he became so sick that he couldn't attend to business that he decided to go to the hospital. No visitors are allowed to see him, as his fever is quite high.

"KNOCKOUT" WILL TRAIN.

NEW YORK, July 27.—[By A. P. Night Wire.] "Knockout" Brown, the lightweight, will go into training early next month, after being out of the fighting game for several weeks as the result of an automobile accident. Brown's manager has arranged a series of bouts for him on the Pacific Coast, early in September. His opponents will probably include Willie Ritchie, Joe Mandot and Joe Rivers. Brown is also arranging for another meeting with Wolgast during the early winter.

RACE TO BERMUDA.

PHILADELPHIA, July 27.—[By A. P. Night Wire.] Two motor boats are at anchor in the Delaware River tonight, ready to begin a race to Bermuda, a distance of 719 nautical miles, for the James Gorden Bennett cup, valued at $1500, and $1000 in cash. The boats are the Kathema, owned by W. C. Smith, of the Ocean Gate New Jersey Yacht Club, and the Dream owned by Charles Lagen of the Yachtsmen Club of Philadelphia.

Pass Up George Browne.

CHATTANOOGA, July 27.—[By A. P. Night Wire.] The Chattanooga club today turned the veteran outfielder, George Browne, bought a few days ago, back to the Philadelphia Nationals.

DOE NURSING A CALF.

TUNITAS (Cal.) July 27.—A grieving doe, whose fawn had died, has found solace in the nursing of a young calf on the farm of Samuel Dwyer, near here, and is jealously mothering it, with apparently entire satisfaction to the calf. The deer is half domesticated, Dwyer having kept it for some time in an enclosure on his farm. The calf, which had been deserted by its mother, a few days after birth, will not allow itself to be separated from the doe.

WANTS STATE-WIDE FIGHT.

SACRAMENTO, July 27.—The Sacramento Chamber of Commerce today instituted a State-wide campaign of education, setting forth the danger confronting the fruit industry in this State because of the possible introduction of the Mediterranean fly fruit pest. Letters are being written to the various chambers of commerce asking them to lend assistance to the fight for a measure in Congress that will provide a national quarantine measure adopted to protect this State.

DEL MONTE GOLFERS.

during the ensuing year. The runner-up will receive a silver medal, as also will the two semi-finalists.

The lowest score in the qualifying round will receive a handsome cup.

Up till now there has been some little friction regarding Coast championship tournaments, since, when held up north it was almost impossible for southerners to compete, the same being the reverse case for the northerners if the meeting was held in the south. Mr. Neville of San Francisco has therefore been regarded as the Coast champion by northerners while E. S. Armstrong held the title according to southerners.

This year, however, there will no longer be any question, for Del Monte is a good mid-day course, easily accessible for both sections and the respective golf associations have accorded this year's meeting their blessing. Peace and concord reigns o'er western golf and every country club on the Coast will be represented at the meeting.

THE TEAM MATCHES.

The North vs. South team matches will be a great attraction and friendly, but none the less keen, rivalry will be seen. The last season has witnessed the supremacy of the Los Angeles Country Club team in several events and the north will have her work cut out to better it. The holders of the Tom Morris trophy and the Southern California trophy, they have individually and colectively shown themselves a strong (and dare we whisper, stylish?) team.

SOUTHERN HOPES.

The hopes of the south for the championships are the present holder of the title, E. S. Armstrong, who is also Southern California champion and Annandale Country Club champion; Norman Macbeth, who formerly held these titles and was in fine form when he won his club championship recently, but who has since been suffering from a disabled foot; Judge Frederickson, who has been playing well lately, and H. N. H. Woodcock of San Gabriel Country Club, who, however, may be unable to compete.

Other good men who should capture some honors for us are Frank H. Edwards, Windsor Walton, Jack Jevne, who holds several backwoods championships, Arthur Braly, George H. Schneider, Edward B. Tufts, who recently defeated Edwards in the finals of the Catalina tournament with a fine 74; John W. Wilson, L. T. Bradford, all of the Los Angeles Country Club. Then there are J. V. Eliot of Annandale, who broke the amateur record with a 70 last week, Michael McLaughlin of Denver, a winter member at Annandale, who holds several distinctions; W. J. Jewett of the same place, [illegible] Brand and Elmer Williams, both of Annandale. E. N. Wright, last year's runner-up in the tournament, and an excellent player, is unfortunately abroad and will not be able to compete. E. P. Gates, the veteran player of that club, is however, a possible honoree, for he is capable of most excellent golf when the conditions are amenable and has been runner-up on more than one occasion.

From San Gabriel there is Frank Wade, the player, who recently won the club championship by sheer steadiness and calm, against H. N. H. Woodcock, who is among the dashing players. It was a similar defeat to that of F. H. Edwards by Tufts-sureness against brilliance. Robert Tatum, E. H. Wilkes, and Conde Jones all go to Del Monte, and each have some fine play to their credit.

Redlands will send Raymond Hornby, Morris Phillips, Gregory Palmer and several others, while Riverside will have Harry Pattee, Martin Chase, Dr. Howe, E. N. Hillegas and F. D. Hudson, all of whom are well known as capable of good golf on occasions.

R. W. Salisbury of Salt Lake, likewise Mr. McGuerran will both compete, entering from Riverside, being winter members of the Victoria Golf Club.

"KID" M'COY IN SERIOUS TROUBLE.

[BY CABLE AND A. P. TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, July 27.—"Kid" McCoy who was brought up against Bow-street Police Court today on a provisional extradition warrant issued on behalf of the Belgium government on the allegation that he was implicated in a larceny said to have been committed at Ostend, was remanded until August 2, without bail, which can be allowed only with the consent of the Belgian Legation.

The lawyer who appeared on behalf of McCoy is endeavoring to secure the assent of the Belgian Minister to his release, declared the value of the jewels stolen from the Russian princess in Ostend was only $3000.

SPORTS OF ALL SORTS.

Coach James G. Schaeffer of the University of California has visited many of the important colleges of the East and Middle West seeking data regarding the athletic affairs of the institutions. Not only is he interested in the management of college sports, but also in relation of faculty and students. In the University of California the students control the sports. Eligibility matters in sports or classroom troubles are judged by a student board, and in all cases the system has given satisfaction. Faculties do not suspend or expel, this being left to students manage affairs and Mr. the student board. In athletics, the Schaeffer says there is never any case of proselytizing or squabbles between teams, leading to a break in athletic relations. Freshmen are eligible for California teams, and the graduate system of coaching prevails. Outdoor sports enjoy a monopoly of attention, the climate queering all attempts at arousing interest in indoor sports.

There seems to be a striking difference between the ages of America's and England's greatest golfers. The British players are mostly well towards their prime, while the Americans are almost all still in their twenties. Walter J. Travis is the lone exception. H. Chandler Egan was hot of age when he was the American title holder. Robert Gardner was still a Yale student when he became the greatest golfer in the country. Charles Evans, Albert Seckel, Oswald Kirkby, Jerome Travers, Fred Herreshoff and John G. Anderson are other Americans of national importance who are young in years, but not in campaign experience.

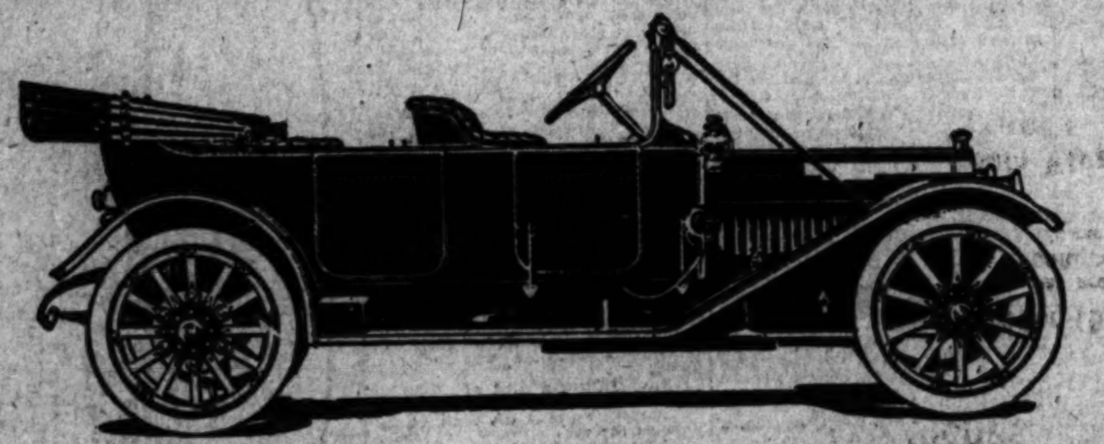
For 1913 Chalmers Again Sets a New Standard



The New Electric Lighted, Self-Starting Chalmers "Six"—Long Stroke Motor—54 Horse Power—Four Speeds and Reverse—Thirty-six by Four-and-a-Half Wheels—Continental Demountable Rims—11-inch Upholstery Turkish Cushions—Nickel Plated—Mechanical Tire Pump—Speedometer—Mohair Top—Ventilated Glass Front

Sells Here for $2550

1913 Will Be a Six-Cylinder Year

Many makers who have heretofore built Fours exclusively will rush to get under cover—to follow the public demand. This means a hastily constructed Six—untried, unproven—with you doing the testing, and at your expense.

But Chalmers Has Already Had a Season of Successful Six Building

The Six of 1912 met every requirement, every test. It was a good car—it gave service—and it sold at $3400. In thousands of miles of hard driving it developed no weaknesses—no defects.

Turkish Cushions and Luxury

Eleven-inch upholstery—that seems the limit of luxury. But it isn't. The Chalmers engineers have cast aside the established method of cushion manufacture—spring and hair. For it takes something more than that to give the ease and comfort sought for. So a method of using this spring and hair in a way never before attempted in motor car construction has resulted in the TURKISH CUSHION.

Now, With Increased Facilities and Larger Factory Space,

the seemingly impossible has been accomplished. A High Powered, Luxurious High Grade Six at a Moderate Price. A Six that is the equal of any—a Six that you will be proud to drive—proud to show to your friends. A Six that requires no apologies.

The Superb Gray & Davis Lighting System

The standard equipment of the higher priced cars has been selected. Three buttons on the dash control the lighting of your car. The engine driven dynamo supplies current for Storage Battery which in turn supplies all the lights of the car.

Like Your Old Arm Chair

To sink back into a Turkish cushion is to breathe a sigh of content—knowing that not a road shock or jar can reach you.

Long Wheel Base Means Easy Riding

A wheel base of 130 inches, together with 36x4½ tires, takes you over rutty roads without jolt or jar.

Speaking of the Dash

the hooded cowl contains all the indicators and switches for the control of the car: Ignition Switch—Self-Starter Button—Electric Light Switches—Speedometer Carburetor Adjuster—Oil Sight Feed—Carburetor Primer—Ammeter—Gasoline Emergency Pressure Pump—Air Gauge and Horn Bulb—all within easy reach of the operator.

The Power of the Motor is Surprising

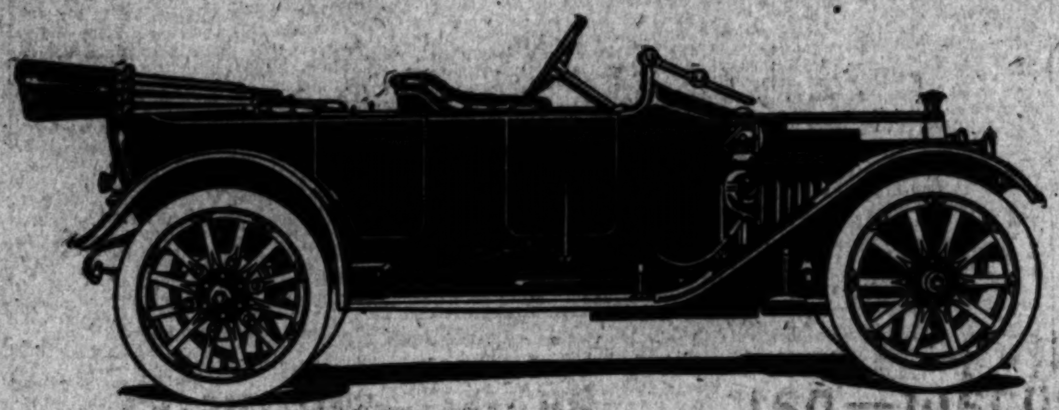
Six cylinders, 4¼x5¼ with ball bearing crank shaft, provide a world of power, developing from 60 to 70 horse power, while four forward speeds make mountain driving a pleasure.

Refinement of Detail

No description—no catalog can specify the minute attention to detail and luxury. A personal examination is the only adequate way to secure a true knowledge of the real beauty of this car.

Both Five-Passenger and Torpedo the Same Price

We can supply a large seven-passenger body for $200 extra.



And the New Electric Lighted, Self-Starting "Thirty-six"—The Best Known and Most Successful Motor Car of the Past Season—Four Speeds and Reverse—Thirty-six by Four Wheels—Continental Demountable Rims—11-inch Upholstery—Turkish Cushions—Nickel Plated—Mechanical Tire Pump—Speedometer—Mohair Top—Ventilated Glass Front—With Wheel Base Increased to 119 Inches

Sells Here for $2100

You Get More for Your Money This Year

Last year the price of the "Thirty-Six" did not include the lighting system—the mechanical tire pump—the Speedometer or Nickel Plating—and yet so successful was this car, such value for the price, that all our allotment was quickly disposed of and we have been out of cars for some time.

But the Additional Equipment This Year Increases the Value

The added equipment is the same as the "Six." The same Gray and Davis Lighting system—same Turkish cushions and eleven-inch upholstery—same Speedometer—is furnished on both the "Six" and the "Thirty-Six." In fact, the bodies are interchangeable.

The Increased Wheel Base Adds to the Comfort

The increase of wheel base to 119 inches on the "Thirty-Six" this year gives it still more comfort than last year.

The "Thirty-six" of 1912 Was the Logical Development of Years of Chalmers Success

It was the first moderate priced car to be equipped with the self-starter, and it was the self-starting Chalmers of 1912 that forced all the moderate-priced cars (and some of the high-priced cars) to be so equipped.

But for 1913 Chalmers Has Set Such a Pace

Has provided so much in value, in luxury, in equipment, and in CAR, that it will be difficult for any maker to even approach this car in value.

Both Five-Passenger and Torpedo the Same Price

We can supply a large, roomy, seven-passenger body for $200 extra.

THE JUMP-UPS

VERSES BY PAUL WEST
DRAWINGS BY WM. H. LOOMIS

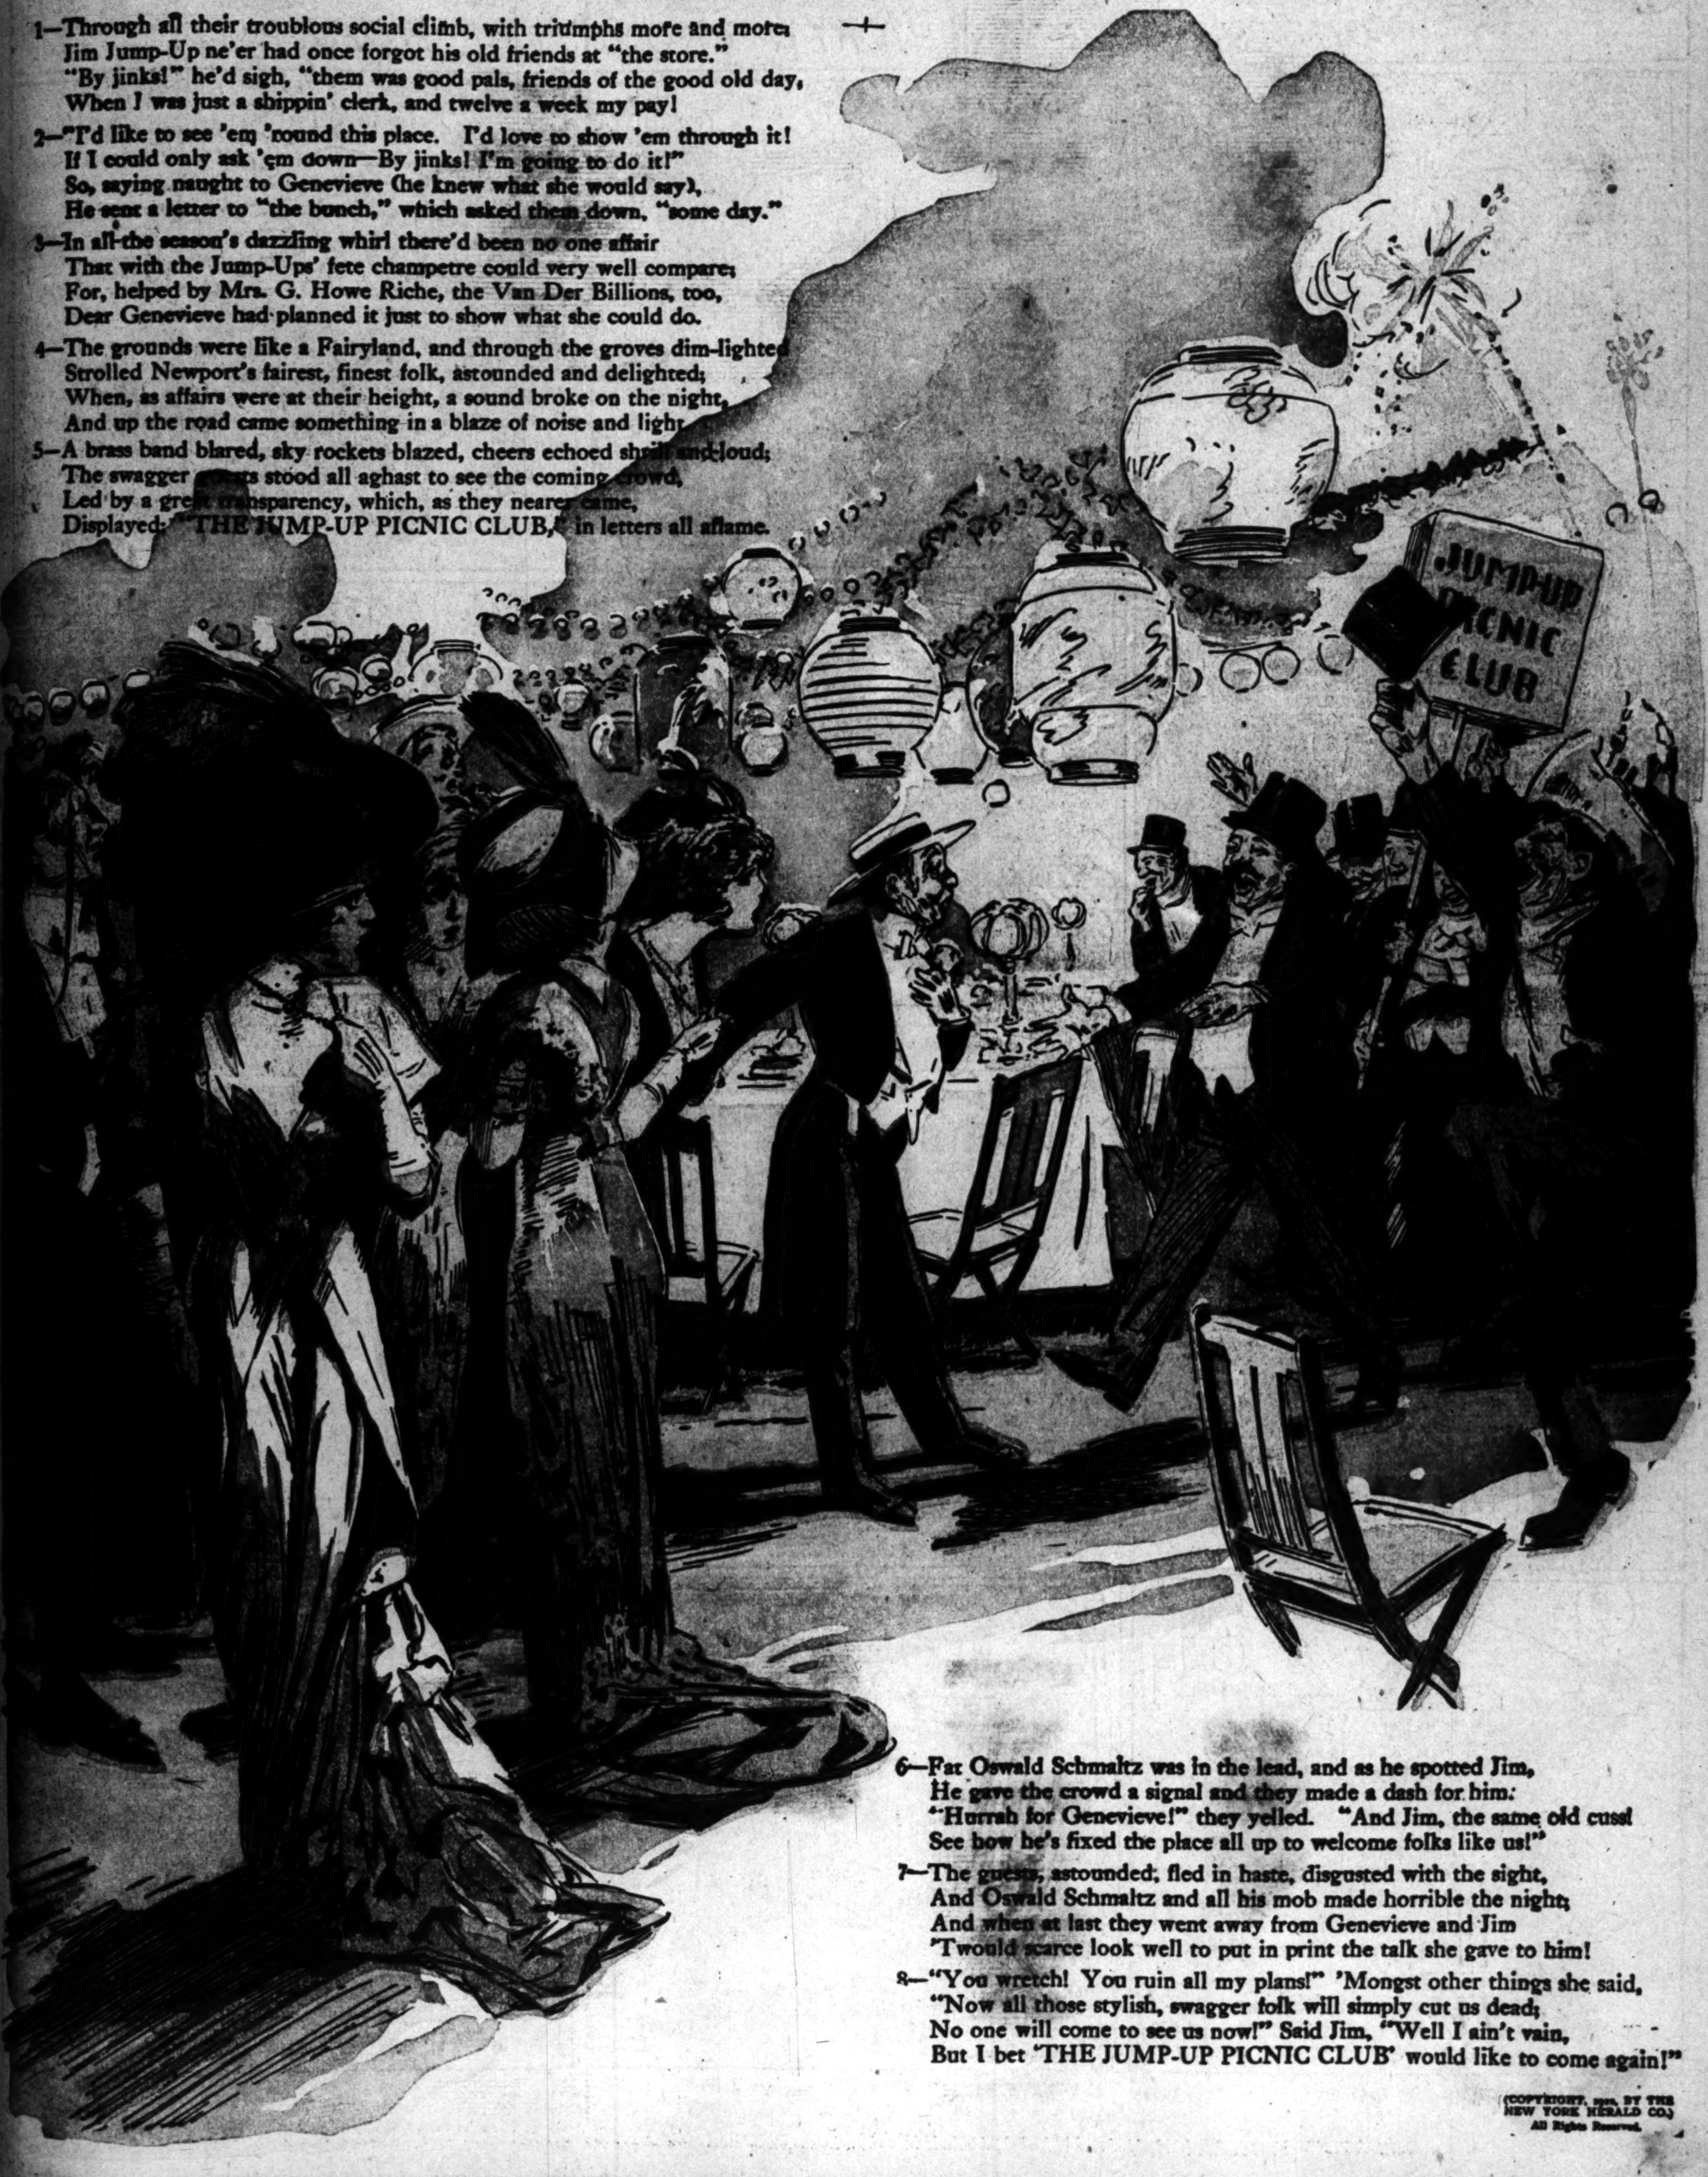
1—Through all their troublous social climb, with triumphs more and more,
Jim Jump-Up ne'er had once forgot his old friends at "the store."
"By jinks!" he'd sigh, "them was good pals, friends of the good old day,
When I was just a shippin' clerk, and twelve a week my pay!

2—"I'd like to see 'em 'round this place. I'd love to show 'em through it!
If I could only ask 'em down—By jinks! I'm going to do it!"
So, saying naught to Genevieve (he knew what she would say),
He sent a letter to "the bunch," which asked them down, "some day."

3—In all the season's dazzling whirl there'd been no one affair
That with the Jump-Ups' fete champetre could very well compare;
For, helped by Mrs. G. Howe Riche, the Van Der Billions, too,
Dear Genevieve had planned it just to show what she could do.

4—The grounds were like a Fairyland, and through the groves dim-lighted
Strolled Newport's fairest, finest folk, astounded and delighted;
When, as affairs were at their height, a sound broke on the night,
And up the road came something in a blaze of noise and light.

5—A brass band blared, sky rockets blazed, cheers echoed shrill and loud;
The swagger guests stood all aghast to see the coming crowd,
Led by a great transparency, which, as they nearer came,
Displayed: "THE JUMP-UP PICNIC CLUB," in letters all aflame.



6—Fat Oswald Schmaltz was in the lead, and as he spotted Jim,
He gave the crowd a signal and they made a dash for him:
"Hurrah for Genevieve!" they yelled. "And Jim, the same old cuss!
See how he's fixed the place all up to welcome folks like us!"

7—The guests, astounded, fled in haste, disgusted with the sight,
And Oswald Schmaltz and all his mob made horrible the night;
And when at last they went away from Genevieve and Jim
'Twould scarce look well to put in print the talk she gave to him!

8—"You wretch! You ruin all my plans!" 'Mongst other things she said,
"Now all those stylish, swagger folk will simply cut us dead;
No one will come to see us now!" Said Jim, "Well I ain't vain,
But I bet 'THE JUMP-UP PICNIC CLUB' would like to come again!"

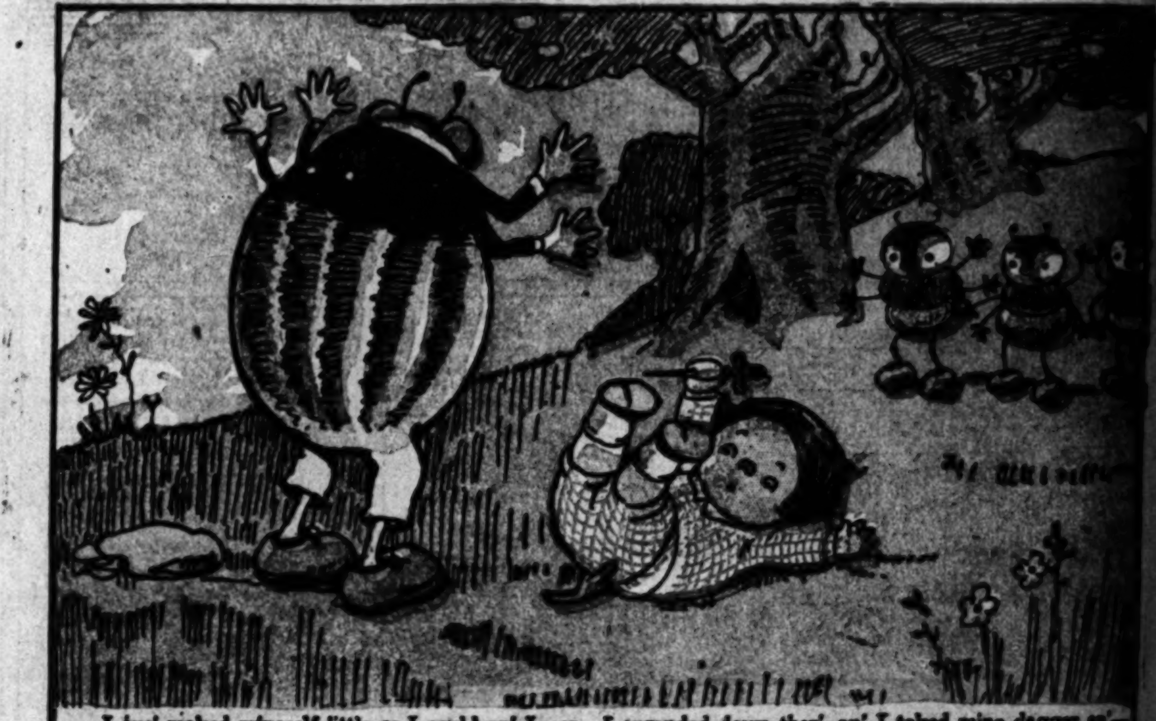
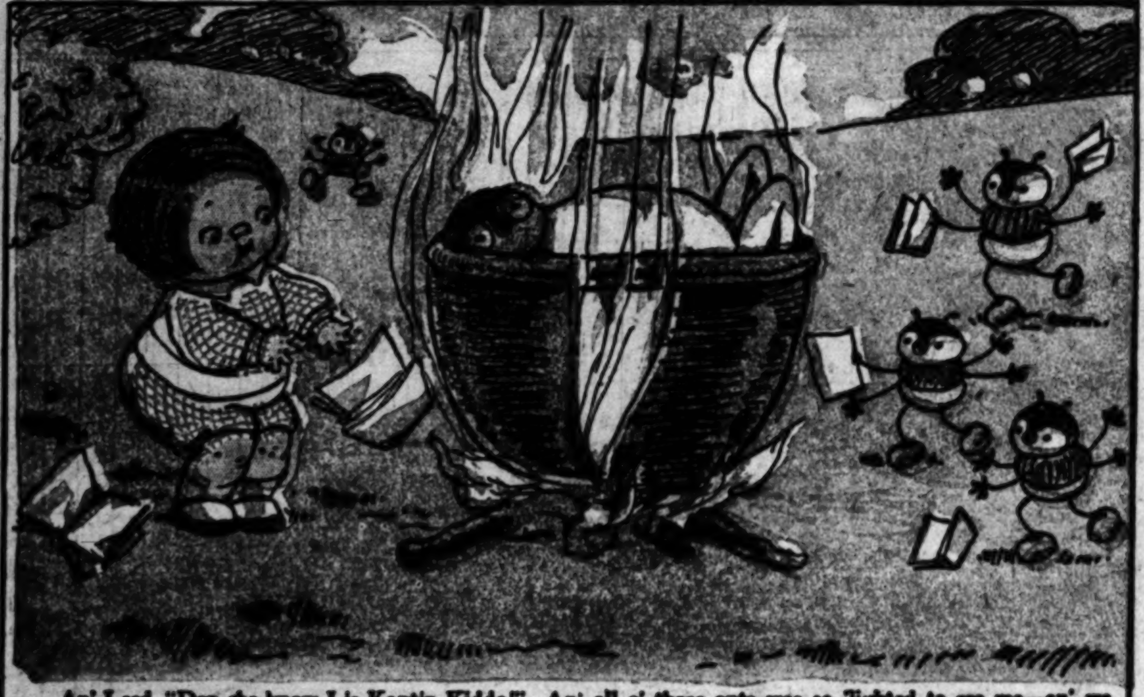
One day I was lyin' on my stummick in the hammock—an' I was a-watchin' some ants carryin' a—a crumb o' bread what I had dropped—an' 'ey was all hurryin' 'long ther'—an'—an' fightin',—an'—an' ther' comed 'long—ther' comed 'long—a gr-r-eat big savagiferous beetle an'—an' he was jus' a-goin' to-eat up all o' those poor 'ittle anties—so—I—er—so—



I jus' maked mineself 'ittle as I could an' I—er—I jumpded down ther', an' I taked mine dagger an'—an'—the ol' beetle gr-r-owled an' showed his toofs an'—an'—orful long savagiferous toofs they was—an' I sed, "Drop 'at 'ittle ant—you big ol' bad ol' beetle, you!" I sed. An' he jus' gr-r-owled some more an' catched me by mine rompers wif—wif his lobster claws, an' I sed, "Stop 'at! You's ticklin' me!" An' he stopped 'cause I cutted his claws orf wif mine dagger.



An' I sed, "Don-che-know I is Kaptin Kiddo!" An' all o' those ants was so 'lighted to see me—an' we killed the beetle—an'—an'—we builded a big fire out o' dry grasses an' sev'ral dry books what some ol' Gran'-daddy ants was a-readin'—an' we roasted the beetle—an' we had a Barbara Q wif him—a Barbara Q is when you roast a whole cow's brother for a feast.

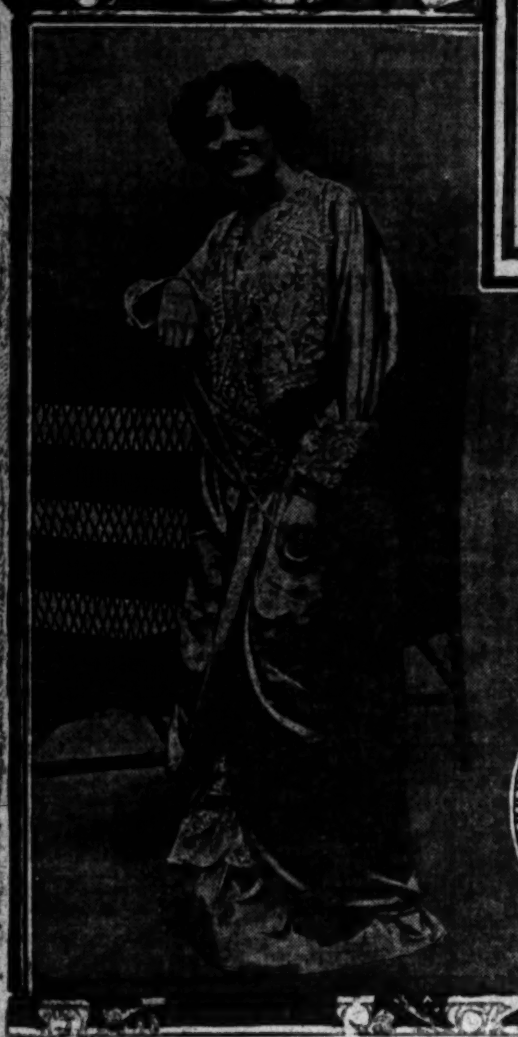
CHOOSE YOUR EVENING WRAP FROM THESE



Heavy Lace on Heavy Satin

THE festivities of summer, whether they be held in city, country or by the sea, demand fitting wraps to protect evening costumes and, incidentally, to add another note to the symphony of dress. Indeed, the summer evening wrap is too important to ignore, for it gives warmth in its beautiful form and allows any type of dress to be worn underneath.

Naturally, the summer evening cloak or cape is unlined, which simplifies matters for the home dressmaker. It is of satin, taffeta or sheer material, and can be simple in line or as elaborate as any one could wish.

Heavy lace always adds a richness to any wrap. It is combined with heavy satin in the long model. There is no armhole, but the sleeves are gathered in under cuffs of lace. The deep revers cross and fasten under an ornament of silk cord. The fronts of the wrap are curved. This model is becoming and practical.

As a contrast to it is a sheer wrap of black chiffon embroidered in a deep border and trimmed with a broad scalloped collar. It covers any decollete gown, although it adds no warmth. Any dark color in a transparent wrap adds to evening attire and protects from the dust of a short trip. Royal blue, magenta and dull green are favorite shades.

Of practical poplin in an unusual figured design is another model. This is cut in plain, straight lines, with extended sleeves having a seam on the top line. There is a large royal blue satin collar that repeats the bright note in the body of the wrap. The revers are deep. The wrap is unlined and the cotton material insures an inexpensive cleansing via the washtub. Such has been the progress of the summer evening coat!

It is not surprising to find the popular ratine made into a stunning military coat. A deep cape is trimmed with buttons on one side and buttonholes on the other. The lower part of the skirt is buttoned in a military line. Dark-blue satin forms the revers, collar and lining for the cape. Here is an excellent suggestion for cool summer evenings.

Paris has shown marked favor toward the summer wrap of flowered cretonne. There are wonderful patterns that seem not to be limited in color combinations or size. Since the material is ornate in itself, the line of the coat should be simple, as shown in the model. A plain collar and bands of satin or poplin are just the notes of contrast to introduce into the flowered scheme. Consider the cost of cretonne, and be wise—and stylish!

Taffeta has invaded the realm of evening wraps. Changeable silk forms the dolman-like wrap in the last of the number. A deep bertha is formed of ecru lace that falls in soft folds far over the shoulders. A double scalloped quilling edges the lace and continues down the front and around the bottom. The wrap is lined with Persian chiffon, also the lace bertha. A lace frill falls around the quilling on each sleeve.

When beauty and utility are combined in such convincing form, womankind benefits. The summer stroll after dinner, the dance, the concert or the reception should be planned for, not only in the evening gown, but in the suitable, lovely wrap that is thrown over it. From a valuable collection of accepted styles every one should gather helpful ideas in either the purchasing or the making of this necessary luxury.

COMMON SENSE in the HOME
EDITED by MARION HARLAND

OUR "SELF-MADE" MAN AT HOME.

"I AM entirely in sympathy with the 'Self Made Man' in the issue of your paper a few weeks back, when he asserts that he should be permitted to have a home as a resting place in which he may lie down when he likes or needs a rest, and 'kick off his boots if he wants to,' and that his 'home is his castle.'

"Yes, all that is true when the man is what the word implies and not what his whole letter goes to prove—namely, that he is not a man, but just the male of his species.

"A man has some sense of justice and would not refer to his wife's clothing when he catches the 'frou frou' of her passing in and out of the room, as 'petticoats I have paid for!' Had not his relations with her been those of a mere masculine member of the home, he would see in his wife a true helpmate who, by her work, thought, and time not merely paid twice over for her petticoats but earned recognition from her husband of her worth as a good and noble woman.

Possible Reasons for Objections.

"Reading between the lines of his vehement protest, I suspect that the reason for objecting to his habit of kicking off his boots and 'putting up his feet to rest' may have been the unattractive body of the mere man he prides himself upon being, as the outer coverings were removed. Let that pass! Such things are in certain homes. A man with ideals that make work a sacred duty through which he can express his ability and talents, and who regards the financial results as means to the end of working good for others as well as himself, will not despise the efforts and accomplishments of his family who have worked as many hours of the day as himself—worked for him and for others.

"He could not refer to all the moneyed earnings as exclusively his. Nor could he ignore the fact that, by human and divine laws, he owes a living to his wife and family. If he do not provide for them we have the warrant of Holy Writ for pronouncing him to be 'worse than an infidel.' They are not paupers, and he sins against law and gospel in looking upon them as beneficiaries who ought to be grateful to him for the clothes they wear, the food they eat, and the roof over their heads.

"In laying down his letter, I say, 'God pity them!' Not because he sits down to the table with them without a coat upon his overheated, steaming body, nor because he wants to take his rest in his parlor with his unshod feet upon a chair, but because the communication shows that he is lacking in justice, kindness, generosity, courtesy, and thoughtfulness for those about him. His friends and associates, if they are unkind in lack of consideration for their families, are probably the products of like ungovernable and selfish thoughts and views.

Reversion to Savage State.

"A great writer tells us that 'Labor without beauty is brutality.'

"A home without beauty, refinement, generosity, and thoughtfulness, without love and the practice of self-denial for the general good, harks back to savagery—the housing of the male and female of the human race in primeval forests, instead of being a Christian home for husband and wife, with the glorious development of true manhood and true womanhood.

"As for the matter of stocking feet and shirtsleeves, why not take a bath before eating, if nothing better than a 'sponge' with clean soap and water, and then, donning a pair of the cool summer straw sandals now in vogue and a negligee shirt without suspenders, appear before wife and daughters with a smile and appreciative words for the dependent creatures in petticoats?

"Let him try this for a change, and I'll wager he will no longer belong to the ranks of the downtrodden benedicks who would say just what he says but don't dare to speak out.

"You will hardly have room for this long letter in the crowded Corner. If you haven't you might send it to the 'Self-made Man.' A MATRON OF TEXAS."

* *

Statement Meant as Apology?

"I am sure the statement made by 'One of the Meanest of Mere Men,' in a recent number of your 'Familiar Talks,' is meant as an apology. 'I am a self-made man,' he says, prefacing his protest against your paper upon 'The Small, Sweet Courtesies of Life.'

"It is evident that he was a stranger to the softening influence of a good refined woman in his youth, or he could not speak of his wife so disrespectfully—the wife who is, also, the mother of his children.

"Too many men dwell upon the fact that they are 'earning a living for their wives and families,' and seem to wish to impress upon them that it is a sacrifice and a hardship, when, in reality, they are only earning the means of securing for themselves the comforts of a home. I wonder if this 'Mere Man' ever bethinks himself that his wife may be 'as tired as a dog' in supplying him with these comforts?

"Moreover, if a man were not married would he not have to earn a living for himself 'by the sweat of his face?' And wouldn't he be just as tired at night as he is now? The expression, 'To see something that wears petticoats that I have paid for,' shows plainly that he has no feeling of respect for his wife, or he would never subject her to such an insult and flaunt such 'self-made' ideas in public. The fact that he 'pays' seems to be the key to his sentiments.

"If the husband and father do not 'pay' for his wife's and children's keep, who would? The obligation is implied by the relation. He need not plume himself upon the notion that it is a meritorious act in himself.

"What that man needs is to learn the true meaning of 'love' and 'respect' for womanhood. If he will study these and practice what he has learned, what he terms '[illegible]' will become a part of his daily life and cease to be a hardship. C. W. M."

"Savage in Every Man."

"I think it was you who quoted in an article published lately the old adage, 'There is a savage in every man.' One leans strongly toward belief in the truth of the cynical saying after reading the letter of our confessedly 'self-made man.' Let me ask you and other candid judges of human kind if it be true that women are naturally more refined than their brothers, according to the flesh? Do they take polish more readily, and when they have learned the amenities of daily living do they accept them as comforts rather than constraint?

"For example, our self-made man girds at the prejudice which requires him to wear his shoes in the presence of his daughters and to slip a coat over his reeking shirt on a hot day when he sits down to dinner. If his wife were to come down to breakfast without the waist of her gown would the sight of her corset cover and bare shoulders be pleasant to him? If, after cooking his dinner, she seats herself at the head of a well spread board in the loose calico wrapper she has worn in the kitchen, without word of apology, and when spoken to during the meal snaps out a complaint of weariness and drudgery in that she has been 'slaving all day to get his victuals and mend his clothes and keep his house clean,' would he enjoy his food and restful home?

"Suppose she adds to the snap a whine over the fate that makes her a bond servant from one year's end to the other, with no recompense than her board and clothes, while he, who works no harder, pockets all the money and comes and goes as he likes?

Critic Represents Large Class.

"What would be his estimate of her manners and amiability and common decency? How long before he would seek consolation from the society of a virago in the companionship of clubmen and less decent associates?

"'For a' that, and a' that,' dear editor, your critic who scorns the 'small, sweet courtesies of life' represents a larger class than perhaps you would be willing to believe. I bear upon my heart the scar of a stab inflicted by a speech I overheard accidentally when I was a girl of 14. A man of education—and presumably of refinement—handsome, debonair, and, in society, the pink of courtesy, flew into a passion with his wife, who had forgotten to mend a rip in his coat, and asked her, with an oath: 'Who pays for your keep, I'd like to know? You are too — lazy to live!'

"By the time the second oath was out I had fled beyond earshot. Then, being young, and used all my short life to the speech of my father and brothers—gentlemen to the bone, all of them—I hid myself and cried out my [illegible] and distress. I could tell you of other instances that have come to my observation since that black day—less gross, perhaps, but indicative of the innate savagery of which your adage speaks.

"The fault may be in the early training, which has not uprooted the 'wild olive.' I love my three boys fondly, yet I cannot disguise from myself the truth that it is harder to train them into the 'nice customs' that make the difference between breeding and no breeding in society at large than it is to bring up their sisters along like lines. I thank you for making a point of the absolute necessity of what some consider trifles of behavior and speech.

Like Father Like Son.

"May I illustrate by an incident that pleased me more than I can express in words? I went this morning into the library for a book. I thought nobody was there except myself until, after I had hunted over half a dozen shelves, I heard a piping voice from the bay window and espied my two boys, 8 and 10 years old, respectively, who had been curled up on the window seat, each with a book.

"'Please, mother, may we sit down?' was the petition uttered in unison. They had arisen at my entrance and remained standing for the five or six minutes consumed in the search. Of course I gave the desired leave, taking care not to let them think that the act of simple courtesy was unusual or worthy of especial praise.

"One word more. They have seen their father do the like ever since they were born. And he was brought up by a wise and tender mother who loved him too much to let him grow into a boor with advancing manhood. R. B. T."

I have room for but one more letter, although several remain upon my desk—all from women and all telling in effect the same story.

It is but fair that our Big Brother should be heard in defense of his fellow man.

In Defense of Mere Man.

"The disquisition upon what Lawrence Sterne, William Wirt, and Marion Harland concur in naming 'The Small, Sweet Courtesies of Life,' is ingenious and plausible. The fact remains that we ought all of us to be angels in temper and conduct. But we are not! Halos and harps don't go well with twentieth century apparel and pursuits. I am a university man. I come of educated parents and not ungentle blood. I am as happily married as any man I know. I have a son and daughter—approaching manhood and womanhood. Both are inexpressibly dear to me. I have spared neither money nor pains in preparing them for the place they must fill in the world and in society. But if you ask me if we walk upon (figurative) stilts and wear our (metaphorical) Sunday clothes every day in the week in the privacy of our home, I say boldly and without a blush that we do not! Nor do I exact such deference from my boy toward his sister as you would imply is the right of the feminine mortal everywhere and always.

"When I heard him this morning tell her to 'mind her own business and let him alone!' I took it for granted that she had been teasing him and let them fight it out. When my wife and his mother enters the room where we are seated at the chess board we do not upset the men and balk the game by jumping up. Nor do we say 'Excuse us for not rising.'

"I hope I know enough of the rules of polite society to let the ladies pass out of a door before me when I am in company. To my way of thinking it would be absurd and tiresome to be forever on the watch lest I should precede my wife and daughter in leaving or in entering a room. The other day my wife came into my library where I was busy with an important piece of writing.

Apology Not Thought Necessary.

"Did I apologize for not so much as lifting my head when I heard, as the 'Meanest of Mere Men' phrases it, the 'rustle of her petticoats'? Not a bit of it! On the contrary, when she presently stopped in front of me and was evidently waiting for me to speak, I wrote on to the bottom of the page before I looked up and said, 'I wish you would keep out of this room when you know I am busy.'

"Being a sensible woman, she did not go into hysterics, but laid down a note she had brought in for me, on the table, and took herself off without one word. We understand one another!

"Will you and your feminine readers forgive me for saying one thing which may sound like brutal frankness?

"Has it never occurred to you that all this talk of minor manners and [illegible] amenities is a trifle past date in this age? When women shoulder us in business ventures and sit beside us in offices and [illegible] in upon the lecture platform, and [illegible] away our patients if we are doctors [illegible] our clients if we are lawyers, and [illegible] us if we are clergymen, and want to outvote us at the polls—I ask isn't there a touch of the ludicrous in trying to keep up the standards set for us by the Chesterfields and Sternes and Wirts of an age that is dead and gone?

"It Isn't Ebal."

"Said a mighty shrewd woman to me not long ago when we were discussing the [illegible] topic of 'Equal Rights for Women': 'I must be confessed that we want to take you as man to man, but when it comes to your part of the debate, we want you to talk to us as man to woman. As Sam Weller says, "It isn't ebal."'

"'In other words,' I answered, 'you want to eat your cake and have it, too!'

"She didn't pretend to deny it.

"If I were a betting man (which I am not) I should be willing to wager [illegible] that you won't dare print this letter, to give both sides of a question would be unwomanly in the extreme. '[illegible]'"

It is as well that nobody had a dare to take up your bet. I am not only printing your letter, word for word, as it is written, but I refrain from replying to a single [illegible] of the clever missive. If my readers find the entertainment in it that I have drawn from it, I shall be satisfied.

Let me add that I don't pretend to deny that I "won't take a dare," but for other and weightier reasons.

* *

Another Word from a Man.

We have on file sundry other [illegible] responses to the "Self-Made Man" who took issue with us with regard to his manners. Each is so good in its way that I am taking the liberty of forming them into a symposium in place of the usual familiar talk with readers which precedes the Housemothers' Exchange.

A short, sharp word from another masculine member belongs to this corner of the page:

"Won't you say a few strong words [illegible] respecting the gum chewing habit on the part of women and girls in the [illegible]? I counted five school girls over [illegible] years of age and four women over [illegible] in a car today who were working their jaws as vigorously as if they were [illegible] daily bread by the job or [illegible] wager! Look about you when you [illegible] or come up town and see if I [illegible] '[illegible]'"

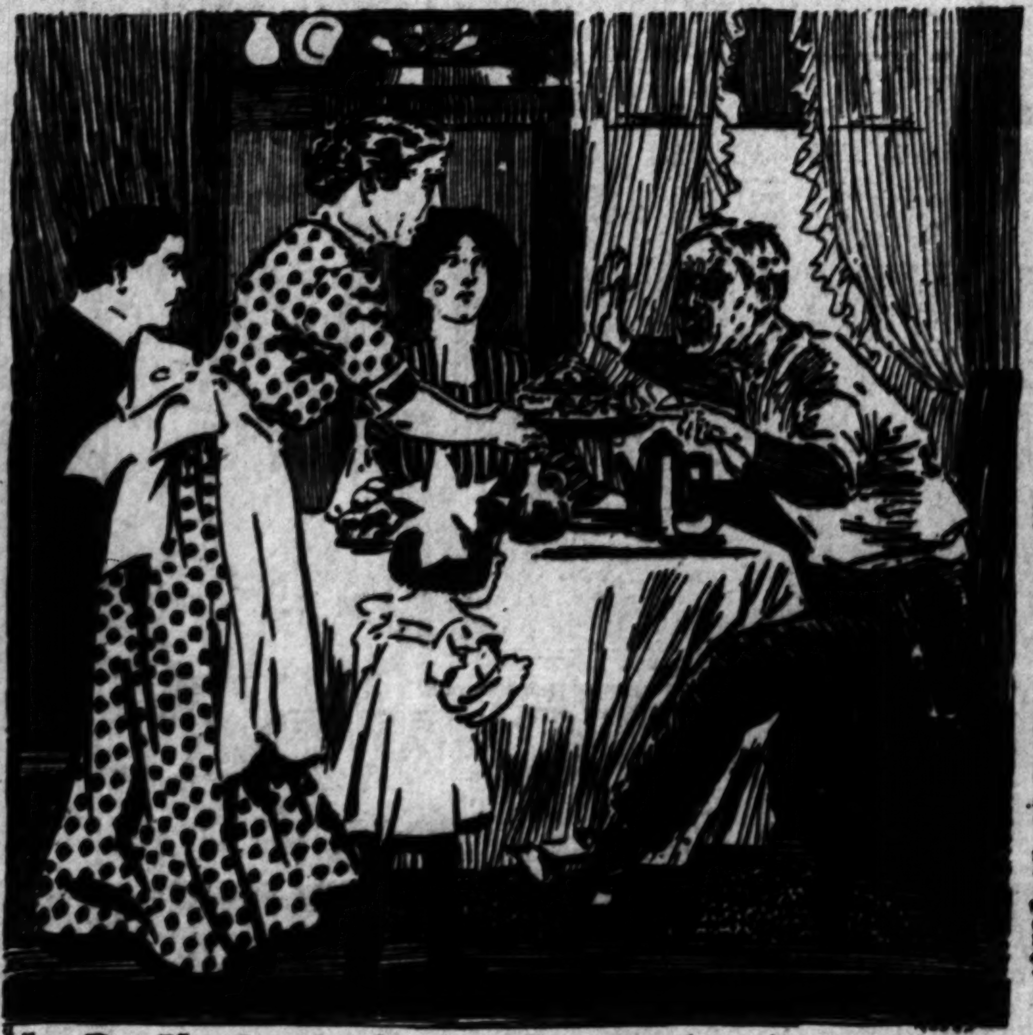
I would deny the tale if I could do so truthfully. The habit is silly and [illegible]. It spoils the shape of a pretty mouth and makes an [illegible] like a cud chewing cow, or [illegible] again, like the sailor's wife [illegible] Macbeth's witch, who—

Munched, and munched, and munched.

The line always comes to my mind [illegible] I see the performance in street car or ferryboat.

I have said elsewhere that gum [illegible] is a nuisance and should be [illegible] law.

Is that "strong and hot" [illegible]



What That Man Needs Is to Learn the True Meaning of 'Love' and 'Respect' for Womanhood.

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING HAND

IMPORTANT NOTICE

BECAUSE of the enormous number of letters sent to the department I must ask contributors to limit their communications to 100 words, except in cases of formulas or recipes which require greater space. I want all my correspondents to have a showing in the Corner, and if my request in this respect is complied with it will be possible to print many more letters.

Attention is called to the fact that Marion Harland cannot receive money for patterns, as she has no connection with any department that sells them. Marion Harland.

"I HAVE seen in your exchange more than one request for a recipe for making 'chili con carne.'

"Having seen some fearful and wonderful recipes for the famous dish in other papers, I am moved, although a 'mere man,' to butt in and give you the genuine method.

"Chile con carne is a San Antonio dish. It is practically unknown in Mexico. San Antonio was originally settled by Canary islanders — Spaniards — who doubtless brought the dish with them. We cook it in perfection here. The farther we go from this city the more difference we find. I am not familiar with the technical terms of cookery, but I can cook chile just as the Mexicans do, and this is their way of preparing it:

"Melt some suet or lard (suet preferred) in a pot or kettle. Cut equal quantities of beef and pork into dice about half an inch square. Dredge with salt and flour and braise in the hot fat until the meat is browned and nearly half done. Meanwhile prepare your chile (this is the large bell pepper, ripe and dry). Shred the pepper, discarding the seeds and stem. Put into a sauce with some cominos (cummin seed), add a little water, and boil until the peppers are tender.

Still Another Method.

"Or—another method—put the shredded peppers in the oven until they are dry enough to grind in a coffee mill. By whatever method it may be prepared, when it is boiled, rub through a sieve and reject the skins. Then mix with the meat "a little too much garlic" and a minced onion, a few black pepper corns, and if you like it particularly hot (as we like it here!) some ground chili 'petines.' Then cover with water and let all simmer until done.

"I am sorry not to be more explicit as to quantities, but I am not up on measurements. I do know that the quantity of chile powder should be about a tablespoonful to the quart. There is prepared chile powder upon the market that will make a good chile con carne, but again, the farther you go from San Antonio the worse this gets, containing cayenne and other peppers. That made here is pure.

"I also notice in the papers recipes for tamales, in which chicken, beef, etc., are used. These are modern innovations creeping even into San Antonio, alas! Let me say that the genuine Mexican tamale is made from hog's head alone. Hog's head, or pig's head, boiled and minced. "GRINGO."

"Gringo," which stands for "Yankee," has contributed an interesting and sprightly letter. We are glad to be informed by one who knows exactly what the much discussed dish is like and just what ingredients go into it. This is indubitable first hand information. It is news to me that chicken or veal is not a necessary base for the mixture. As described here it must be a fiery compound that requires a tanned tongue and throat if one would enjoy it.

Recipe for Graham Gems.

"You sometimes order graham gems in your 'Menus for Family Meals.' May I send in my recipe for them? They are favorites in my household, and this recipe never fails if followed faithfully:

"GRAHAM GEMS—One cupful of granulated sugar; half a teaspoonful of cinnamon and the same of ground nutmeg; one tablespoonful of lard and the same of butter; one cupful of sour milk or buttermilk, in which dissolve half a teaspoonful of soda; one and three-quarters cupfuls of graham flour; one-quarter of a cupful of wheat flour; two teaspoonfuls of baking powder; one egg.

"Mix the spices with the sugar; cream butter, lard, and sugar together, add the egg, then the milk; next, the flour, into which the baking powder has been sifted twice. This should make a rather stiff batter. Bake in gem pans. Top each with a raisin or two. This will make a dozen gems.

"May I add a housewifely suggestion for my sister craftswomen?

"I find a pair of scissors a useful article in my kitchen for cutting up oranges or preparing grapefruit by nipping the pithy particles in the center. This done, one may pull them out readily without disturbing the sections of the fruit. I use the scissors also in cutting smooth the edges of pie crust after fitting it upon the plate. In using a knife for this purpose one is likely to trim the pastry too closely. The scissors are better. MRS. C. H. H."

Your gems, albeit possibly rather sweet for a breakfast cake, are tempting as a luncheon dessert. Eaten with cream cheese and iced milk, they would be delicious on a warm day, or at any other time.

I am glad you bring forward the claim of a stout pair of scissors to a place among kitchen utensils. They do yeoman duty in dozens of ways. They are invaluable in the hands of the cook who has a dainty fancy in the matter of garnishing.

Some Summer Deserts.

For further example, they are used in "pinking" the edges of grape fruit and even melons in preparing the following summer desserts:

FRUIT SALAD SERVED IN GRAPEFRUIT SHELLS.—Halve a grapefruit and pink the edges of each half neatly after taking out the pulp and membranes. Then lay them in iced water while you prepare the filling. Cut the pulp of the grapefruit into small bits, taking care not to tear or bruise it. Cut the inside of a juicy orange in the same way, and a couple of peeled bananas into dice. If you have a few bits of pineapple they will add zest to the salad. Mix all together with a silver fork, crushing as little as may be, and [illegible] fruit with the mixture, having [illegible] from the water and wiped [illegible]. Heap the contents high in the [illegible] bowls; stick three or four [illegible] grapes in the top and leave [illegible] you are ready to serve the [illegible] cannot be too cold. Five minutes [illegible] they go to the table, sift [illegible] over them and pour upon each a [illegible]spoonful of sherry wine.

FRUIT SALAD IN [illegible]—Select ripe melons and [illegible]. Notch the edges prettily, [illegible] skin and flesh. Fill with the [illegible] described and set on the ice [illegible] hours before serving. [illegible] the wine as directed in the [illegible].

Although, for the lack of a [illegible] we call these "a salad," they [illegible] as appetizers in the first [illegible] or dinner, or as a dessert, [illegible]

Two Hints to Housekeepers.

"Please hand over these [illegible] housekeepers:

"When you have a new [illegible] the ravelings. When there [illegible] or a thin place in the [illegible] darn it. The mended place [illegible] imperceptible, whereas [illegible] stitches would show plainly.

"I have two records for [illegible] piano player which some [illegible] them may have. They [illegible] as they are too heavy to [illegible]

The "hints" are [illegible] that will be useful [illegible] as to saving the ravelings [illegible] happy. One who buys [illegible] it laundered carefully [illegible] cool glossiness whenever it [illegible] the table, will hold on to [illegible] holds together. The [illegible] prolong its life.

For the INDUSTRIOUS NEEDLEWOMAN

By ADELAIDE BYRD

A JAPANESE BLOSSOM DESIGN

I REMEMBER the exclamations of delight that were made when a friend of mine unveiled a luncheon set which she had bought in Japan. It was of exquisite linen, and was the familiar cherry-blossom design that the Japanese love and we Americans try to copy. It was on fine linen and worked in dark blue. Cannot you see the blue-and-white china of the dainty luncheon set on it?

I have had designed for you this centerpiece, of which one-third is shown. Next week I shall show two doilies to complete the idea, and I am sure that your Japanese set without the long trip will be just as attractive as the pieces from the Land of the Cherry Blossom.

In tracing the design, you will keep the same center and swing the portion around so that the branches forming the central ring are continuous. The outer edge will help you in this work.

An all-white treatment is always good because it harmonizes with any color scheme in the room or the china. It washes well, too. But the china blue shade of mercerized thread is very fresh and offers a change. Take your choice.

Pad the petals and work in either a straight over-and-over stitch across the petals, giving a flat Japanese effect, or in solid Kensington stitch, working in straight long-and-short stitches from the outer edge of each petal.

Fill in the center with French knots in different sizes. The stray petals that are so gracefully scattered over the design should be worked in stitches similar to those used in the whole blossoms.

Outline the heavy stems with coarse thread and suggest the lines on the branch by outlining. Another effect is good if you use short stem stitches, worked in from the outline. There will not be an entirely solid effect, yet a heavy appearance will be given. The stems showing through the blossoms can be worked in stem stitch to give a good relief.

Pad the edge with darning cotton, using either chain stitches or long irregular ones, and work in flat buttonhole stitches the pretty curves. The straight bands connecting the scallops should be worked the same way. Finish the edge by padding the little ovals and working in a "jewel" effect by using a solid stitch and an outline.

There, the centerpiece is done. It is fascinating, and I am sure that you will welcome the pretty doilies that I am keeping for your next week's work.

ONE-THIRD OF DESIGN

THE CENTERPIECE

The Lace-Trimmed Hat

EVERY girl wants to freshen up the millinery supply some time during the midsummer, and if she does not wish to buy new hats she can very readily take the trimming off the old ones and retrim them so that they will look fresh and new, almost as if they had just been imported from gay Paris.

I am going to tell you about five pretty hats that were seen on the boulevards of that fashion center. All of them can be copied and every one is trimmed either with lace or fine embroidery.

One, a black chip, with a moderately wide brim and a high round crown, has three frills of shadow lace covering the crown, the edge of each frill overlapping that of the one below it so that the line of stitching is completely hidden. The lower frill is sewed on first with the long-and-short stitch, then the middle frill in the same manner, while the top frill is gathered into a very narrow heading, just a semblance of a bud, and slipstitched to the hat's crown about one inch above the turn of the crown's top. A fancy black feather is placed directly in front as the only other trimming. You could freshen up your old black hat in this same way, perhaps using a high-standing bunch of flowers instead of the feather.

Hat No. 2 is a medium-sized one of Milan straw, having a rather low rounding crown and a wide brim that flares away from the face. [illegible] a fine net, has been chosen to adorn this model. A two-inch frill of it is sewed to the very edge of the brim, then the crown and upper brim are covered with it and in the front is an upstanding military looking ornament made of the [illegible]. This is simply a twelve-inch piece of heavy silk-covered milliner's wire covered with the net and having two very full frills sewed to each side of it so that they will stand out from the center wire like the fronds of a real feather. The frills are three inches wide, made of double thicknesses of net cut on the straight and whipped to the wire so that the stitches will be on the under side. This is held in place at the base of the crown with a flat bow of black velvet.

A large hat of black hemp, with the wide brim rolling away from the face and a low round crown, looks extremely well with a ruffle of white maline laid around the upper brim and headed about halfway up the crown with a box-plaited quilling of the same fluffy material. In the center of the quilling is a band of the narrowest black velvet ribbon that can be bought—just a line of black, but giving an effective touch. A little to the left of the front is laid a big pink satin rose, with a spray of foliage fastened to its stem. That's all. It would take such a short time to retrim a hat in this way, would it not?

The fourth model is a broad-brimmed hat of white straw with a rounding crown. Point d'esprit is folded around the crown where it meets on the left side a large many-looped bow of the same white net. A narrow frill (1½ inches wide) is attached to a fine wire and sewed to the edge of the brim. A charming, girlish hat and very little trouble to make.

The last model has a tam-o'-shanter crown of eyelet embroidery and a rolled brim of natural straw. At the joining point is a soft fold of dark blue satin and on the side a wired rabbit's ear of the same held in place with a loose knot. The crown is made by cutting a circle of embroidery several inches wider than the circumference of the crown line and gathering it to that line with a draw-thread. Sew in place and cover with the fold of satin. This would be a fine way to renovate a hat that has become discolored with the sun or dust.

All of them, you see, are simple in trimming and easy to make, and, best of all, they sound the very latest note in the song of summer millinery.

How to Transfer

HERE are suggestions for transferring the pattern before you to any material before working. Perhaps the easiest way is the "window-pane" method. This is successful when the material is thin, like linen, batiste, etc. Pin the sheet of paper and the material together and hold them up against the glass of a window. With a sharp pencil draw on the material the design, which can be easily seen through the goods. If one-half of the design only be given, unpin the paper and turn the other side to the glass. The strong light behind will make it plain.

If you have carbon paper, you should place the sheet between your fabric and the newspaper. This latter is on top. With a sharp pencil go over the outline of the design. The impression will be left in fine lines and will last until washed. This method is successful on heavy material.

The last way is also easy. On wax paper or ordinary tissue paper trace the pattern before you. When the design is completed, turn over the paper and outline the pattern with a heavy lead pencil. Then place the design face on the fabric and redraw the outline, pressing hard with the pencil. The design will be transferred without difficulty.

Surely the way is easy.

Economical Corset Covers

WHAT are you going to do with the lingerie blouses that have gone out of style, or are worn out at the collarband and sleeves so that they cannot be patched up to do service again? Throw them in the ragbag or send them to the rummage sale, I suppose.

Why not make them into corset covers that will serve you for several months to come for everyday wear and save the buying of new ones?

To convert a blouse into a corset cover is an easy matter, and can be accomplished by any girl or woman who can sew. All that is necessary is to rip out the sleeves, cut out the neck in a deep rounding curve, leaving one inch of material over the shoulders, and stitch beading with a lace edge around the top of the cover and the armholes, run ribbon through it, and your corset cover is ready to wear.

If the blouse happens to open at the back, it is best to cut off the buttons or hooks, as the case may be, and close that opening by stitching it firmly on the machine, then making a new opening in the center of the front; but if you wish to make a one-piece slip to wear under lingerie frocks, leave the opening in the back, and make a close-fitting petticoat; join this to the corset cover at the waist line, making the placket of the skirt meet the opening in the cover.

Embroidered beading wears better than that of lace. It is an easy matter to whip a lace edge on to this beading and in that way obtain a lacy effect with the advantage of good wear.

Do not discard your blouses; turn them to account in this way and start a nest-egg in the savings bank with the money saved.

Neckwear From Paris

IF YOU have ever been to Paris, you will understand what I mean when I say, "It came from a little shop." You will also know that whatever "it" is, it will bear the mark of refinement, and also a personal touch that is not found in those accessories that are found in the larger marts of trade; for does not "the little shop" spell exclusiveness?

For this reason, I am sure, you will be interested to know just what is being turned out from them in the way of neckwear.

The collarless gown is the thing for hot-weather wear, and nearly all of them are made with a V-shaped neck, rather shallow, but low enough to reveal that pretty part of the throat just below its base. Collars and jabots are, therefore, made accordingly.

A sailor collar of white linen has a two-inch band of blue-and-white figured linen stitched around its edge, and a bishop jabot of fine white linen has a plain blue border edging it. The jabot is made with a slight V at the neck, with a flat bow of blue velvet ribbon at its base.

Another sailor collar of black satin extends just over the turn of the shoulders, and is there met by long pointed revers of buff-colored satin, trimmed on their outer edge with frills of three-inch-wide ecru lace. These lap over from left to right in the front, outlining the V-shaped neck of the blouse.

A pointed collar, with points in the back and over the shoulders, is made of shadow net. One inch from the edge is inset a band of baby Irish insertion. On each side of the joining point is a point of net bordered with insertion, and that, in turn, is edged with a frill of lace. This pointed jabot effect is exceedingly smart, especially when worn over a plain blouse.

Pale-pink batiste is made up into a square collar, which just turns the shoulders. It has a two-inch border of Irish lace insertion, and is met by two square lapels made in the same way and edged with a narrow frill of the batiste hemstitched on the edge. On the collar proper, where the corners are mitered, there are sewed three small crystal buttons, which give a distinctive and very attractive touch. This collar also forms a shallow V.

Every one of these dainty collars and jabots can be copied at home if you are fond of making these pretty accessories for your toilette. They cost but little if fashioned by your own nimble fingers, but [illegible] "little shops"—ah, that is a different story.

A Rose Sash

ONE of the girls in the graduating class of a fashionable school wore at her class-day exercises a dainty white lingerie frock, and with it one of the most charming sashes I have seen this season.

The entire sash, that part encircling the waist as well as the two long ends that hung nearly to the bottom of the skirt, was made of roses developed from small pieces of ribbon in shades from deepest red to the palest pink.

These were sewed to pink satin ribbon one and a half inches wide, close together, so that their petals touched, and small green leaves made of satin ribbon intermingled with the flower petals.

Any clever girl can fashion for herself one of these pretty sashes, and also a corsage decoration to match, with roses sewed to a piece of ribbon ten inches long, which is to be pinned across the front of the dress. At intervals of an inch there are small roses and buds suspended from the ribbon two and four inches, alternately.

The effect is indeed charming on a white dress or on one of delicate blue or pink shade.

Slips for Table Mats

MANY women prefer to use luncheon cloths and doilies on their dining tables, especially during the hot weather, and with this method of dressing the table it is necessary to have asbestos mats or those of bamboo to protect the table top from damage by hot dishes.

Some women place these mats under the cloth; others lay them on top and trust that the vegetable or meat dish will conceal them from view. But the very careful housekeeper will make slip covers for these mats, embroidered to match the centerpiece or doilies used elsewhere on her table.

They are made of linen, very much on the order of a small pillow slip, cut either square or oval, as the shape of the mat requires, the two pieces of linen joined on the edge with scallops worked with the buttonhole stitch. One end is left open as is a pillow slip, and the edge of the under piece of linen is buttonholed around, as is the top piece.

The very best way to do is to make your own asbestos mats. Buy a sheet of asbestos and cut it into the proper sizes to fit the bases of your serving dishes, either round, square or oval, and bind the edges with passepartout in light gray, matching the color of the asbestos as nearly as possible. Then make the slip covers to fit the mats, and the mats can be slipped into them as easily as you would slip a sheet of paper into an envelope.

They can be changed whenever it is necessary and launder easily. The embroidered design is worked on the upper piece of linen before it is joined to the lower piece.

If you do not have a set of these mats, it will pay you to make several, and thereby save your table top from disfigurement.

THE SMARTEST FASHIONS OF WELL-DRESSED FOLK

TEA AL FRESCO

DEAREST MADGE:

Whether the custom was brought to us from France or Merrie England is a matter of little moment. I love it—the al fresco tea.

Then it is we hear the latest news about our friends and are permitted to admire and discuss the women's clothes.

Ann looked perfectly sweet yesterday in a lovely new gown from Marcell's. I don't wonder Billy is so proud of her.

The foundation of her dress was of finest French nainsook, trimmed about the skirt with broad bands of filet lace, worked with heavy thread. Clusters of fine thread tucks were placed between the insertion bands, which formed deep points on the bottom of the skirt. The bodice was also trimmed with lace, finishing at the neck with a tiny frill. Over it she wore a perfectly delightful coatee of green chiffon cloth, embroidered on the front and around the bottom with garlands of pink roses.

Edna Lewis and her husband were there. Edna wore a pretty little lavender silk frock, made with an eton jacket trimmed with black satin buttons. With it was a hat of black maline shirred on a wire frame and covered with pink maline. A big bow of black was placed directly in front and the hat turned up smartly in the back, where bunch of pink roses was placed.

Alice had a dashing little frock of pink linen, made with a close-fitting skirt, which opened over a panel of white linen striped with black.

The bodice showed a vest of striped linen bordered with tiny pink buttons. A shaped piece of striped linen joined the sleeves with the shoulder seams and also formed pointed cuffs.

A flat collar of Irish lace was worn over the bodice.

My own gown on this occasion was a bargain. It is a robe of embroidered batiste, pale blue in color—and only cost $10.

It is made up with white lace. The bodice, surplice fashion, opened both back and front over a vest of alternate stripes of embroidery and lace insertion. The short open sleeves had undersleeves of the same, and bands of insertion were on the skirt just above the hem. A tunic of embroidery opened on the side and was joined to the bodice with a narrow girdle of black ribbon velvet with a flat bow on the side.

You will agree with me that all are pretty and copyable.

Hastily, ELEANOR.
